G.T.R. EXPRESS.

Canadian Express Co's. Business Bought Out by the Grand Trunk.

MONTREAL, Jan. 13.—The Grand Trunk Railway Company has formally taken over the business of the Canadian Express Company in accordance with Sir Henry Tyler's statement at the last meeting of shareholders and repeated by General Manager Seargeant before the Railway Committee of the Privy Council. The business will now be known as the express department of the Grand Trunk. Superintendent Bryce of Montreal will still have charge of the express business.

The Canadian Express Company was established in Montreal about the time the Grand Trunk came into existence. The stock was held almost altogether by Toronto, Kingston and Montreal capitalists. The company handled all the business on the old Grand Trunk system and when the G.T.R. bought out the Great Western and Northern and North Western roads the Canadian Company in 1888 bought out the American Express Company's business in Western Ontario. During the past few years the express on the G.T.R. has increased to such an extent that the company was able to pay no less than $312,000 per year, or $1000 for every working day, to the railway company for the use of the road. The business done by the company during the year amounts to over a million dollars.

STRANGE WORDS.

A Chicago Judge Sentences a Would-Be Manslayer to One Day in Jail.

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 13.—Judge Anthony sentenced James D. Fancher to serve one day in the county jail yesterday. Fancher tried to kill Dr. Sawyer, his family physician, because the Doctor had taken advantage of his professional relations with Mrs. Fancher to ruin Fancher's home. In sentencing Fancher Judge Anthony said:

"The party who acts as a family physician should be a man in whom we expect honor, rectitude and virtue. He should not take advantage of his position and the confidence bestowed on him to betray the families of those upon whom he attends. I do not believe that it is a part of the duty of a family physician to be eternally calling upon the wives of his patients when the husbands are absent from the city, whether they are sick or well, or constantly sending flowers with the injunction that every petal contains a kiss."

"As a private citizen hearing the evidence in this state I might be led to exclaim: What a pity the defendent was such a poor shot! In some states the fact that criminal intimacy existed between the doctor and the wife of the defendant would have been a complete justification; but the law is different here, and I sentence the defendant to one day in jail."

A Norfolk Village Threatened.

DELHI, Ont., Jan. 12, 10.45 p.m.—Fire is now raging in the frame building of James Kemp and occupied by A. Laur as a tinshop. Indications are that several buildings will be consumed on either side will be consumed, and it may probably cross the street if an engine cannot soon be procured.

MANY FATALITIES.

Frightful Wreck on the Lehigh Valley—A Flagman and a Brakeman Making His First Trip Perish.

CASKILL, N.Y., Jan. 12.—A rear end collision between two Lehigh Valley freight trains occurred in the Erie yard here at 5 o'clock this morning. Flagman McCarthy of Buffalo and a brakeman named Woodruff, who was making his first trip, were in the caboose, and were instantly killed. Ten cars were wrecked, five of which, oil laden, caught fire, and were entirely consumed, burning the bodies of the dead men.

GRAVES SENTENCED.

He Protests His Innocence, But is Condemned to Hang Next Month.

DENVER, Col., Jan. 12.—Dr. Graves' motion for arrest of judgment was denied by Judge Rising upon the opening of court to-day, and the doctor was sentenced to be hanged during the fortnight beginning Jan. 31.

The accussed, his gray hair straggling over his forehead, arose and said:

"Your honor, I never, in any way or in any manner, thought or had anything to do with the death of Mrs. Barnaby."

The doctor was deadly pale while the sentence was being pronounced.

The Ghost Dance.

GUTHRIE, O.T., Jan. 12.—Four ghost dances are now in progress among the Indians of this territory. None of the dancers express any hostility toward the whites. On the Wichita reservation several hundred are dancing day and night. In the Cherokee strip the Otoes say that on New Year's Eve, while they were holding their annual dance and feast, a mighty voice of thunder was heard ordering them to prepare for the coming of the Messiah and they have been dancing ever since. Many have died from exposure to the severity of the weather. There will not be any serious trouble unless the Government attempts to stop them.

THE HANCOCK TRIAL.

OPENING OF THE DEFENCE IN THE CELEBRATED CASE.

The Case will Go to the Jury To-day—Important Medical Testimony—The Analyist's Evidence—Was the Hole in the Skull Caused by a Bullet?

TORONTO, Jan. 12.—The trial of Edward Handcock was resumed at the Assize Court yesterday morning. The monotony of the evidence on the day before had caused the interest taken in the case to slacken, and it was not till the medical evidence for the defence was being taken that the court room again became crowded.

The first witness sworn was Dr. Johnston, coroner. He described what he considered the characteristics of a gunshot wound in a skull. In his opinion this wound could not possibly have been caused by a bullet.

Mrs. James Dollery told her story, the only interesting feature of which was that she told Handcock that if he was innocent it would not hurt him if he was hanged.

The Detective's Evidence.

Government Detective Greer testified that he began to investigate the case about a week after the tragedy. The prisoner advanced the trap door theory. This seemed so incredible as to appear ludicrous. He did not think that even Handcock believed it. He very willingly admitted that the whole Handcock family treated him very kindly and did all in their power to aid him in investigating the case.

Just at this point His Lordship objected to anyone in the court room being allowed to handle the skull of the murdered girl, and directed Mr. Clute to take greater care of it.

The detective, continuing, said he had examined the oat field near by and had failed to find any place where anyone could have been secreted.

The only other witness for the Crown whose evidence was of any special account was William Jones, a neighbor, who had been passing the store on the Monday prior to the murder and had "heard a row."

In cross-examination he said that he heard Handcock shout to his daughter, "You're all trying to boss me and I'm not going to try to please you any longer."

It was subsequently shown that the prisoner was deaf and always loud. Every other witness for the Crown spoke of the kind and affectionate feelings displayed between the father and daughter.

Opening the Defence.

After the evidence for the Crown was all in, Mr. Murdock requested His Lordship not to let the case go to the jury on the ground that, though it was plain that Sophie Handcock came to her death by foul play, there was no evidence to show that the prisoner did the deed and no motive had been assigned for the terrible deed.

The Judge promised to consider and requested Mr. Murdock to proceed with the defence.

The first witness was Lillie Wilcox, a married daughter of the prisoner, who swore that Sophie had been the one to manage the store. She always carried the money in her pocket. On the afternoon of the tragedy she and her mother looked all over the house for the purse, but it has never been found to this day. A handkerchief which the deceased always carried had also disappeared. The witness also looked for a bullet but could not find any. She swore positively that there was no clay in the pools of blood, for she examined them closely before they were cleared up. The prisoner had always been a good father and considered Sophie his pet daughter. The witness had never seen her father angry.

The Analyst's Evidence.

Miss Edith Curzon, B.A., assistant analyst of Dr. Ellis at the School of Practical Science, tested the skull from a scientific standpoint, and testified that the metal on the edge of the hole in the skull was lead. She did not test the wood, as the paint on it probably contained lead and would, of course, give the same reaction. A small piece of lead fell from the detective's hand just after he gave her the fragments of wood.

Dr. Teskey was the first of the witnesses to give medical evidence for the defence. He was present at the grave when the body was exhumed. As soon as he saw the skull he said the aperture was caused by a gun shot and he was of the same opinion still. He also noticed the particles of lead on the edge of the hole in the skull on both the inside and outside bevel. He handed the skull to Dr. Harrington and he concurred in the opinion. "No force except an explosive force could shatter the skull like that."

Continuing the doctor said: "After examining the wound I concluded we would find where the bullet had glanced and struck, and mentioned that it must have glanced up. We afterwards found it thus."

Another point in which the injury tallied with a gunshot wound was that the greatest tearing of the scalp had taken place after the bullet had been flattened. He was not an expert in oral surgery, but his examination of the ears of the prisoner showed him that the drum of one ear was thicker than that of the other. This would make the hearing of one more distinct than the other and the result would be that the prisoner would be unable to locate the direction from which any sound came. Enough of the bullet had been pared off to go into the wound and become impacted on the inner edge of the skull, without the bullet itself going inside. The force of a bullet is expansile, that is, it expands in every direction. A skull is brittle like glass and fractures in every direction when affected by an expansile force.

When asked to cite another instance where a bullet had caused such a fracture, he said there were probably not two wounds exactly alike in the whole military service.

More Medical Testimony.

Dr. W. H. B. Aikins concurred fully in the opinion of Dr. Teskey. He, however, could not explain the reason why a bullet striking as this had would cause such a wound.

His Lordship's questions enabled the witness to explain that the flattening and expansion of the bullet after striking the skull had made it act like a wedge. This would account for the fractures running in every direction.

This is the last of the medical evidence—and it is the medical evidence on which the case turns—and the trial will in all probability be closed to-day.

Fitzsimmons Captured.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 12.—Richard Hamilton, alias Harrington, alias McCarty, who made an unsuccessful attempt to walk out of jail at St. Joseph, Mo., with a number of visitors on Thursday, is believed by Sheriff Spratt to be the fugitive Frederick C. Fitzsimmons of Brockville, Ont., wanted in Pittsburg for the murder of Detective Gilkinson.

Clarence Must Feel Bad.

DUBLIN, Jan. 12.—At a meeting of the corporation of Dublin yesterday the motion to adopt an address of congratulation upon the approaching marriage of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale and Princess Victoria Mary of Teck was defeated by 37 to 8.

THE POLITICAL SLATE.

MR. LAURIER DELIVERS AN ADDRESS AT KINGSTON.

Meeting of the Mercier Commission—A Report That Mr. J. C. Patterson is to Be Made Postmaster-General—Candidates Nominated for the Bye-Elections.

KINGSTON, Jan. 13.—Hon. Mr. Laurier was given a wonderful reception here to-night. The City Hall was taxed to its utmost capacity and hundreds could not gain admission. The leader of the Opposition was given an address and for reply he spoke for an hour, chiefly on the subject of unrestricted reciprocity. He declared that the National Policy had depleted Canada. The only salvation was a change. He favored unlimited reciprocity as the most feasible.

Sir Richard Cartwright gave a review of the benefits which he claimed would accrue to Canada, to Ontario and to Kingston from reciprocal trade, and promised to soon pay his respects to Sir John Thompson and "that young dog" Hon. C. H. Tupper before a Kingston audience at an early date. The meeting was very enthusiastic.

Chapleau Seriously Ill.

OTTAWA, Jan. 13.—J. C. Patterson, ex-M.P. for Essex, arrived here this morning and had a conference with Premier Abbott. It was pretty well understood in the leading Conservative circles to-night that he is to enter the cabinet as Postmaster-General. He will have to be raised to the Senate or a seat found for him in the Commons.

MONTREAL, Jan. 12.—An Ottawa despatch to The Witness says: Premier Abbott has been prevailed on by the Quebec local Conservatives to do without Mr. Meredith for the present in order to deprive their opponents of an argument in the Provincial elections. It is believed, however, that Mr. Patterson, who is president of the Ontario Conservative Union, and who has been here for several weeks, has no objection to the use of his name until after March, when he will withdraw for Mr. Meredith.

No mention is made by Mr. Abbott of Mr. Chapleau. It is freely said that Mr. Chapleau can do nothing but resign.

OTTAWA, Jan. 13.—Mr. Chapleau is again seriously ill. He is confined to his bed by a renewal of the influenza and pneumonia from which he has been suffering since Christmas and is under the constant care of Dr. Church. Although forbidden to see any visitors, all of whom are refused access to the house, Mr. Chapleau still transacts business and spends the greater part of the morning dictating to his secretary.

Chapleau Wants to Resign.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 13.—It is reported that Mr. Chapleau has again requested Premier Abbott to accept his resignation. An intimate friend of the Secretary of State told me this morning that Chapleau will resign from the Ministry and sit as an independent member in Parliament. In this way, it is claimed, he will hold the balance of power.

The New Ministers Sworn In.

OTTAWA, Jan. 13.—Hon. J. A. Ouimet and Hon. J. Haggart were sworn in for their new positions this afternoon.

East Hastings.

BELLEVILLE, Jan. 13.—Judges Osler and Burton sat at the court house to-day to decide upon an application for postponement of trial of the petition against the return of Mr. S. B. Burdett, Q.C., as M.P. for East Hastings. Mr. C. E. Lyons made the application for the respondent on the ground of his serious illness and the absence from the country of three witnesses. Mr. W. B. Northrup, for the petitioner, concurred, saying he was not prepared to go on with the other charges. After some discussion Judge Burton suggested the dismissal of the petition without costs, which suggestion was by agreement acted upon.

William Smith Will Try it Again.

WHITBY, Ont., Jan. 13.—Liberal-Conservatives met here to-day and nominated William Smith, who was defeated last March by James I. Davidson, for the vacancy for South Ontario in the House of Commons through the unseating of the last named gentleman.

Henderson For Halton.

MILTON, Jan. 13.—The Conservatives of Halton in convention to-day were unanimous in favor of Mr. D. Henderson of Acton, their late member, as their candidate in the election to be held on the 29th inst.

Dr. Spohn Re-Nominated.

ORILLIA, Jan. 1 .—At the Reform mass meeting held here to-day Dr. Spohn of Penetanguishene was chosen to contest the East Simcoe bye-election.

The Writ For Laval.

OTTAWA, Jan. 13.—The writ for Laval rendered vacant by Hon. J. A. Ouimet's acceptance of office was issued this afternoon.

Halifax Nominees.

HALIFAX, Jan. 13.—Hon. G. Jones and Dr. E. Farrell, the defeated candidates in the late election, have been nominated by the Liberals to contest Halifax for the vacant seats in the House of Commons.

THE QUEBEC COMMISSION.

Little Business Transacted at the First Day's Session, However.

QUEBEC, Jan. 13.—The Royal Commission, consisting of Judge Mathieu (president) and Messrs. D. Macmaster, Q.C., and Damase Masson, held its first sitting in the Court of Queen's Bench Hall in the Court House this morning. Mr. Edmund Lortie acted as secretary and Messrs. Belleau, Q.C., and Stuart, Q.C., were present, also Attorney-General Casgrain. Beyond reading the proclamation appointing the commission and the oaths of office of the commissioners nothing was done.

After the recital of the charges as contained in the Royal proclamation Mr. Justice Mathieu called upon those mentioned therein to attend on Monday next, to which day the commission adjourned.

QUEBEC, Jan. 13.—The Daily Telegraph says: "There was a strong rumor current in political circles yesterday that Judge Jette's report on the Baie des Chaleurs affair was sent to the Lieutenant-Governor and the De Boucherville ministers two days ago, and it completely exonerates Mr. Mercier and his colleagues, and that the president of the commission has notified the Government that unless it is made public within four days Mr. Mercier will be furnished directly with a copy

Daily Examiner.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 13, 1892.

The election in Richelieu on Monday, where Sir Hector Langevin was elected by 308 majority at the last election, resulted in the return of Mr. Bruneau, the Liberal candidate by a majority of 104. This result is as a thunderbolt to the Dominion government who see signs of trouble ahead in the coming by-elections. The result is all the more surprising when it is known that a by-election permits the government to concentrate its peculiar influences upon the constituency where the contest is being waged. There will be a pretty brisk political contest the remainder of this month. Writs have been issued for elections in eight constituencies: Kingston, Prince Edward, Leanox, East Simcoe, East Middlesex, Lincoln, Peel and Halton. Polling will take place on the 28th. If the Liberals enter into the contest with vigour the result of these elections will have a beneficial effect on the political situation.

Otonabee.

Celebration of a Silver Wedding Ceremony

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Circumstances have prevented sending sooner report of the silver wedding of Mr. and Mrs. J. Graham Weir, Keene Road, Otonabee, which took place at their residence on January 1st—the old Weir Homestead which has been the home of the Weir family since 1823, when Mr. J. G. Weir's father, Mr. Robert Weir, cut the first stick of timber felled on the ancestral farm. Elaborate preparations had been made for the occasion. The avenue of stately Lombardy poplars leading from the highway to the house was hung with gorgeous Chinese lanterns, which produced a very pretty effect. Within, the house was in festive garb, and early in the evening the guests came thronging in, till there were over one hundred and twenty five of Mr. and Mrs. Weir's neighbours, relatives and friends. Among the guests were Mr. and Mr. Geo. Taylor, the latter the groomsman, and Mrs. Stenton, bridesmaid at the original wedding twenty five years ago. There was amusement for all classes, old and young, but it is needless to say that dancing was the favourite of the latter, though when the fun became lively, people that were not so young as they used to be, caught the infection and joined in the giddy mazes of the dance. At twelve o'clock a sumptuous and substantial supper, provided by Mrs. Weir, was enjoyed by the guests. After that, "on went the dance" and joy was unconfined all through the night and up to eight o'clock in the morning; in fact the guests remained to—a literal wedding—breakfast.

HEREDITARY WEAKNESS

Or Unsoundness in Horses Elucidated.

The Peterborough Session of the Farmers' Institute—Well Attended—Much Interest Manifested—Planting and Pruning Trees Discussed—The Dairy Cow Spoken of—The Institute Closed by a Vote of Thanks.

THE AFTERNOON SESSION

was opened at 1.30 p.m., President Kennedy in the chair.

Professor Grenside concluded his talk about "Horses and Horse Stables," after which Mr. William McMillan, Manitoba Emigration Commissioner, laid before the meeting the claims of Manitoba and the North-West as a field for emigration.

D. W. BEADLE, Esq., gave an address on "Planting and Pruning Apples." He said that the soil should be well drained, but the texture of the soil was not of such primary importance. They must be planted in locations where they will be protected from the late spring frosts. The north side of the slope of a hill was the most favourable position. If they were planted on the south side of a slope they were much more exposed to injury from the sun. About thirty feet apart each way was the best distance to plant the trees. If planted too close the sun had not a free access to the ground between the trees, thus proving injurious. In pruning, this should be done when the trees are young and small, so as to avoid the cutting off of large limbs at the age of three years or older. Removing large limbs was most injurious to the tree, but if it was necessary to do this the place should be COVERED WITH WAX OR SHELLAC.

The form of pruning should be so as to allow a free play of sun and air through the limbs of the tree. Some great mistakes were often made on this point. The best time to prune was in the spring, about March, before the sap was up. This was much more preferable to pruning in the fall. Farmers should not wait until the sap had become circulated through the tree.

In answer to questions he said: If pruned when the leaves come out the whole side of the tree is apt to become black. There were ways of protecting trees from being injured by the sun in the spring by wrapping over with tar paper and other things.

Mr. E. B. EDWARDS spoke of the late planting of fruit trees, and asked if this were not injurious. He had known trees planted as late as the 24th of May.

Mr. BEADLE said that the earlier a tree was planted the better condition the soil would be in. He also referred to the "puddling" of fruit trees. It was advantageous when they had almost finished planting the trees. Water might be poured in, after which the remainder of the soil could be filled in. The soil must be kept well cultivated and well moistened.

In answer to Mr. C. Quinn, the speaker said it was well to have the soil well warmed, and referred to the state of trees as usually received from nurserymen, and said that the tops might be cut back to a moderate extent, but not too much.

In answer to Mr. E. B. Edwards, he said that there were varieties that did not ripen their wood as well on this side of Lake Ontario as on the other, owing to the short season here. However, on the other hand their were varieties that would grow better here than on the other side. Mr. Beadle then spoke about the varieties of apples most suitable for growing in this neighborhood, and pursued the same line as he did in Lakefield on the previous day, recommending the SAME VARIETIES OF FRUIT.

In reply to Mr. Edwards, he said as a rule too many fall or early apples were grown for the home market, and they would not keep long enough for export. Canning or drying was the best use that could be made of them. In speaking of exporting apples, he said that if a farmer had a number of barrels of apples he would receive more if they were all of one kind, than if they were of different kinds. A great fault with Canadian farmers was growing too many kinds of apples.

Mr. E. B. EDWARDS at the close of Mr. Beadle's address, spoke of the objects and aim of the new fruit growers association of this district. He also made an announcement respecting the meeting which will be held on the 2nd of February. The fee he said was $1 per year, and spoke of the advantages derived from membership.

Mr. BEADLE in answer to another question gave the following as a recipe for the insect aphis, that attacked fruit trees; 1 quart soft soap must be dissolved in 2 quarts of hot water. Let these be boiled together, until thoroughly dissolved, while hot add to this mixture 1 pint kerosene. This should be well worked with a force pump until the oil has become thoroughly mixed with the solution. This emulsion of kerosene must be sprayed all over the trees and it would be found to kill the insect.

THE DAIRY COW

was the subject dealt with next by Mr. T. LINFIELD, B. S. A. This was reported in full in the EXAMINER'S account of the Norwood meeting.

In answer to questions MR. LINFIELD and Professor GRENSIDE both said that a good way to prevent cows from bolting their food, such as roots, etc., was to mix with it a little cut hay or straw.

During the general discussion it appeared to be the opinion of nearly all the farmers present, that it was injurious to turn cows out in the day time when the farmer could not look after them himself. A wooden stable was much better than a stone one. As a rule, stone stables were too damp and ill-ventilated.

PROFESSOR GRENSIDE next gave an address on "The hereditary unsoundness of horses." Unsoundness was one of the causes of depreciation in the value of horses. The diseases causing unsoundness, that were due to heredity were here referred to briefly. One of the causes of hereditary unsoundness were the exciting causes, such a sudden strain or knock. The most important however

WERE PREDISPOSING CAUSES.

These were, first, pure heredity. If the animal is unsound the unsoundness will be transmitted to some or other of its progeny. The next cause was defective formation. This was when a horse had mechanical weakness. The hocks and pastern, when not of a proper size and shape were symptoms of this. The predisposition in some cases was caused by this defective formation or deformity. Poor quality was another cause of this. Animals with poor bone or skin of a coarse, rough nature were affected by this. Defective quality was the next cause and was briefly treated upon. The strictly hereditary diseases were spavin, ringbone and navicular or bone diseases. Splint was not included in this list, perhaps because it was not a very serious disease. When splints were well defined it was not so serious as when the splints were not well shown, but spread about. Curve was, in the speaker's opinion, a hereditary disease, which was due to the predisposing cause of a defective formation. Other bone diseases were treated upon, after which he said that other hereditary diseases were

ROARING, CATARACT AND SIDEBONES.

When a man was selecting horses for breeding he should be well posted in formation. Horses that presented any hereditary unsoundness should not be allowed to take prizes in shows. Roaring was in conclusion briefly touched upon in its various symptoms, such as whistling and wheezing.

At the conclusion of the address Mr. E. B. Edwards moved and Mr. Thos. E. Bell seconded, That this meeting place on record its appreciation of the efforts made by the Dominion and Provincial Governments, to improve the condition of farming in the country, and further that we heartily thank Professor Grenside, and Mr. T. Linfield, B. S.A., of the Agricultural College, and D. W. Beadle, Esq., of Toronto, for their kind, useful and practical addresses. This was carried and Professor Grenside briefly acknowledged the vote.

The meeting then adjourned.

WHY COUGH,

WHEN a few doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral will relieve you? Try it. Keep it in the house. You are liable to have a cough at any time, and no other remedy is so effective as this world-renowned preparation. No household, with young children, should be without it. Scores of lives are saved every year by its timely use

Amanda B. Jenner, Northampton, Mass., writes: "Common gratitude impels me to acknowledge the great benefits I have derived for my children from the use of Ayer's most excellent Cherry Pectoral. I had lost two dear children from croup and consumption, and had the greatest fear of losing my only remaining daughter and son, as they were delicate. Happily, I find that by giving them Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, on the first symptoms of throat or lung trouble, they are relieved from danger, and are becoming robust, healthy children."

"In the winter of 1885 I took a bad cold which, in spite of every known remedy, grew worse, so that the family physician considered me incurable, supposing me to be in consumption. As a last resort I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and, in a short time, the cure was complete. Since then I have never been without this medicine. I am fifty years of age, weigh over 180 pounds, and attribute my good health to the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral."—G. W. Youker, Salem, N. J.

"Last winter I contracted a severe cold, which by repeated exposure, became quite obstinate. I was much troubled with hoarseness and bronchial irritation. After trying various medicines, without relief, I at last purchased a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. On taking this medicine, my cough ceased almost immediately, and I have been well ever since."—Rev. Thos. B. Russell, Secretary Holston Conference and P. E. of the Greenville District, M. E. C., Jonesboro, Tenn.

FUR TRADE.

The only one manufacturing entirely their whole stock in town and having a record of over thirty years standing without shaking.

We never boast of selling goods at and below cost price, except when winter is drawing to a close; but we can assert that we are able to sell at and below prices offered by wholesale houses to the trade, and at the same time making up superior goods. Our stock this season is the largest we ever set offered for inspection, and comprise all the latest styles, from the finest to the lowest grades of Ladies', Gentlemen's, and Children's Fur Goods.

The Whitney Mockridge Concert.

In Bradburn's Opera House, Jan. 20th. Reserve this date, for this concert will be the finest of the season. Read the press notices:—

The Springfield Republican: Mr. Whitney Mockridge has a wonderful tenor voice and sings with a depth of feeling and expression that is rarely heard.

The Galveston Tribune: Well merited were the thunders of applause which greeted Mrs. Mayo Rhodes, (soprano) after the rendition of Mendelssohn's concert aria. She is an artist and the public acknowledged it.

The Detroit Tribune: Arthur Beresford, (basso), displayed wonderful power and vocalism in "Why do the Nations," and "The Trumpet Shall Sound."

The Boston Gazette: Belle Botsford (violinist) was the hit of the concert; her tone is deliciously pure and limpid, her style replete with delicacy and a sort of dainty dash which is inexpressibly fascinating. Plan open in a day or two at the Peterborough Bookstore. 1d

The Jubilee Singers.

A Musical Treat Provided at the Opera House—Good Choruses—Excellent Quartettes.

Last evening the opera house was well filled with persons desirous of hearing Loudin's Original Fisk Jubilee Singers. It is some eight years since the troupe were formerly in town, having in the meantime sung their way around the world. They have gained a wide reputation for the beauty of their singing, which was worthily upheld last evening.

The programme opened with the chorus "Steal Away to Jesus," and the chant, "The Lord's Prayer." These were followed by "The Crucifixion," and "The old Ark's a Movering," which latter was deservedly encored. Mr. F. J. Loudin, the manager, then sang in fine voice "One Hundred Fathoms Deep." This was encored, and in reply he gave in good style "The Laughing Song." This fairly brought down the house. The succeeding numbers were the choruses "Wide River" and "I'm a Rolling," and a female quartette "Greeting the Spring." In response to the inevitable encore they gave "When Twilight gathers o'er the Plain," in beautiful voice, the shading and expression being particularly fine. During the evening Manager Loudin gave a brief resume of the troupe's tour around the world, and the places they touched at, which was most interesting. The second part of the programme opened with a descriptive glee, "Jingle Bells," being a musical picture of a sleigh ride. This was beautifully rendered and enthusiastically encored. The following numbers were the choruses—"Reign, Mases Jesus, Reign," "In the River of Jordan," and "My Lord, What a Mourning." The rendition of these was splendid, and a male quartette which was then given, entitled "Oh, Give me Music," was very good, the tenor parts in particular being well sustained. This excellent programme concluded with the choruses "Hard Trials," and "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," and the "Benediction," all of which were sung with much feeling by the troupe. Every one who was present could not feel but well satisfied with the entertainment provided.

In Pious Memory

Of John and Hannah Walker, Otonabee.

The pioneer citizens of Canada are fast disappearing, and in a very few years few of the sturdy veterans who hewed smiling farms from the virgin forests and made the howling wilderness to blossom as the rose, will be found living; and it is a pleasure to speak good words of those who have bravely borne the burden and heat of the day. Two years ago Mr. John Walker, a native of England, was called away to rest, and last spring Hannah, his wife, joined him in the land of the blest. Mr. Walker was of the ripe age of four score years, and Mrs. Walker was close to the three score years and ten. Both came to this country young, and both bore with patience and persevering toil the trials and hardships incident to the lives of early settlers in a new country, and won honoured names among their neighbors and left behind a family of five boys and three girls, who hold the memory of their parents in loving tenderness. Their son William is worthy of the divine blessing promised to those who honour their father and mother. For eighteen years his aged parents lived with him and had the loving care and tender treatment which is the small share of the children's re-payment to their parents for the solicitude and care that guarded the children's tender years. William shared with his aged parents, their joys, their sorrows. Shared all he had with them, and when death released them from the love of earth, to enjoy the full love of a Saviour in heaven, he reverently laid their bodies in the graveyard at Westwood, to await the sounding of the last trump, when the dead shall rise, and parents and children be re-united, to part no more forever. But death's grim garner, the grave yard, holds not only the wrinkled and bowed forms of the old but a heap of a generation, and their grandchild James, the son of Mr. P. G. Walker, in the full bloom of youth cut down by the keen-edged sickle of death, lies beside those who have gone before.—COM.

At the conclusion of the installation ceremonies the brethren adjourned to the Graham House, where an excellent repast was enjoyed by the Oddfellows.

PETERBOROUGH LODGE, A.O.U.W., NO. 135.

The ceremony of installing the officers of the above lodge was conducted last evening in their lodge room. Bro. W. H. Smith, D. D. G. M., of Colborne, Ont., installed the officers in a "workman-like" and efficient manner. The ceremony was gone through with earnestness and the brethren were much impressed with Bro. Smith's reading of the ritual. After the installation the new officers and members adjourned to Mr. H. Long's restaurant, where an excellent oyster supper had been provided by the new Master Workman, the remainder of the evening being spent in social intercourse. The following are the officers installed:—

Bro Geo Hutchinson	J P M
" D W Dumble	M W
" J Mulholland	F
" T Pilkey	O

It may be mentioned here that the Ontario jurisdiction stands fourth on the list of Grand Lodges on the continent. This speaks well for the position of the order in this province.

PETERBOROUGH DISTRICT LODGE I. O. A. B. A.

The half yearly district meeting of the above was held in the lodge room last evening, A large number of members and visitors were in attendance, and an enjoyable meeting was held. Speeches were made by County Chaplain Kelly, of Napanee, P D.M. John G. Weir, M. Jamieson, Grand Secretary of the P. A. P. B., and Bro. Robt. Weir, Grand Master, Royal Black Knights of Ireland.

Votes of thanks were passed to Bro. W. J. Green, District Secretary and Bro. Sawyers, to which they briefly replied.

The election of officers was then proceeded with and resulted as follows:—

District Master	Bro. Davidson	Smith
D. D Master	"	Saunders Town
D. Chaplain	"	Sawyers "
D F Sec	"	Agnew "
D. R. Sec (re elected)	"	Green "
D. D. of C	"	J. Montgomery "
D. Lecturer	"	Campbell "
D. Treasurer	"	Curtis Ashburnham

At the conclusion of the election, refreshments were provided, and partaken of after which the lodge closed.

Evangelistic Meetings.

The afternoon meeting held yesterday at three p m. in St. Andrew's church was very successful, both in point of numbers and interest. The Rev. Mr. Meikle took for his subject "Leaven." He gave a powerful address on the leaven of the Pharisees, Sadducees, Herodians and Galatians, applying it all with telling effect to the modern Christian.

In the evening, in the same place, a large number again assembled for worship. It was pleasing to see so many of the ministers of the town upon the platform taking part in these union meetings. The evangelist chose for his subject "Love." With wonderful effect did he refer to the love of Father, Son and Holy Spirit for the sinner. He then desired to know if the Christians present possessed this love and burden for souls. He gave a number of tests how we might know. The appeals, both to the professing Christians and unregenerate were powerful, many standing up as being anxious about their soul's salvation, and about fifty Christians remained after the meeting was dismissed for a season of prayer together for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit. The interest in the meetings is rapidly increasing daily, and it is quite manifest that yet our churches will prove inadequate. Thursday afternoon at 3 p. m. there will be another Bible reading.—COM.

Y. M. C. A. Board Meeting.

The Board of the Y.M.C.A. met last night at the residence of Mr. G. J. Early. The President, Mr. Early, occupied the chair, and reports of the different committees were received, showing the work to be in a prosperous and flourishing condition. The treasurer presented his report of the year's work, which showed a balance on the right side of the ledger. The new Rooms were reported as being well patronized by the young men, and the physical department and baths were in working order. Sergt.-Major Randle will commence his gymnastic training classes next Tuesday. Votes of thanks were passed to Rev. E Starr for giving the annual address, and to the pastor and managers of St. Andrew's church for the use of that edifice.

The Ladies' Auxiliary were also thanked for the excellent and efficient way in which they had conducted the New Year's "At Home," in the rooms.

The meetings of Mrs. Baeyertz have been apparently much blessed and the board expressed their regret at her having been laid aside by illness.

The association will do all they can to make the meetings of Mr. William Meikle a success.

The annual meeting of the Y.M.C.A. for the election of officers, etc., will be held on Friday, Jan. 22nd. A large attendance is expected.

At the conclusion of the programme, whose rendition reflected the highest credit upon the pupils and their instructors, was made. The silver medal presented for competition by Mr. John McKee, was won by Miss Mary Smith. His Lordship, who in Mr. McKee's absence presented the medal, warmly commended the winner, and gave her praise for the industry and perseverance her proficiency represented. The other silver medal, offered by Mr. T. Dunn, was won by Miss Maggie Butler. Mr. Dunn in presenting the medal, made a neat little speech in which he spoke of the honour of being permitted to offer it and said it gave him all the more pleasure in giving it because he saw that the medal was worthily won. Miss Smith made a nice little address of thanks on behalf of the medalists. The medals, beautiful pieces of workmanship, were supplied by Mr. W. A. Sanderson.

THE PRESENTATION OF MEDALS

The orchestra, composed of Miss Louise Yokome, 1st violin, Mr. Butcher flute, Mr. Walton, clarinet, Mr. Sanderson, cornet, Mr. Loch, contra bass and Mr. Foster, trombone, who offered their services gratuitously, added greatly to the enjoyment of the evening, and the violin and flute obligatos greatly helped the vocal numbers.

The grand finale was the Hercules Duet, performed splendidly by eight young ladies, of whom seven were silver medallists.

His Lordship closed the pleasant proceedings by a few remarks, in which he warmly commended the pupils, and spoke words of praise of the excellence of the musical instruction imparted.

A noticeable feature of the programme was the brilliant playing of several lengthy and difficult compositions entirely from memory, something that a few years ago would have been considered musical heresy.

Court Lakefield, No. 43, C.O.F., meet on Thursday Evening in their court.

The new council meet next Monday evening in the town hall.

Our village constable is down with la grippe and bronchitis.

Mrs. Jas. Horner, of Medicine Hat, N.W.T., a former resident of the village is here at present on a visit.

Mrs. Trail who is so well known in literary circles celebrated her 90th birthday last Saturday.

Division Court was held last Tuesday in the town hall by Judge Ketchem, of Cobourg, in the absence of Judge Weller. It was the longest on record in the village, occupying over ten hours.

Mr. W. A. Eastland and his bride, a Miss Webster, of Montreal, passed north to Apsley last Friday. "Billy's" sudden take off was a surprise to his many friends, the fair ones especially, and the band was disgusted, as they would like to have met him at the station and given him a "toot" in memory of old times. Congratulations. May his journey through life be pleasant and serene—no snow drifts or mud holes to mar the trip.

The village council of '91, held their farewell meeting in the village clerk's office on Monday evening, the town hall being occupied by the Farmers' Institute, the Reeve, councillors Hall, Moore and Richardson being present. The Finance report recommending payment of accounts from David Smith, work fire department, $2 95; John Cooper, teaming, $1 00; which was received and adopted, and the council adjourned "sine die."

A number of the patrons and shareholders of the Lakefield Dairy Co., have requested me to publish the report of the annual meeting of the shareholders at the factory, which was held on Tuesday, Jan. 5th, when the secretary submitted the following financial report:

A. P. POUSETTE.
W. F. JOHNSTON.

LOOK BEFORE YOU LEAP.

She was up and off early the next morning, and the turkey was hanging by its long legs in a cool place outside the kitchen door before Tom came down stairs.

The young man simply would not talk; his sorrowful face made his sister's heart-ache; but she gave no sign of feeling, and all day she busied herself driving away her memories and apprehensions by hard work. Making mince pies, stewing crimson cranberries, picking currants, stemming raisins, polishing the silver, tidying the rooms, and singing Christmas songs the while in her light soprano, so like that of a bird.

As for Tom, he wandered in a melancholy fashion over the place, taking leave of it bit by bit, thinking what he would have planted here this spring, and how he would have builded there.

Out in the wood land he looked at the logs he had cut, saying that some other man would haul them. There in the sheds were the berry boxes which he should never fill with those well-known Herrick blackberries again. His grape-vines, all wrapped and sheltered from the frost, seemed to whisper under the covering: "Strangers shall pluck our fruit." By noon he had nearly driven himself melancholy mad.

He went at last up the long slope which commanded a view of Captain Brown's cottage—the home of his betrothed—and stood looking down upon the prim yellow house with its green shutters. Three poplar trees on one side and three on the other and a red chimney in the middle of the roof, as if it had been taken from a Dutch toy village box. He was not usually imaginative, but now his fevered brain concocted a drama, in which his lost Millicent married the new owner of the Herrick farm, while he was shot by redskins on the plains, and died repeating her name. He sat down upon a fallen tree after this, his head hot, his tongue parched, his hands dry, and decided that life was not worth living—that he would have no more of it. He would get his rifle and go out into the woods, he said to himself, and there put a bullet through his brains; and later, while Millicent and Hulda were praying in the church, he should be lying out there, face downward, knowing nothing, feeling nothing, caring for nothing any more. So would he keep his Christmas Eve.

The winter day was almost at an end at half-past four, when Hulda, coming out with a little basket on her arm, passed her brother on the garden path. She put her little hand upon his arm, but he took no notice of her. She went on to the barn, and he went up stairs to get his gun and clean and load it.

As Hulda approached the barn she saw Millicent standing at the gate, with a white shawl over her head.

"Oh, Milly!" the girl cried, "how glad I am to see you."

But Millicent only shook her head as she came slowly into the garden.

"How frightful all this is!" said she. "Oh, poor Tom! Oh, poor me! What have we done to deserve it?"

"I don't suppose that it is because you deserve it," said Hulda. "I imagine that it is for the best, somehow, though we can't see it. I will think so."

"I can't," said Millicent, throwing herself into Hulda's arms, and bursting into tears.

Hulda let her sob for awhile; then she lifted the little face between both hands and kissed it.

"I wish you wouldn't cry so, dear," she said. "I haven't seen your natural features for a month or more. You'll ruin your eyes. Come, promise me that you'll try to get up a smile or two for the Christmas dinner, to-morrow. Try to do it for Tom's sake."

"Are you going to keep Christmas, Hulda?" cried Millicent, in amazement. "Are you going to cook dinner? Do you want us to come? Have you the heart? You don't really mean it?"

"It seems to me that everybody is quite forgetting why we keep Christmas," said Hulda. "Besides, Milly, next year I may not have a house to ask my friends to, or a dinner to give them. This year I have, and I am going to do what I can, and I shall not borrow trouble. God will provide. I always trusted in Him, and I always shall."

"I wish I was pious enough to feel so," sighed Millicent, "but it does seem so dark and dreadful, I really wish I had never been born. You don't seem to remember that our engagement is off. Pa says so."

"If you love Tom, and Tom loves you, all will come right," said Hulda. "It is only a matter of money. You are both alive and well; come help me hunt up some eggs; I haven't enough, and I know Speckle and Fluffy have hidden theirs somewhere. I always make true pound cake for tea Christmas time, Millicent."

"Pound Cake!" gasped Millicent; but she followed Hulda into the barn, and climbed into the loft while her friend groped about on the lower floor.

Meanwhile Tom had loaded his rifle, put his watch and a ring into an envelope, which he directed to Millicent Brown, written a farewell letter to Hulda, in which he represented to her that she would be better off without him, and was on his way to the woods.

On the Herrick place all paths ran round the old barn. As he passed it, with his rifle over his shoulder, his sister peeped out as she heard his step.

"Going to shoot something?" she asked.

"Yes," said Tom, gloomily. "That's my intention."

"It's rather late, isn't it?" asked Hulda. "But come here a moment, Tom. There are eggs here behind this partition, and I can't reach them. What is the use of having long arms if you don't help folks with short ones? Get them for me."

"Poor little Hulda!" thought Tom. "I'll do the last thing she asks me. She shan't remember that I was cross to-day." and he patted her on the shoulder as he followed her into the barn, leaving his rifle outside against the wall.

"There," said Hulda, kneeling down; "I see three eggs, I'm sure—just there."

Tom knelt down beside her; stretching his long fingers to their utmost he barely touched the eggs. As he drew the first one out, Hulda took it from him.

"That's Fluffy," she said, I know her eggs."

He drew out another.

"That's stale," said Hulda, going to the barn door to throw it away.

When she came back her brother was standing erect, holding some long-shaped object in his hand.

"What's that?" she asked, much startled by the expression of his face.

"I don't quite know, Hulda," said Tom, in a faint voice. "It is something I found behind the boards there."

Hulda peered at it. It was an old morocco case, gray with dust, and blue with mould. She girl's cheek paled as she saw it more plainly. She recognized it.

"Oh, Tom, don't you know what it is?" said she. "It is poor pa's old letter case that he kept all his receipts in. It was always falling out of his pocket. It must have dropped there when he fell from the ladder."

Tears arose to her eyes—she could not keep them back—as she remembered that terrible day on which her father died. And Tom stood looking down upon this relic of his lost father. How often had it been opened, with a smile, when he besought spending money. Within it used to be kept a little faded daguerreotype of his mother, and flossy curls from the dead babies's heads, folded in tissue paper.

Mechanically he unloosed the clasp and looked in. A bit of red tape caught his eye. It bound a sheet of parchment, and, in a moment more, he had read the words written on its yellow folds. They were these:

"The last will and testament of Calvin Herrick."

He tore it open; a glance sufficed.

"Great Heaven, Hulda!" he cried, "this is father's will, Father's will, do you hear, Hulda—Hulda? Father's will, lying here all these years while we have suffered so."

Millicent heard the words. She came rushing down from the loft and threw herself into his arms, weeping again; "for joy," she explained between her sobs.

But Hulda, grave and quiet, looked at Tom, and took from him the old letter-book, and laid it against her heart, leaving the will in his keeping.

"Don't you feel a little ashamed, Tom," she asked, "to have misjudged pa so, and to have said such things about Providence?"

"Don't you feel proud of yourself, Hulda?" said he. "If you had not insisted on keeping Christmas the will might never have been found."

Then Tom went outside and solemnly fired his rifle off, aiming skyward.

"Loaded guns are dangerous to leave about," he explained, "and I don't feel like shooting anything now."

Then, with one arm about his sweetheart's waist, and the other over Hulda's shoulder, Tom Herrick looked at the old homestead where he was born, let his eyes wander over the broad acres that were still bis own, and lifted them to Heaven.

"God knows I'm luckier than I deserve to be," he said. "May He forgive me."

He was thinking of the lonely woods and the marl pit and the death he had been about to die. But of this the girls knew nothing, and Hulda answered in her pretty little voice:

"Yes, Tom, after this I think you will always trust Providence, and keep Christmas Day."—Mary Kyle Dallas.

The great popularity of Ayer's Pills as a cathartic is due no less to their promptness and efficacy than to their coating of sugar and freedom from any injurious effects. Children take them readily. See Ayer's almanac for this year, just out.

An old smoker declares that he has been using "Myrtle Navy" tobacco ever since the second year of its manufacture, and that during that time he has never suffered from a blistered tongue or parched tonsils or any other of the unpleasant effects which most tobaccos will leave behind them. His experience, he says, is that no other tobacco which he has ever tried is quite its equal, and that in value for the money "no other comes anywhere near it."

"August Flower"

"I inherit some tendency to Dyspepsia from my mother. I suffered two years in this way; consulted a number of doctors. They did me no good. I then used Relieved in your August Flower and it was just two days when I felt great relief. I soon got so that I could sleep and eat, and I felt that I was well. That was three years ago, and I am still first-class. I am never Two Days. without a bottle, and if I feel constipated the least particle a dose or two of August Flower does the work. The beauty of the medicine is, that you can stop the use of it without any bad effects on the system. Constipation While I was sick I felt everything it seemed to me a man could feel. CRUELTY TO CHILDREN!

A Society for its Prevention Organized in Peterborough.

The First Branch of its Kind on This Continent—Names of the First Officers—Brief Sketch of the new Movement.

It must have struck the observer as peculiar that there are so many societies for the prevention of cruelty to animals, whilst there are so few for the protection of children. The originator of this new movement is the Rev. Benjamin Waugh of London, England. It is needless to say that he was assisted by the best and truest hearted people in that country. It is too apt to be the prevailing impression that no human beings can be so cruel as to ill-treat poor, inoffensive little children. That this opinion is incorrect may be seen from the report of the society in England—"Most of the victims have been young, many were babies made habitually to feel the oppression of hatred, the dizziness of famine, and scarlifying and curses; with blows and kicks and floggings with the oppressor's straps, pokers, tapes, books, &c.; diggings into with prongs of forks and blade of knife; putting mustard oil into wounds; hanging up by the neck by a slip-knot till black in the face and unconscious; thrusting red-hot pokers into the mouth; putting bare little thighs on top of hot roasting stoves," &c. But why prolong the never-ending list of crimes and devil's tortures of frail, helpless little waifs.

Moreover, people are apt to say, surely this is confined to cities and to slums. The report says, however, "for cruelties have very little to do with surroundings and density of population. They arise from which are confined neither to area nor class."

The branch in Peterborough is the first off-shoot of the kind established in Canada, if not on the continent.

The Rev. Mr. Waugh, with his cardinals, archbishops, nobles and philanthropists of every degree and description, has appealed to the colonies to keep on the divine mission. In England the Society's jurisdiction comprises nine millions of people, and it has brought to pass in Parliament a great system of protective measures for the young.

"Not a broken law, but a broken little heart is the one motive of proceedings. The society is action is solicitor, chief constable and public prosecutor for every child—the smallest and the poorest in the land."

Since the knowledge of these offences against children have been spread abroad, the national apathy has quickly changed to active sympathy. This was largely brought about by the celebrated articels by Cardinal Manning and the Rev. Mr. Waugh, entitled "The Child of the English Savage," which appeared in the Contemporary Review. This article recounted such instances as "immersing a dying boy in a tub of cold water 'to cool his dying down!' lashing a three year-old boy with a draymen's whip; savagely beating a girl on the breast and kicking her fearfully in the stomach," etc. One of the chief reasons for such cruelty is that by many parents. Now, the object of the society is to see that, not where mere parental indiscretions occur, and painful and hasty acts, even to the breaking of a limb, are not made the subject of prosecution where there is "genuine and wholehearted regret." "Only where there is absolute callousness, or contempt and hatred of a child, where the pains and injuries inflicted are matters of utter indifference, do the punishments of the law become wise and necessary."

This society is to work in harmony with, and necessary to the police and the latter everywhere welcome it. "The limit of a constable's duty is to receive charges, and on these to act or on what he himself sees. He is wholly forbidden to search out and show himself strong on behalf of the helpless. Were that his duty with the power which he carries, to put down resistance to its discharge, with force if needs be, he would become intolerable, especially among the poor. Mr. Justice Field recently finding that a goodhearted constable had thus been acting—acting as a man, not within his rights as a policeman—in a case brought before him, dismissed it marking that in the getting of it up a great constitutional principle had been violated. The police must not take any proceedings even upon complaint or upon what they see. This excludes all indoor offences against children. "How can babies and children lay informations?" Mr. Waugh ended an address at Birmingham by saying, "when you stand before the judgment throne of Him whose will, Jesus says, is should either suffer from hunger or naked-ness or be sick and perish, will you dare to tell Him that you knew that that was His will but that you left it to the police."

One of the chief benefits of the society lies in its being able to give warnings. The object of the Society, to sum up, is the punishment and prevention of cruelty and neglect towards little children. This is attained by warnings and prosecution, by the enforcement of existing laws and the promotion of legislation.

A few extracts from the articles of formation of the local branch, will explain the modes of proceeding: "Whereas private individuals are chary of furnishing information with regard to the affairs of others and leading to the punishment of criminals through an apprehension of undue publicity or of private malice, and whereas this hesitation is taken advantage of by wrong-doers, therefore this society shall keep inviolably secret, insofar as this Society is concerned, the names or designations of all those furnishing to this Society any material or information leading to the apprehension of offenders against children as is ordained by the laws of the parent Society."

Yesterday afternoon a meeting of those who had consented to co-operate in the formation of a local Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children on the lines of the parent Society in England, met and completed organization, including the appointment of officers.

The Society is to operate in the town and county of Peterborough, "No officer or member of this Society shall receive any pay or reward, but shall do what he may in the cause of humanity." The best interests of the giver of information and of the children and of the accused will be consulted.

The officers are:—

HONORARY PRESIDENT—His Lordship the Bishop of Peterborough.

HON. VICE PRESIDENT—A. C. Dunlop, Esq.

HON. SEC.-TREAS.—Hampden Burnham, Esq.

HON. DIRECTORS—The Rev. Messrs. E. F. Torrance, J. C. Davidson, Jos. H. Locke, J. E. Trotter, and James Wallis, John Burnham, M.P., Peter Hamilton, George Hilliard, R. A. Morrow, Thos. Cahill, James Stevenson, M.P., J. R. Stratton, M.P.P., R. C. Strickland, Esquires, and His Worship Mayor Kendry.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE—The officers and Messrs. R. A. Morrow and Thos. Cahill.

Does Protection Protect?

Certainly, in one instance, it does. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the great protection against the dangers of impure blood, and it will cure or prevent all diseases of this class. It has well won its name of the best blood purifier by its remarkable cures.

The highest praise has been won by Hood's Pills for their easy yet efficient action. Sold by all druggists. Price 25 cents per box.

The Head Surgeon

Of the Lubon Medical Company is now at Toronto, Canada, and may be consulted either in person or by letter on all chronic diseases peculiar to men. Men, young, old or middle-aged, who find themselves nervous, weak and exhausted, who are broken down from excess or overwork, resulting in many of the following symptoms: Mental depression, premature old age, loss of memory, bad dreams, dimness of sight, palpitation of the heart, emissions, lack of energy, pain in the kidneys, headache, pimples on the face or body, itching or peculiar sensations about the scrotum, wasting of the organs, dizziness, specks before the eyes, twitching of the muscles, eyelids and elsewhere, bashfulness, deposits in the urine, loss of will power, tenderness of the scalp and spine, weak and flabby muscles, desire to sleep, failure to be rested by sleep, constipation, dullness of hearing, loss of voice, desire for solitude, excitability of temper, sunken eyes surrounded with leaden circle, oily looking skin, etc., are all symptoms of nervous debility that lead to insanity and death unless cured. The spring or vital force having lost its tension, every function wanes in consequences. Those who through abuse committed in ignorance may be permanently cured. Send your address for book on all diseases peculiar to man. Books sent free sealed. Heart disease, the symptoms of which are faint spells, purple lips, numbness, palpitation, skip beats, hot flushes, rush of blood to the head, dull pain in the heart with beats strong, rapid and irregular, the second heart beat quicker than the first, pain about the breast bone, etc., can positively be cured. No cure, no pay. Send for book. Address M. V. LUBON, 24 Macdonell ave., Toronto, Canada.

Cure for Constipation and Headache

Dr. Silas Lane, while in the Rocky Mountains, discovered a root that, when combined with other herbs, makes an easy and certain cure for constipation. It is in the form of dry roots and leaves, and is known as Lane's Family Medicine. It will cure sick-headache in one night. For the blood, liver and kidneys, and for clearing up the complexion it does wonders. Druggists sell it at 50 cents a package. dw

Dr. Low's Sulphur Soap is a delight shampoo. It cleanses the scalp and darkens grey hair.

Interested People.

Advertising a patent medicine in the peculiar way in which the proprietor of Kemp's Balsam for Coughs and Colds does, it is indeed wonderful. He authorizes all druggists to give those who call for it, a sample bottle free, that they may try it before purchasing. The large bottles are 50c and a dollar. We certainly would advise a trial. It may save you from consumption. dw

Worms cause serious sickness. Dr. Low's Worm Syrup destroys and expels all kinds of worms quickly and surely.

Small Sugar-coated Burdock Pills do no gripe or sicken. They are mild and effectual.

Biliousness—Fever and Ague.

So pleasantly do Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills search out and drive away the seeds of disease that all persons living in a country where fever and ague, and all other bilious diseases, are prevalent, will find they should never be without them. From two to four pills each night upon going to bed, will, in a short time, drive away the sickly yellow look of bilious persons, and bring to their cheeks a beautiful glow of perfect health. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are sold by all dealers in medicine.

A Sensible Man

would use Kemp's Balsam for the throat and lungs. It is curing more cases of coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis, croup and all throat and lung troubles than any other medicine. The proprietor has authorized any druggist to give you a sample bottle free to convince you of the merits of this great remedy. Large bottles 50c. and $1. dw

News About Town.

It is the current report about town that Kemp's Balsam for the throat and lungs is making some remarkable cures with people who are troubled with coughs, sore throat, asthma, bronchitis and consumption. Any druggist will give you a trial bottle free of cost. It is guaranteed to relieve and cure. The large bottles cost 50c and $1. dw

Dyspepsia.

This disease may be traced to a variety of causes, such as constipation, liver troubles, improper food, etc. There is one cure—Burdock Blood Bitters—which may be thoroughly relied on to effect a permanent cure. It has cured obstinate cases of 25 years' standing. dw

TRAGEDY IN AN ENGLISH RAILWAY COMPARTMENT.

The Assailant Alleged to be a Clergyman —The Duke of Clarence's Illness More Serious Than at First Reported—He is Frail and Very Ill.

LONDON, Jan. 13.—As a passenger train was nearing Tamworth last night, a lady named Mrs. Siddalls was seen standing on the footboard of one of the carriages and gesticulating wildly with one hand, while she hung on with the other. Then she suddenly jumped to the ground and sustained serious injuries. When the woman was restored to consciousness she was able to make certain statements, which led to the arrest of a local preacher, the Rev. Mr. Goodall, who had occupied the same compartment on the train as Mrs. Siddalls. The woman is said to be dying.

THE FIRE RECORD.

An Academy in Montreal Destroyed By Fire—Several Firemen Injured.

MONTREAL, Jan. 13.—Shortly before 11 o'clock yesterday fire was discovered in the Academy of St. Louis de Gonsaque, a large stone building in Sherbrooke-street, near St. Denis-street. The academy is conducted by the Providence nuns, and there are over 300 children in the institution. The flames spread with great rapidity, and all the lower portion of the building was soon in flames. The greatest confusion reigned, and the nuns had the utmost difficulty to prevent a panic. The firemen finally succeeded in getting all the nuns and pupils safely out of the building. Several of the firemen were overcome by the smoke and had to be removed to the hospital. The loss will be heavy.

Fire at Port Stanley.

PORT STANLEY, Jan. 13.—The Masonic Hall was destroyed by fire yesterday. The first floor was occupied by Weir & Balkwills, grocers, the second floor being used by St. Mark's lodge of Free Masons. The building and contents were all destroyed. Insurance on building $1500, on Weir & Balkwill's $2050. The wall fell on a small building owned by John Mauson of Sand Beach, Michigan, and used as a barber shop and wrecked it. Insured for $100. All insured in the Lancashire. Cause of fire unknown.

A Smith's Falls Foundry Damaged.

SMITH'S FALLS, Ont., Jan. 13.—Fire started about 7 p.m. in Frost & Wood's foundry and was confined principally to the paintshop. Loss will be heavy but is covered by insurance.

Fire at Delhi.

DELHI, Ont., Jan. 13.—Fire last night destroyed James Kemp's shop, dwelling and house furniture, A. Laur, stoves and tinware, James Whitaide's shop, occupied as jewelery store by R. Barker; brick store, owned and occupied by John Lamb; E. Kitchen's frame residence.

$12,000 Fire at Winnipeg.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 13. — The wholesale harness factory of C. F. Hutchings was damaged by fire last night to the extent of $12,000.

A Rochester Blaze.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Jan 13.—The most disastrous fire that has visited Rochester in years occurred to-day, the seed house of Hiram Sibley, eight stories in height, being destroyed. The total loss will reach $150,000.

Herbert Biggar Dead.

BRANTFORD, Jan. 13.—Herbert Biggar of Mount Pleasant, who died yesterday at the ripe age of 83 years, was at one time prominent in political circles. He represented South Brant for seven years, between 1850 and 1860, in the Upper Canadian Parliament and was a member of the township and county councils and also reeve of Brantford township.

Death of a County Crown Attorney

WELLAND, Ont., Jan. 13.—County Crown Attorney Lorenzo Dulmage Raymond died here suddenly yesterday at the age of 81. He has been a resident of Welland county for upwards of 35 years. He was appointed County Crown Attorney 30 years ago and held that position up to his death.

Crown Timber Agent Dead

QUEBEC, Jan. 13.—Mr. John Mackay, a well-known citizen in the employ of the Ontario Government as crown timber agent, was found dead in bed yesterday. Deceased retired last night in apparently good health. Cerebral apoplexy is supposed to have been the cause.

Knights of the Maccabees Elect Officers at Stratford.

STRATFORD, Jan. 13.—At the Provincial Convention of the Knights of the Maccabees to-day these officers were elected:

Provincial commander, Joseph Cairns of Camlachie; past commander, Elijah Hodgins of Stratford; lieut. commander, F. E. Titus, Presque Isle; record keeper, H. E. Trent, Toronto; finance keeper, John G. Muir, Hamilton; chaplain, Rev. G. R. Beamish, Stratford; master-at-arms, H. A. Coombs, Stoney Creek; sentinel, Gardner, London; picket, R. Mackie, Hamilton; representatives to Fraternal Association to be held in Toronto January 14th, Trent, of Toronto, and Scott, of Hamilton.

Berlin, Brantford, Brighton, Colborne, Toronto and Windsor put in claims for the next convention, but it was decided to meet in Toronto on the second Tuesday of April, 1893.

MANY UNHAPPY WIVES.

No Less Than 275 Divorce or Separation Suits Set for Trial.

LONDON, Jan. 13.—The official list of suits for divorce or separation to be heard at the ensuing sitting of the court is unusually heavy. There are 89 defended causes, 136 undefended, 35 to come before the common juries, and 15 for special juries, a total of 275. In addition to this there are 33 cases which are to stand over by consent.

One of the first cases to be disposed of raises the very important and unprecedented question whether a respondent, who is admittedly insane, and who appears by her guardian, can be adjudged guilty of adultery.

In another case there are no less than eight co-respondents, and in the petition the husband, who is a commercial traveler, gives the entire eight names, and they are printed in the document.

LONDON, Jan. 13.—Reports from Sandringham state that pneumonia, from which the Duke of Clarence is suffering, has developed into a more serious type than is announced by the physicians in their statements for the information of the public.

The Queen, who is sojourning at Osborne House, Isle of Wight, is very anxious regarding the condition of her grandson and has ordered that information be immediately telegraphed to her of the slightest change in the Duke's condition. It is considered highly probable that unless there is soon a change for the better Her Majesty will go to Sandringham.

Special precautions have now been taken to prevent reporters from approaching the Hall. The official statement issued by the physicians this morning says the inflammation of the lungs from which the Duke is suffering is pursuing its course. They add that his strength is well maintained but that no improvement can be reported.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—Influenza is widespread in Birmingham, and a number of the prominent residents of that place are prostrated.

Mr. Joseph Chamberlain was to have presided at a meeting in Birminghaur today, but he was prevented by the illness of his brother Arthur, who is suffering from an attack of influenza, and whose condition is pronounced critical by his physicians.

Among the sufferers from the disease is Father O'Sullivan, the noted Catholic divine.

The Earl of Clarendon is ill with influenza.

All the London hospitals are filled with patients suffering from influenza.

There were 2208 cases in Copenhagen last week.

The mortality in Cork County, Ireland, is heavy.

The influenza continues to spread in France.

Grip is attaining serious proportions in Madrid.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—An article by Count Tolstoi on the subject of the famine in Russia appears in this morning's Daily Telegraph. In this article the count says the reproaches against the Russian Government and its officials present an exaggeration and the charges of apathy are in many cases unfounded. All, he says, are doing their best to stave off the impending calamity. Count Tolstoi then proceeds to state the destitute condition of his own district. He admits that much drunkenness prevails, and that in many cases well-to-do but thrifty people eat the bread intended for the famine sufferers, merely from motives of economy. Count Tolstoi also gives heartrending pictures of wives, with their children ill-clad, starving, cold and ill, anxiously waiting for the return of their husbands who have gone to seek aid for their famishing families. The cause, Count Tolstoi says, is assuredly not the failure of the crops.

ADEN, Jan. 12.—The Arab insurrection in Yemen, reported to have been quelled by the Turkish troops, has been renewed. The insurgents are under the leadership of Ahmed Addin, a descendant of the former rulers of Yemen. The rebels are marching upon Sanaa, the capital of Yemen, and the Turkish forces are advancing to repel them.

The Sheiks, who have been incited by the fanatics of their religious sects, are with their followers, rising everywhere against Turkish authorities.

The telegraph wires between Sanaa and Hodeidah have been cut.

PARIS, Jan. 12.—There is a movement on foot here to secure the popular observance of Sunday, and a very strong society has been formed to further this cause.

M. Jules Simon, honorary president of the society, said to-day: "We do not wish to forbid people working on Sundays if they wish to do so, but we aim to prevent them forcing other people to work."

PARIS, Jan. 12.—The Benedictine Abbey at Fecamp, department of Seine in Fericure was destroyed by fire last night. The abbey was noted as being the place where the celebrated Benedictine liqueur was manufactured.

A fresh stream of lava is issuing from the base of the great cone of Vesuvius.

Lifted an Ox and Died.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Jan. 13.—Ex-Chief of Police Wilson D. Snyder died last night. He bled to death by rupturing a blood vessel while lifting a whole beef on a wagon. He was a powerful man and shouldered 600 pounds easily.

Killed in Texas.

ST. THOMAS, Jan. 13.—William Shaw, formerly of this city, M.C.R. conductor, was killed on the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway at Denison, Texas, Sunday night.

A HERO, AGED FIVE.

He Dragged the Baby to the Window, but Couldn't Lift Him Out.

UTICA, Mich., Jan. 13.—Norman Rowley and wife, farmers, living in a log house five miles from here, spent last evening at a neighbor's, leaving their five-year-old son and his baby brother at home in bed. They returned near midnight and found their house in flames.

Their five-year-old boy had managed to raise a window and climb out just in time to escape death, but the baby was burned to a crisp.

The brave little fellow had dragged the baby downstairs from its bed in the loft, but was unable to lift it through the window.

Broke His Neck.

HAMILTON, Jan. 13.—Last evening about 10 o'clock, while working on the propeller St. Magnus, A. M. Robertson, the well-known shipbuilder, fell through the open trap door into the hold of the propeller and broke his neck.

Deceased was owner of the propeller St. Magnus and was well-known in marine circles.

Compared Them to Brigands.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 13.—In the Northwest Legislature yesterday afternoon, Nolin of Batoche moved for a special committee to inquire into the question of indemnity to persons who suffered loss of property after the rebellion of 1885. He charged the Government officials with acting like brigands with regard to stealing and destroying property.

Deputation of Insurance Men.

MONTREAL, Jan. 13.—A delegation of life insurance writers composed of Messrs. Corthorn of the Canada Life and Jankin of the Sun Life Company leave to morrow for Ottawa. They will be met by Messrs. Cohen and Jarvis of Toronto and interview the Minister of Finance on amendments to the Insurance Act referring to rebates and licensing of agents.

Formerly of Toronto.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 13.—Funeral of James Lockhart, who was killed by a Northern Pacific train the other day, took place here the other day. Lockhart is a son of a banker who formerly lived in Toronto.

Cut His Throat In Church.

TROY, N.Y., Jan. 12.—While the pastor of the German Lutheran Church at Poesenkill was pronouncing the benediction on his little flock last evening, the worshippers standing with reverently bowed heads, Martin Lantz, occupying a pew with his wife and mother, drew a razor and cut his throat from ear to ear.

The windpipe was gashed and blood flowed in a stream from the ghastly wound, staining the cushions and forming upon the floor a pool, into which he sank.

Scratched 28 Years

A Scaly, Itching, Skin Disease With Endless Suffering Cured by Cuticura Remedies.

If I had known of the CUTICURA REMEDIES twenty-eight years ago, it would have saved me $200 00 and an immense amount of suffering. My disease (psoriasis) commenced on my head in a spot no larger than a cent. It spread rapidly all over my body, and got under my nails. The scales would drop off me all the time, and my suffering was endless and without relief. One thousand dollars would not tempt me to have it in disease over again. I am a poor man, but feel rich to be relieved of what some of the doctors said was leprosy. Nine physicians, psoriasis, etc. I cannot praise the CUTICURA REMEDIES too much. They have made my skin as clear and free from scales as a baby's. All I used of them was $5 worth. If you had been here and said you would have cured me for $200 00, you would have had the money. I looked like the picture (No. 2 page 47) in your book, "How to Cure Skin Diseases," but now I am as clear as any person ever was. Through force of habit I rub my hands over my arms and legs to scratch once in a while, but to no purpose. I am all well. I scratched twenty-eight years, and it got to be a kind of second nature to me. I thank you a thousand times.

DENNIS DOWNING, Waterbury, Vt.

IS NOW AT DEATH'S DOOR

GRAVE CONDITION OF THE DUKE OF CLARENCE.

Intense Gloom at Sandringham—The Young Man's Mother and Affianced Constantly by His Side—A False Report of the Heir's Death.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—It looks very serious to-night for the Duke of Clarence and Avondale.

As a general rule serious illness in the royal family is admitted only when it cannot be questioned or denied. A prince is hardly allowed to be ill until he is in danger of his life. What creates anxiety as to the condition of the Duke of Clarence is the severity of the inflammation of the lungs. His lungs are abnormally weak. A slight congestion nearly carried him off one year ago.

The influenza in itself is not very alarming, except as it seizes the weakest point in the victim's constitution.

It has settled with apparently deadly effect on Clarence's weak lungs. He has never been a robust lad and it is a question whether he has vitality enough to stand even a moderate attack of illness.

If the Duke of Clarence's illness should prove fatal, Prince George will be heir to the throne next after the Prince of Wales. Though all immediate danger from his recent attack of typhoid fever is over Prince George is anything but strong, and if influenza should fasten its clutches on him the Duke of Fife's baby would be brought close to the British throne.

With all these points in view it is easy to understand the intense public anxiety about the Duke of Clarence's illness. Both the Princess of Wales and his fiancee, the Princess May, remain near the Duke's bedside.

All plans for the wedding are off. Everybody is anxiously waiting to see what card inexorable Fate will throw on the table.

Watching the Bulletins.

LONDON, Jan. 13.—Great apprehension was felt to-day in all classes of society regarding the condition of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale.

The attack of congestion of the lungs from which he is suffering developed into a very serious case, and the opinion was freely and openly expressed that the Duke would not recover.

A bulletin issued from Sandringham Hall at 9.30 stated that grave symptoms had supervened in the case and that the condition of the Duke was critical. The physicians in attendance upon the Duke have naturally sought to prevent the impression getting abroad that His Royal Highness was in any danger, and the bulletins hitherto issued have been somewhat optimistic in their wording. The news that they acknowledged that the disease had developed dangerous symptoms was taken by the general public to mean that they had given up hope. The expressions of sympathy for the Prince and Princess of Wales were many and sincere and on all sides. Among all classes the hope was expressed that the Duke would be able to battle successfully against the disease.

An immense crowd gathered about the gates of Marlborough House, the Prince of Wales' London residence. As soon as the bulletins from Sandringham Hall were received they were posted on the gates. The crowd was composed of people of all kinds and conditions, men, women and children, and expressions of the deepest regret were expressed for the members of the Royal family who were threatened with the death of one of their number.

A large number of workingmen were interspersed among the crowd, and they were especially noticeable for their bearing of deep respect and sympathy. There is no denying the fact that the engagement of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale to Princess Victoria Mary of Teck endeared him to the hearts of the English people, more particularly those of the working classes, with whom Princess Mary has always been a favorite because of her kind and unassuming manner and her many charitable deeds.

In the vicinity of Sandringham the excitement, though subdued to a certain extent by the nearness of the patient, was most intense. No one was allowed to enter the grounds of Sandringham save a privileged few, and no vehicles were permitted to pass along the roads in the vicinity.

Many of the villagers visited the parish church for the purpose of offering up prayers that the life of the duke might be spared.

The condition of the duke was the sole topic of conversation in the clubs, hotels, railway stations and in every place where numbers of people congregate. The bulletins from Sandringham are also posted at the Mansion House, the official residence of the Lord Mayor of London, and here, too, an enormous crowd congregated, waiting to learn the latest news from the bedside of the sick prince. A baseless rumor circulated on the Stock Exchange that he was dead. At 1 p.m. a bulletin posted at Marlborough House stated there had been no change in the condition of the duke; that his pulse was 120 and his temperature 105.

In the afternoon the crowd about Marlborough House continued to increase in number and the streets in the vicinity were packed with people, who, though feverishly anxious to learn as much as possible concerning the Duke of Clarence, maintained the most decorous conduct.

The Prince and Princess of Wales were at the prince's bedside all day.

A bulletin from Sandringham at 5.15 announced that there had been a trifling change for the better in the condition of the Duke.

The bulletin issued at 7 o'clock stated that the condition of the Duke of Clarence continued critical. It added that the best feature of the case was that the strength of the Duke was well retained.

Still Alive at Daybreak.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—A bulletin issued this morning says: The condition of the Duke of Clarence, if anything, is slightly better. An examination showed that both of the Duke's lungs were congested. The patient suffers frequently from acute pain and his breathing is difficult. The doctors' main hope is that the Duke's sound condition will pull him through, but the family know that he has not the robust vitality of his brother. The patient is assiduously nursed by his mother, who is occasionally assisted by the Princess May.

The illness of Prince Albert Victor of Wales and the suggestion of possible failure of the alliance between an heir to the British throne and the Teck family recall the striking sequel to the death at Nice of the heir to the throne of Russia, the elder brother of the present Czar, who was at the time engaged to be married to the Princess Dagmar, now the Empress of Russia. When the then Czarewitz lay on his deathbed he is said to have asked his affianced to wed his brother Alexander, which she accordingly did some time afterwards. So might Prince George of Wales, a very sensible young man, it seems, carry out the intentions of Prince Albert Victor and wed his intended.

Promised Rich Plums.

DUBLIN, Jan. 14.—Edmund Leamy, M.P. for Sligo, yesterday publicly alluded to an agreement by which the leaders of the McCarthyite faction were assured of comfortable offices whenever Home Rule should be declared, if the change in government should come about through their aid.

The Parnellites privately allege that Tim Healy has in his possession a written guarantee of the Irish Lord Chancellorship, with an Irish peerage under the title of Viscount Healy, in case the McCarthyites are the winning faction when the Liberals come into power.

With 414 Persons on Board.

HONG KONG, Jan. 14.—Intelligence has been received of the loss of the steamer Nanchow, off Cupchi Point. She sank so rapidly that it was impossible to launch her boats. When she went down she carried with her 414 persons, everyone of whom was drowned. She was officered by Europeans, who stuck to their posts to the last and went down with the steamer.

The Russian Famine.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—Advices from St. Petersburg state that the sum of 65,000,000 roubles, appropriated by the Imperial Treasury for the purpose of providing the absolute necessaries of life, to be distributed among the suffering poor, has been expended, in addition to the large sums spent through the Central Famine Committee and through private individuals, and yet the wants of the distressed peasants have been supplied to only a limited extent. The Imperial Treasury has now assigned a further sum of 65,000,000 roubles, which will be devoted to relief work.

Russia's New Year's Day.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 14.—Yesterday was New Year's Day in the Russian calendar The reception which it is the custom of the Imperial Court to give on this occasion was omitted to-day owing to the illness of the Czarina.

A Montenegrin Agitator Killed.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—A despatch from Cattaro, a seaport town of Austria-Hungary in Dalmatia, states that the noted Montenegrin agitator Nacovics was stabbed to death near Cattaro by two of his fellow-countrymen. It is stated that the motives for the crime were of a political nature. The murdered man was a relative of Princess Milena, wife of Prince Nicholas, the ruler of Montenegro.

A Bonaparte Arrested.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—The divorce suit brought by Rosalie Clovis Bonaparte against Louis Clovis Bonaaprte, son of the late Prince Louis Lucien Bonaparte, resulted yesterday in the arrest of the respondent.

The petitioner charges that her husband entered into a conspiracy to defraud her of her jewelry, which she values at £20,000. She also charges that her jewelry has been given to Laura Elizabeth Scott, by marrying whom, she claims, her husband committed bigamy.

Will the Emperor Hold His Horse?

BERLIN, Jan. 14.—The North German Gazette has caused a sensation by publishing a statement that preparations are being made to convey the royal stud from Trakehnen, which is two miles from the Russian frontier, to a place of safety in the event of a Russian invasion.

Seville Inundated.

SEVILLE, Jan. 14.—Business in that part of the city bordering upon the Guadalquiver has been brought to a standstill by a sudden rise in the river. The inundation has flooded the wharves and warehouses rendering the transaction of business impossible.

An Ottawa Architect Killed.

OTTAWA, Jan. 14.—The relatives of James R. Bowes, late city architect, received word to-day of his death at Hanford, Cal., on Jan. 4. The hotel in which he was staying caught fire and Bowes jumped from the second story window, sustaining injuries from which death resulted.

A Shanghaied Sailor's Revenge.

HONOLULU, Jan. 14.—McKenna's whaling bark, John P. West, was burned to the water's edge at daybreak this morning. 10 miles off Honolulu. The origin of the fire was incendiary, this means of revenge betaken by a sailor shanghaied at San Francisco.

A Penny Breach of Promise Case.

UTICA, N.Y., Jan. 14.—Eva Daniels today recovered $150 from Oscar Mowers for breach of promise. The trial was rich in comedy. Mowers said the girl did the wooing, and said that whenever he went to see her she generally locked the door at 8 o'clock, and he spent the time from then till 11 to 12 o'clock planning to get away.

HANDCOCK ACQUITTED.

THE JURY SAY HE DID NOT KILL HIS DAUGHTER.

The Judge Charges Strongly in Favor of the Accused—The Trial of Young Labelle at Ottawa on a Charge of Wife Murder—What His Mother-in-Law and Other Relatives Say.

TORONTO, Jan. 14.—Yesterday was the last day of the Handcock trial. All was breathless anxiety till "Not guilty" escaped the foreman's lips, when half the crowd gave a sigh of relief, and the other half, less dubious of results, looked round at their neighbors and said: "I told you so." The constable beside the dock dropped his baton, Handcock stepped out, kissed his wife and, walked out of the court room with his family and friends.

All his children and relatives were put in the box by the defence, and all swore that Handcock was a most affectionate father. Though submitted to a vigorous cross examination none of them, even the youngest, varied their statements.

The forenoon was spent in hearing witnesses prove the good character of the prisoner. About 20 swore that he was very religious, sincere, sympathetic and peaceable, and that he possessed all the other qualities which make a good neighbor and citizen.

Then His Lordship got tired of the monotony, expressed himself as convinced of the prisoner's social standing and moral character, and asked Mr. Murdoch how many more witnesses he had. The answer, "Twenty more," evidently was not encouraging, so the learned counsel for the defence was asked to "quit," which he did.

In his charge to the jury His Lordship reviewed the evidence of both the prosecution and defence and gave his opinion as to the probably correctness of the various contentions. He did not consider it probable that there was clay in the pool of blood, as Isaac Doltery had stated. There had been no evidence to show that there was no lead in the edge of the hole in the skull. This, he felt sure, showed that Sophia Handcock died from the effects of a bullet wound. Then if the prisoner was guilty he must have procured the weapon for the purpose of killing his daughter, and that would show that the crime was not committed in the heat of passion. If the prisoner had killed his daughter with a pistol he would have expected a ball to be found in her head, and instead of holding to the accident theory would have averred that someone must have come into the store and shot at the girl. His Lordship, therefore, considered the prisoner innocent.

The jury thought so, too, and brought in a verdict as already stated.

Charged With Murder.

OTTAWA, Jan. 14.—The trial of Leonce Labelle for murdering his wife was continued yesterday and adjourned until Monday. The principal witnesses were relatives of the dead woman.

Nurse McCormack testified that she found deceased naked in bed.

Mrs. Flannigan, mother of the girl, gave prisoner a bad name for his treatment of his wife and said prisoner told her in her own house that he was the cause of her death. Her daughter often complained of Labelle's treatment. He was never a good son-in-law.

Mrs. Rose Lemieux, sister of deceased, gave evidence as to the finding of clothing much torn and smelling of carbolic acid, from which poison deceased died. On the Saturday previous to death prisoner tried to smother witness and ordered her out of the house. When she left he was dragging his wife about and abusing her.

Death of the Earl of Charlemont.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—A despatch from Biarritz announces the death there yesterday of the Earl of Charlemont from an attack of influenza.

James Molyneux Caulfeild, Earl of Charlemont and Baron Caulfeild, was born Oct. 3, 1820. He succeeded his uncle, the second Earl of Charlemont, on Dec. 28, 1863. In 1856 he married the Hon. Elizabeth Jane, daughter of Baron Athlumney. She died in 1882, and in 1883 the Earl contracted a second marriage with Anna, daughter of Rev. Charles Lambert, who survives him. The Earl's residence was Roxborough Castle, County Tyrone, Ireland. The title expires with the Earl's death.

Oyster Supper.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The oyster supper held under the supervision of the Patrons of Farmers' Industry Association No. 11 in Mr. Robert Evans' house on January 7th, was a decided success. The ladies brought baskets of eatables, and replenished the tables, of which over fifty patrons and their friends partook of an excellent supper. After the oysters were disposed of in the usual way, the company amused themselves in various ways until about 12 o'clock, when they dispersed after having spent a very pleasant evening. Much credit is due to Mr. and Mrs. Evans for the kind and hospitable manner in which they entertained the company.

The Ladies

Are Earnest, Cheerful and Confident—The Entries Rush In—Information of Value to the Interested.

Hundreds of ladies in happy and thrifty homes in Canada are working cheerfully and confidently, preparing for that most interesting contest, known as the "Diamond Dye Competition." As time passes, the interest increases; and the "Entry Forms" from intending competitors are coming in faster than ever. The ladies seem to be fully aware of the utility and value of this novel competition—the first of its kind ever tried in the Dominion—and all are assured of its complete success, owing to the fact that it has been started and backed up financially by one of the wealthiest manufacturing concerns in Canada, the Wells & Richardson Company, manufacturers of the popular Diamond Dyes. At this particular point we consider it opportune to remark that too few of our leading manufacturers exhibit the liberal and broad business views such as are peculiar to the manufacturers of Diamond Dyes. People, generally, appreciate liberality when properly directed, and when the act is spontaneous and hearty. This free distribution of $1,500 to the ladies of our country, who have been using a popular and useful household article, has never been thought of before. The remarks recently made by a prominent lady, fairly well expresses the feelings of the ladies regarding this "Diamond Dye Competition." She said: "It seems to me that the manufacturers of Diamond Dyes are paying us large premiums because we have been using so many of their beautiful dyes in our homes."

While we are allowed to state that this is true as far as it goes, we are requested to say that one great object of the competition is to gather together a vast collection of the handiwork of the ladies from all quarters of the Dominion, so that the public may have an opportunity of judging of the great possibilities and wonderful effects of Diamond Dyes.

Let us now point the ladies to the dial of time, and warn them that the days are flying. It behooves them to decide early—at once, if they intend becoming participants in this free contest. Tarry not, without delay, fill up and send in their form of entry, which will be found on page 15 of the book of instructions and rules. We may remind all ladies who have not seen this book on the Diamond Dye Competition, that they may obtain it from their druggist, or from the Wells & Richardson Co., Montreal, who will send it post free to any address.

We presume it is needless at this time to inform the ladies that this Competition is free and open to all. It does not cost anything to exhibit your fancy work or other goods; and, whether you are successful or fail to take a prize for your work, remember it is still your property, and is returned to you free of cost. In this way the gain is all on your side, and the entire cost and expenses fall on the manufacturers.

At the present time, we believe sufficient has been said to the ladies as to the advisability of making early application for a place in this grand contest. This is necessary, as special preparations have to be made for suitable exhibition space to properly display the vast number of articles that will be sent in.

Dummer.

A Brave Girl's Heroic Rescue.

Mr. Thomas Miller of Dummer, was on Friday the 8th at his wood lot in Dummer after a load of wood. In crossing Croggin's Lake on foot, he broke through the ice in about thirty-five feet of water. Mr. Miller is a good swimmer or he would have been drowned before the welcome help brought by a second Grace Darling, came. After breaking about twenty-five feet of ice in his efforts to reach the shore he was almost perished with the cold and would never have seen the shore if Miss Kate Forbes who saw his danger, had not come to his rescue. Though the ice waved under her feet she boldly advanced heedless of the cries of Mr. Miller that she was in danger, and extending a fishing rod to him, drew him exhausted and chilled to the bone, to the shore. Mr. Miller had a very narrow escape, and he feels that he owes his life to the pluck and bravery of Miss Forbes. Mr. Miller's cries had been heard by Miss Forbes, whose home is about three hundred yards from the spot where he fell through the ice. This is a case in which the medal of the Royal Humane Society is strongly suggested.

A REMARKABLE CASE. — Mr. Walter Wheeler, of the Washington Mills, Lawrence Mass., for two years afflicted with various veins, accompanied by a troublesome eruption, was completely cured after taking only eight bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Pale, Weak Women need a tonic, strength giving flesh building medicine like Milburn's Beef, Iron and Wine.

Increase Your Weight.

If you are using flesh and blood, commence at once taking Miller's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, which is far ahead of all preparations of the kind in existence. By taking Miller's Emulsion people gain from 5 to 10 lbs. by the time the first bottle is consumed. It is the greatest blessing of the century to all in delicate health, or who suffer with coughs colds, and ailments that tend to consumption. Remember, Miller's Emulsion contains all the constituents found in wheat. It is used in the hospitals and asylums of the country. In big bottles 50c. and $1—at Peterborough Drug Stores. dw

Self Application of Electricity

FOR MEDICAL PURPOSES

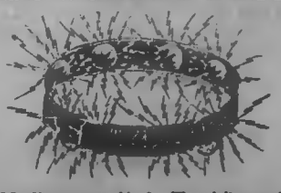
BY THE

DORENWEND ELECTRIC BELT

And Attachments

HEAD OFFICE—103 Yonge St., Toronto

THE WORLD'S BEST.



ALL diseases curable by Electricity can be treated at home by the Dorenwend Appliance. The Dorenwend is the only legitimate Electric Belt made which fulfils the requirements of Electro-medical science. It is a complete Body Battery. It has an independent Battery, which compasses a mild, continuous current of Electricity (without shocks) and can be regulated to suit the strongest man or the weakest child. It is a CURE BEYOND QUESTION, and merely a sensation current, and the greatest current in the greatest curative. It is a successful treatment for INDIGESTION, RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, LIVER AND KIDNEY TROUBLES, WEAK BACK, SPINAL DISEASES, HEART DISEASE, NERVOUS DEBILITY, PARALYSIS, VERTIGO, FEMALE COMPLAINTS, LUMBAGO, SEXUAL DECLINE and all diseases of the Nervous and Muscular Systems.

Remember that the DORENWEND BELT is the very latest invention in this line, and was invented by a practical electrician, and marks the advance in the world; we defy anyone to bring proof to the contrary.

Do not cease this flirt with the humbug electricians of leather and metal with which the country is being flooded. If you wish to be convinced with those articles, pay visits to us. If you want to procure a genuine Electric Belt and one that will be a benefit, get a Dorenwend Belt.

Separate School Board.

The Inaugral Meeting—Organization for the Year—Appointment of Committees.

The Inaugral meeting of the Separate School Board was held on Tuesday evening, 12th January, 1891. All the members were present, viz:—

FIRST WARD.—E. Sheehy jr., and A. Lefeltier.

SECOND WARD.—Thos. Kelly and Dr. Brennan.

THIRD WARD.—C. J. Leonard and J. J. Lynch.

FOURTH WARD.—M. Quinlan and John McGrath.

ELECTION OF CHAIRMAN.

The chair was taken by the Secretary, Mr. John Corkery. He stated the result of the recent elections. He then asked the Board to elect a chairman for the year.

It was moved by Dr. BRENNAN, seconded by Mr. KELLY, that Mr. Leonard be chairman.

Mr. Leonard declined the position of chairman, he having held the chairmanship for the past two years.

Mr. LYNCH moved that Dr. Brennan be chairman, and the motion was seconded by Mr. MCGRATH. The motion was unanimously adopted.

Dr. BRENNAN thanked the members of the Board for the honour and would do his utmost to merit the confidence reposed in him.

OTHER OFFICERS ELECTED.

PAID THE PENALTY.

For the Murder of a Performer's Widow at Greenock.

GREENOCK, Jan. 13.—Frederick Thomas Storey, aged 40, formerly outdoor manager of Cook's circus, in this city, was hanged to-day for the murder of Elizabeth Stewart, the widow of a circus performer.

On the night of the crime he followed the deceased, after the performance, and, having caught hold of her, said: "Why do you treat me like a dog?"

On Mrs. Stewart's attempting to escape, Storey drew a knife and stabbed her in the left breast. She died immediately.

When arrested the following curious letter was found on the prisoner:

DEAR JOHN: It is the last day I shall live. Think of me not carelessly; how much I have thought of you and your interests! A woman has spoiled my prospects in life; by the time you receive this she will be dead. I cannot help it; no doubt you will think me very foolish."

Storey slept lightly last night, but dressed himself with scrupulous care, ate a hearty breakfast and died with perfect composure.

Toronto Notes.

"Phin" Sweeney, the notorious sport, yesterday committed a serious offence and as a consequence he was arrested. He visited Annie Lincoln's residence at 15 Elizabeth street, and while there exercised his pugilistic propensities to the detriment of Nellie Belmont. She swore out a warrant for his arrest, feloniously wounding being the charge preferred and at a late hour last evening he was taken into custody.

About 6.30 o'clock last evening an alarm was sounded from box 47, calling the firemen to extinguish a blaze in Nos. 230 and 232 Bathurst-street, owned by Mr. James Way, and occupied by Mr. J. W. Bowes, grocer, and Mr. George Raymond, respectively. The fire originated in No. 232 by the accidental upsetting of a stove. Mrs. Raymond, who was asleep on a lounge by the side of the stove, had a narrow escape from being burned to death. As it was she was so badly burned that Dr. J. Ogden, who dressed her wounds, had her removed to the hospital. The fire spread into Mr. Bowes' house and destroyed all the household effects. The loss is not known, but will be fully covered by insurance.

The Best Authorities,

Such as Dr. Dio Lewis, Prof. Gross, and others, agree that catarrh is not a local but a constitutional disease. It therefore requires a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which effectually and permanently cures catarrh. Thousands praise it.

Hood's Pills cure liver ills, jaundice, biliousness, sick headache, constipation and all troubles of the digestive organs.

Just why so many people suffer pain when a remedy of known and certain effect like Hagyard's Yellow Oil may be had at every drug store, is not very clear. This peerless pain soothing remedy is a prompt and pleasant cure for sore throat, croup, colds, rheumatism, lame back, etc. Price 25 cents. dw

A Pleasant Herb Drink.

The best cure we know of for constipation and headache is the pleasant herb drink called Lane's Family Medicine. It is said to be Oregon grape root, combined with simple herbs, and is made for use by pouring boiling water on the dried roots and herbs. It is remarkably efficacious in all blood disorders, and is now the sovereign remedy for ladies in clearing up the complexion. Druggists sell the packages at 50c and $1 dw

MINISTERS, lawyers, teachers and others whose occupation gives but little exercise, should use Carter's Little Liver Pills for torpid liver and biliousness. One is a dose. Try them. dw

A Sensible Statement.

SIRS,—Having used your Burdock Blood Bitters successfully for some time past, I must state that for my complaint of biliousness and acid stomach I have never found an equal, and I continue to use it and recommend it to my friends and neighbors.

WHY COUGH,

WHEN a few doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral will relieve you? Try it. Keep it in the house. You are liable to have a cough at any time, and no other remedy is so effective as this world-renowned preparation. No household, with young children, should be without it. Scores of lives are saved every year by its timely use

Amanda B. Jenner, Northampton, Mass., writes: "Common gratitude impels me to acknowledge the great benefits I have derived for my children from the use of Ayer's most excellent Cherry Pectoral. I had lost two dear children from croup and consumption, and had the greatest fear of losing my only remaining daughter and son, as they were delicate. Happily, I find that by giving them Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, on the first symptoms of throat or lung trouble, they are relieved from danger, and are becoming robust, healthy children."

"In the winter of 1885 I took a bad cold which, in spite of every known remedy, grew worse, so that the family physician considered me incurable, supposing me to be in consumption. As a last resort I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and, in a short time, the cure was complete. Since then I have never been without this medicine. I am fifty years of age, weigh over 180 pounds, and attribute my good health to the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral."—G. W. Youker, Salem, N. J.

"Last winter I contracted a severe cold, which by repeated exposure, became quite obstinate. I was much troubled with hoarseness and bronchial irritation. After trying various medicines, without relief, I at last purchased a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. On taking this medicine, my cough ceased almost immediately, and I have been well ever since."—Rev. Thos. B. Russell, Secretary Holston Conference and P. E. of the Greenville District, M. E. C., Jonesboro, Tenn.

The Toboggan Slide.

The toboggan slide was well attended last evening. The sport is becoming quite a favourite with a number of the townspeople, and the slide is proving quite a success. The late snow and frost have had a very beneficial effect, and it is now in good condition for the pursuit of this exhilarating sport.

Great Truths in Few Words.

There is a great deal implied in "good circulation." The health of the body depends upon the quality of the blood. If the blood is impure and impoverished, you have a sallow look, with blotches, pimples and eruptions. For this condition the world cannot furnish a grander remedy than Paine's Celery Compound. It is vitalizing and purifying.

A Tribute to Meckridge.

The Norfolk Virginian says of the peerless tenor who will sing at the Opera House concert on Jan. 20th: 'Of Whitney Mockridge—that peer of boundless tenors, whose voice has been heard from ocean to ocean,—to be admired more and more. He sang grandly, with expression, grace and richness. His voice is one great volume of marked sweetness, and he fairly captured the audience by his artistic manner."

Evangelistic Meetings.

It is evident from the large attendance at St. Andrew's church last evening that the interest in the meetings is steadily increasing. After the preliminary song service, Mr. Meikle preached a powerful sermon upon I. Tim 1 8. His subject was the lawful use of the law. He pointed out the use of the law in setting forth God's majesty, in making us to know sin, and in bringing us to Christ. He showed the importance of conviction of sin preceding the acceptance of the Gospel offer, stating that the most satisfactory converts were those in whose hearts there had been deep conviction of sin. The services were continued in St. Andrew's church this afternoon at 3 p.m. and will be continued this evening beginning at 7.45 p.m.

Funeral of Mr. Rutherford.

The funeral of the late Mr. Arthur Rutherford took place this afternoon to Little Lake Cemetery. The members of Lansdowne Lodge S.O.E.B.S. and of Otonabee Lodge I.O.O.F., attended the funeral in a body. The service at the home of deceased was conducted by the Rev. Jos. H. Locke, and was very impressive. The members of the S.O.E.B.S. then took charge of the funeral, following close behind the hearse to the cemetery. At the grave side the beautiful ceremony of the S.O.E.B.S was gone through, they formed the inner ring, and the Oddfellows formed the outer one round the grave. A large number of friends attended the funeral to show their respect for their deceased fellow citizen. The town council also attended the funeral in a body, Mr. Rutherford having been a member of that body for a number of years. The pallbearers were Messrs. W. H. Law, G. S. Rose, A. P. Peasnette, A. E. Dixon, Wm. Sallsbury and W. R. Greatrex.

Peterborough Workingmen's Building and Saving Society.

Third Annual Meeting—Society Reported to be Flourishing — More Members Wanted.

The third annual meeting of the Peterborough Workingmen's Building and Saving Society was held last evening in Mr. J. Stevenson's office, Mr. T. Cahill, president, in the chair. There was a good representation of the shareholders of the company present, showing that a lively interest was taken in the success of this promising local institution.

After the chairman had stated the object of the meeting, the secretary, Mr. P. Henry, presented the third annual financial statement, of which the following is a summary:

The assets of the society amount to $10 084 82, which includes a balance in the bank of $1,261.95. The liabilities amount to an equal sum, being the amount due to the shareholders for subscribed stock, etc. While the assets show a balance in the bank of a little over twelve hundred dollars; this is due to the fact that loans already made and upon which dues are being paid, have not been paid over to borrowers pending the completion of the title. The auditors, Messrs. R. S. Davidson and John Corkery presented their report certifying to the correctness of the financial statement.

THE PRESIDENT SPEAKS.

The president then on the motion for the doption of the report referred to the very satisfactory condition of the Society, the progress made without any special effort, and expressed the belief that before many years the society would be one of the strongest local building societies in the province. If the young men of Peterborough would only avail themselves of the advantages this society offered for the laying aside of a certain amount of their earnings monthly, when they in future years required the money they would always be able to lay their hands upon it, and during the years of their saving their investment would always be paying them a good rate of interest.

Several of the shareholders also referred to the advantages building societies possessed for the profitable investment of their surplus earnings, and the easy opportunities presented to workingmen of procuring houses of their own—investing the savings represented by the equivalent of rent in a home of their own.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

PRESIDENT.—Mr. T. Cahill.
VICE-PRESIDENT—Mr. John Lynch.
TREASURER.—Mr. Wm. Rudkins.
SECRETARY.—Mr. P. Henry.
SOLICITOR.—Mr. C. J. Leonard.
AUDITORS.—Messrs. R. S. Davidson and John Corkery.
DIRECTORS.—Messrs. J. Stevenson, M.P., J. R. Stratton, M.P.P., R. S. Davidson, J. J. Lynch, T. B. McGrath, R. Stevenson, J. P. Hurley, Jno. Corkery, F. Fairen, A. Gough, Thos. Dolan, W. C. Springer.

Votes of thanks were then tendered to Mr. Jas. Stevenson, for the use of his office for the meetings, and to the officers for their services. In connection with the above, a grant was made to the Secretary of $50 for services performed. This concluded the business of the meeting.

Remarkable Progress in Life Assurance.

The year just closed has proved to be the most successful one in the history of the Sun Life Assurance Company. The applications for new life assurances reached the magnificent total of 3,301, for $5,901 521 00. No better proof could be given of the confidence of the insuring public in this very popular and progressive company than the fact that the applications reached these exceedingly large figures.

Whitney Mockridge Concert—Jan. 20.

Musical culture is increasing in Peterborough, and consequently the public taste is becoming more exacting. It is therefore more difficult to cater to the public demand for good music, but the bringing of the Whitney Mockridge concert company to town leaves nothing to be desired on this score. The company is a thoroughly first class one in every respect. The leading man of the company, Mr. Mockridge, has for the past five years been the leading tenor of nearly all the great musical festivals held on this continent, while he, with two other members of the company, Mrs. Mayo-Rhoden, soprano, and Mr Arthur Beresford, bass, compose three of the most capable concert singers of the continent. The superb vocal end of the programme will be balanced by the contributions of Miss Belle Botsford, violinist, whose "broad, faultlessly pure tones and technical attainments are equal to the severest demands," and Miss Hattie Mockridge, the talented pianiste and accompaniste. With a laudable desire to make the enjoyment as popular as possible, the prices have been placed at 25 cents, 35 cents and 50 cents. Extremely low prices considering the high quality of the concert, which will be presented on January 20th.

Personal.

Hon. J. M. Gibson, Provincial Secretary, Deputy Grand Master A. F. & A.M., is in town to-day, and will deliver an address at the Masonic "At Home this evening, held under the auspices of the Peterborough Lodges.

Dr. Chamberlain, Provincial Inspector of Prisons, Asylums, etc., is in town to-day, and visited the Nicholls Hospital, the St. Joseph's Hospital, the Protestant Home and the jail. He is well pleased with the efficient way these public institutions are managed.

A Canadian in a Chicago Divorce Court.

A Millbrook Medical Man Gets a Divorce From his Wife—Dr. Ough a "Bachelor" Once More.

The Chicago Evening News of Jan. 9th has the following amongst other items of its report of the opening of the divorce season in Chicago, which will be of special interest to many persons in this district:—

There was a large delegation of ladies in Judge Shepard's court at 9 o'clock this morning.

It was the first divorce session of the year in Chicago. The ladies were dissatisfied with the failures of the old year and were anxious to make a good start for 1892. And they sought a dissolution of the marriage bond.

In every variety of winter costume the women came, some in heavy furs with glittering diamonds on their fingers, some thinly clad and shivering with the icy wind. They formed a double semi-circle around the court room, a smile of hope lighting many a pale face on which misery had left its mark.

There were also a few dissatisfied husbands but they bore their sorrows bravely.

The first martyr was Dr. Richard Ough, a shrewd looking middle-aged physician who resides at 474 North avenue. He charged his wife, Maria Jane, with infidelity. "We were married in Ontario in 1866," he testified. "Since August, 1890, we have lived in Chicago."

"You charge your wife with infidelity?" asked the lawyer.

"I do, sir."

"How do you know your wife committed adultery?"

"By her own confession, and also by witnesses."

"Tell us what you know about it."

"I first heard of it in July, 1890. I then went to my wife and accused her of infidelity. She replied: 'Is it possible that you have not known it before?' I replied: 'I did not.' Then she said: 'Seeing that you have found it out, there is no use denying it.' We had some hot words and she finally told me there was no use in me remonstrating. She said she must have Thomas W. Allen."

"Have you any children?" asked the court.

"Two—Reginald, 15, and Margery, 13. They both live with their mother in Millbrook, Ont."

"Do you make any provision for them?"

"I have sent them during the last year about $500, besides paying house-rent."

"Are you willing to provide for the children?"

"Yes."

Mrs. Elizabeth Stirton testified that on several occasions she had seen Thomas W. Allen and Mrs. Ough together.

"On one occasion I found them in the drawing-room of Dr. Ough's house when I was staying there. It was in December, 1887. When I opened the door in the evening and went in I found them acting improperly."

"You know that Allen was in the habit of coming there?"

'Yes."

"And they were frequently together alone?'

"They were."

Dr. Ough will have a divorce and will make provision for the children.

Police Court,

THURSDAY, Jan 14th, 1891.

There was still another "blank" at this place of refuge for vags, drunks, etc. What is Peterborough coming to?

Purity of the blood is universally known, and yet there are very few people who have perfectly pure blood. The taint of scrofula, salt rheum, or other foul humor is hereditary and transmitted for generations, causing untold suffering, and we also accumulate poison and germs of disease from the air we breathe, the food we eat, or the water we drink. Your blood is nothing more conclusively proven than the positive power of Hood's Sarsaparilla over all diseases of the blood. This medicine, when fairly tried, does expel every trace of scrofula or salt rheum, removes the taint which causes catarrh, neutralizes the acidity and cures rheumatism, drives out the germs of malaria, blood poisoning, etc. It also vitalizes and enriches the blood, thus overcoming that tired feeling, and building up the whole system. Thousands testify to the superiority of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a blood purifier. Full information and statements of cures sent free.

Reached His Business Majority.

To-day, January 14th, is the twenty-first anniversary of Mr. J. D. Tully's business operations as druggist in his present stand, 311 George street. Mr. Tully is one of the comparatively few business men on George street who have occupied the same premises for a length of twenty one years, and the fact reflects great credit upon Mr. Tully's reliable and straightforward business methods. The EXAMINER wishes him a long continuation of his past success.

A Decided Success.

In last week's issue of this paper, Mr. J. J. Sheehy, through its columns advertised a special line of goods for sale at exceedingly low prices. The result has been most gratifying and Mr. Sheehy informs us that several visitors to his store remarked that they had read the advertisement in the paper. During the balance of the month of January, previous to stock-taking, the public are invited to call and be satisfied that Mr. Sheehy is "advertising nothing that he is not doing and that he is doing every thing that he is advertising." Saturday next will be "Bargain Day" again. Look for the sign in bright red letters announcing the fact. w3d11

DEATH'S DOUBLE STROKE.

The Duke of Clarence and Cardinal Manning Pass Away Together.

Brief Sketches of the Distinguished Dead.

(Special to the Examiner.)

PRINCE ALBERT VICTOR'S DEATH.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—Prince Albert Victor, Duke of Clarence and Avondale, died at nine o'clock this morning.

CARDINAL MANNING'S DEATH.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—Cardinal Manning, who, it was announced on Tuesday, was suffering from a "severe cold," died from the effects of acute bronchitis, into which it developed, at 8.20 o'clock this morning. Till near the last His Eminence was able to join in the prayers which were being offered at his bedside. He passed away evidently without pain.

THE DUKE'S CAREER.

Prince Albert Victor, first Duke of Clarence and Avondale, is the eldest son of the Prince of Wales, and was born on January 8th, 1864. He was educated at Trinity College, Cambridge, and at the University of Heidelberg. Before entering as an undergraduate, however, he had passed two years as a naval cadet on board the Britannia, and in 1879 started with his brother George on a voyage around the world in the Bacchante, returning to England in 1882. On leaving the University he proceeded to Aldershot to prepare for the army. In 1883 he was invested with the order of the Garter. In 1887 in company with his brother he visited Ireland, and in 1889 and 1890 spent some months in India, returning in the spring of the latter year and taking his seat in the House of Lords. On December. 15, 1890, he was installed as right worshipful grand master of the Masonic order for the Province of Berkshire at Reading, and during 1891 he did military duty in Ireland. A few weeks ago he was betrothed to Prince Victoria Mary of Teck, his second cousin, and the announcement was received with considerable satisfaction by the people of Great Britian generally.

THE LATE CARDINAL.

Since the death of Cardinal Newman, nearly two years ago, Cardinal Manning has been beyond question the most eminent representative of the Roman Catholic Church in England, and stands immediately after Gladstone and Tennyson among the great Englishmen of the day Like Cardinal Newman, his senior by seven years, Cardinal manning was bred in the traditions of the Church of England, and held a living in that church for many years. He was born in 1808, the son of William Manning, merchant and member of Parliament, and was educated at Harrow and Balliol College, Oxford, taking his B. A. degree in 1830 He became a fellow of Merton College, and was appointed rector of Lavington and Grapp-ham in Sussex, in 1834, and archdeacon of Chichester in 1840. When the Tractarian movement came up he threw himself eagerly into the burning theological discussions of the day. He was disappointed by the subjection of the church to secular authority, established by the Gorham judgment, and by the failure of the Bishop of London to procure for the prelates the final decision on matters of doctrine. In 1851, soon after the arrival in England of Cardinal Wiseman with the title of Archbishop of Westminster, and the passage of Lord Russell's famous Ecclesiastical Titles Bill, Mr. Manning seceded to the Church of Rome, five or six years after Cardinal Newman had avowed his complete conversion to the doctrines of that church. In 1865 upon the death of Cardinal Wiseman, Manning succeeded him as Archbishop of Westminster. An ardent ultramontane, Archbishop Manning approved the introduction of the dogma of Papal infallibility at the Vatican Council of 1869 and wrote freely on the subject. In 1875 Archbishop Manning was created cardinal priest of SS. Andrew and Gregory in Coelian Hill, thus fulfilling the prophecy made of him by Disraeli in Lothair where he was sketched under the name of Cardinal Grandison.

The Roarin' Game.

Peterborough Curlers Meet the Lindsay Champions—and Beat Them.

The first match in the struggle for the possession of the cup was played yesterday in the rinks at Lindsay and in town. The contestants at each place were two rinks from Lindsay and two from Peterborough. Some good play was seen at both places, the game in the Peterborough rink being quite close. Considerable excitement was manifested at the playing off of the last end, the teams being tied at one rink, and Peterborough one ahead at the other. When a stone was hurled by either side, loud were the cries of "sweep" "sweep," "keep it up" "keep it up" &c. by the skips. This end in both rinks gave points to the Peterborough boys, thus giving them the victory all round. Appended are the names of the players and scores.

Peterborough District Orange Lodge.

The Report of the Secretary, Mr. W. H. Green.

The following is the report presented by the energetic secretary at the district meeting held on, Tuesday evening, which was reported in our issue of yesterday. The report was approved of by the District Lodge and ordered to be published.

SECRETARY'S REPORT

To the Peterborough District L.O.L. Worshipful Sir and Brethren.

It is with pleasure I present to you my annual report this evening.

This year just past has been the brightest in the history of our glorious order that the District of Peterborough has ever experienced since I joined the order twenty years ago. The first event of importance was the meeting of the Grand Lodge of Ontario East in our town in March last.

The benefits accruing from the visit of so many influential and illustrious brethren to our beautiful and progressive town, will I am sure be manifold not only to the town, but to the Orange Association in this county.

Some of our local primary Lodges have taken advantage of the Act of Incorporation to become legalized, and others are seriously contemplating that step. I would strongly urge the District Lodge to apply at once for incorporation, as I believe the advantages to be gained are considerable.

Another great event upon which I have to congratulate you, is the brilliant and eminently successful celebration of the anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne held on the 13th July last. The demonstration far eclipsed anything of the kind ever held in Peterborough. To say it was immense is

MILDLY QUALIFYING IT.

The unimpeachable behaviour, neatness of dress, and the respectable bearing of the visitors was marked, and considering the vast multitude of the Sons of William, gathered together for the purpose of having a gala day, we have reason to be proud of the conduct of our brethren, and I feel safe in saying that no other society in Canada could make such a creditable showing.

It is estimated that there were over 10,000 visitors in town that day, and, considering the unsatisfactory way the railway companies treated the committee with respect to train service, everything passed off satisfactorily.

The committee appointed by you went to work with a will, and the result you have before you. Bros. Hamilton and Campbell deserve special mention in this connection for their zealous labours in the erection of arches and placing of decorations and in attending to other necessary matters. Bro. C. W. Sawers also deserves the sincere thanks of this lodge for his generous action in coming to our relief, and undertaking at his own expense, the burden of entertaining the Grand Master, N. Clark Wallace, M.P., and other illustrious visitors, thereby relieving the committee of a duty which at the time caused them considerable anxiety.

THE RECEPTION AND DINNER

given by Bro. Sawers in honour of the Grand Master at the Oriental Hotel was a very pleasing feature of the day's proceedings, as it was attended by all the leading Orangemen, and by upwards of one hundred of the foremost citizens of Peterborough.

As you have just learned by the reading of the minutes, we have added to our District another new lodge, No. 321, known as the Ellison Lodge, which has started out with a good membership, and is working satisfactorily.

and now while we can rejoice in our prosperity as a society let us be thankful to Almighty God for his great goodness in especially favouring this country with peace and plenty, while in the mother land the would-be Home Rulers give an occasional exhibition and thank God on their own heads, of the manner in which the Protestants of Ireland would be favoured, provided they secure their desires, and in other less favoured countries numbers are suffering from disease and starvation.

In conclusion let me urge you to be ever faithful to your obligations, ever keeping in your hearts the glorious, pious and immortal memory of King William, Third Prince of Orange.

A BOOTBLACK'S LUCK.

"Black you boots, sir?"

It was a childish voice, sweet and pleading, most unlike the usual shrill, half impudent tone of the boot-black army, and George Meredith looked down to see the speaker. Being a tall man, over six feet, and somewhat portly, with fifty-five years of life, mostly of prosperity, he looked quite a distance downward before he saw the little fellow who spoke. Such a very little fellow! He did not look more than six years old, and had close clustering curls of fair hair, and big blue eyes like a baby. But the small face was pale and thin, the limbs, but scantily clad, were far too slender, and the low, sweet voice had an unchildlike pathos in its tone.

"No—" said Mr. Meredith, before the look. "Well, yes, you may!" he added afterwards. "What's your name?" he asked presently.

"George Scott."

"H'm. Orphan?"

"No, sir. Mother is living, but she slipped on the ice about two weeks ago and broke her arm. She did not think I was big enough to work before that, but she had to let me try then. I don't make out very well. Gentlemen think I'm too little. But I can make boots shine, can't I?"

"You have certainly made that one shine," was the reply, while Mr. Meredith thought: "Here is something rare, indeed, a boot-black who talks correct English. Has he stepped out of a novel?"

In a moment he spoke again.

"What work did your mother do?" he asked.

"Embroider for a fancy store. She couldn't work very fast, because she isn't very strong; but we don't eat a great deal; that's one comfort."

"Sorry comfort!" muttered the gentleman. "Any brothers or sisters?"

"All dead, sir. Mamie was the last kept me, and she died in consumption. She was sixteen and helped mamma sew and keep the rooms in order. Oh, dear!"

It was just a child's sigh, coming from a full heart to answer the look of interest and sympathy in the gentleman's face.

"Do you like blacking boots?" was the next question.

"No, sir!"

"Would you like to run errands?"

"I think I should."

"How much can you make a day now?"

"The most I ever made was forty cents. This is my first job to-day."

"Can you read?"

"Why yes, sir. I am ten years old!"

"You come to-morrow morning, to the address on this card, and I will try you for an errand boy."

Then giving the lad a fifty-cent piece and refusing to wait until he went to get change for it, George Meredith strolled off to his his hotel, his solitary dinner and bachelor apartments.

"Odd," he thought, "how much that boy reminds me of some one, I can't think why it is. Some one who had just such big blue eyes, at once shy and frank, drooping most of the time, but candid and truthful when they did meet yours. H'm; it is very vague, but somebody I once knew had just such eyes. Poor little chap! I'll give him a decent suit of clothes, and pay him enough to live on until his mother gets well. It wont ruin me?"

And considering that the speaker counted his money by hundreds of thousands, it seemed likely it would not.

The little, eager lad who walked into the rich lawyer's office the next day was an improved edition of the boot-black of the night before. He had on his "best" suit, well worn, but whole, and his linen was white, his hair nicely brushed, and his boots shining.

"Mother better?" asked Mr. Meredith.

"No, sir," was the sad, quiet answer. "she couldn't get over to the dispensary this morning to have her arm dressed. She was so dizzy she had to lie down."

"That's bad! Suppose you tell me where you live?"

"No. 17 Merriam Court, sir, back of ——street."

"H'm! Well, I'll give you your first errand."

He wrote a note, directed it to "Dr. James Turner," added the address, and gave it to the boy.

"Am I to wait for an answer, sir?"

"No! Leave it, if the doctor is not at home."

"Now," he thought, "I shall know if he is an impostor, at any rate. By Jove!" he exclaimed aloud, "it's Agnes Wellden!"

Then clients and friends came in, and business of the day commenced. But the the boy was not forgotten. Errand that were not too far away to tax his strength were provided, a hearty dinner at a restaurant was given him, and he went home with a steady engagement at five dollars a week promised him.

In that home a sad-eyed woman, in a shabby widow's dress, her face lined with pain and sorrow, but yet a sweet, tender face, had been all the weary day living her life again. She saw herself a child in her father's pleasant home, where there was never great wealth, but every comfort and an atmosphere of love around them all. She saw herself a young, pretty girl, with many friends, and some lovers. One of these was a man older by fifteen years than herself: grave and tender, but who seemed in her girlish eyes too old and solemn to think of love. When her father told her that George Meredith had asked her to be his wife, she was frightened. It seemed as if it would destroy her youth, take all joyousness from her life, to marry this stately, reserved man, already a lawyer of standing.

So she refused him, never appreciating the value of the heart that had been taken captive by her brightness and sweet girlishness. How could she know that it would have made the happiness of the grave, lonely man's life to surround her with all that could keep her as joyous and free as a butterfly?

He left his old home after his love-dream faded, but he left pleasant memories. Even after William Scott wooed and won the woman he had lost, she could not quite forget the grave man who had loved her.

Sunny days of wedded happiness followed her happy girlhood. Children came to bless her, and when her parents died, her husband her sons and daughters consoled her. She was past thirty years old when troubles came, thick, fast, overwhelming. Two children died on the same day of a prevailing fever, and before the month was over her husband followed them to the grave. He had been a clerk, on a moderate salary, and the nest egg in bank was very small, yet the widow looked at the little ones left her and strove to face her future bravely. It was the pitiful story to be heard every day—irregular work, sickness, death! The removal from a country home to a crowded city, in the hope of better work and wages, proved a failure, and the air of a crowded tenement house dwarfed and injured the children, who died one by one, till only her baby, George Meredith Scott, was left to console the widow.

While she mused and wept over this panorama of her life, wondering a little that some long past memory had made her name the boy for her old friend, never hoping to meet him again, Dr. Turner called.

He explained very courteously that Mr. Meredith had requested him to see if his professional services would not help her, and examined the arm. His directions were brief, and he left her to wonder if indeed her old friend was the gentleman who was helping her boy, and whose card lay between the leaves of the Bible.

Dr. Turner's report to Mr. Meredith was:

"Delicate woman, evidently a lady. Arm doing very well, but general health at the lowest ebb. Wants good food, better air, and, above all, mental quiet. Fretting herself to death."

George Meredith being one of those rare philanthropists whose left hand knew not the good deeds of his right hand, made no parade of his generosity. If Mrs. Scott guessed, she never knew whence came an envelope with a generous gift of bank notes. It enabled her to make George neat, to add to her own scanty attire, and to provide the medicines and food Dr. Turner no longer hesitated to order.

In these weeks that followed George's engagement as errand boy to Mr. Meredith, the boy won his way far into the heart of the bachelor lawyer. For years, after his rejection by Agnes Wellden, he had lived a busy life, trying to forget the pain of his broken love dream in his ambition. A man always reserved, caring nothing for society, he had given to his old friend's child the one love of his life, never striving to replace her image in his heart, never seeking to add family joy to his scheme of life. It would be too much to say that he had not recovered, in the years that followed his disappointment, from its stir. As time rolled on there were often months when he never thought of his old love; and when he took George Scott into his employ, her image was entirely buried under the varied interests of his career of professional usefulness and political interest.

The great popularity of Ayer's Pills as a cathartic is due no less to their promptness and efficacy than to their coating of sugar and freedom from any injurious effects. Children take them readily. See Ayer's almanac for this year, just out.

An old smoker declares that he has been using "Myrtle Navy" tobacco ever since the second year of its manufacture, and that during that time he has never suffered from a blistered tongue or parched tonsils or any other of the unpleasant effects which most tobaccos will leave behind them. His experience, he says, is that no other tobacco which he has ever tried is quite its equal, and that in value for the money "no other comes anywhere near it."

Thanks to J. H. Adams.

As through him I have been freed from chills, biliousness, liver troubles, etc., etc. St. Leon Water did it; is the best medicine I ever found; is so good I tell all my acquaintance so go to your store in Brantford and get a supply. Truly St. Leon is marvelous. A trial brings conviction. dw

INTENSE SUFFERING!

Mr. William Buchanan, 24 years engineer in the Cunard Steamship Company's service, 8 St. John's Road, Kirkdale, Liverpool, Eng., writes: "I suffered two years of agony from an affection in the head which six physicians pronounced incurable.

They were divided in opinion as to whether it was acute neuralgia of the head or rheumatic affection of the brain, but all agreed that I could never recover. In my paroxysms of pain it needed two and sometimes three men to hold me down in bed. When at death's door, was applied to my head. It acted like magic. It saved my life. I am well and hearty, and have had no return of the trouble."

ST. JACOBS OIL

SUN LIFE

ASSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA.

The attention of our Policy-Holders is directed to the following summary of the leading items of the present report, which speaks for itself as to the progress and prosperity of the Company:—

Life Assurances in force, 1st January, 1891	$16,759,255.98
Increase over previous year	2,421,272.84
New Applications received in 1890	6,371,599.15
Increase over 1889	2,268,888.00
Cash Income for year ending 31st December, 1890	589,073.87
Increase over 1889	225,938.35
Assets at 31st December, 1890	2,473,514.19
Increase over 1889	687,691.47
Reserve for Security for Policy-Holders	2,100,232.60
Increase over 1889	561,732.71
Surplus over all Liabilities and Capital Stock	304,172.00
Increase over 1889	75,649.00
Death claims fallen in during 1890	142,961.65

The progress made by the SUN LIFE during 1890 was remarkable. The new business was the largest in the Company's history, and was equalled by but one other Canadian Life Company. The income for the year exceeds $2,000 for each day in the year, Sundays included. The Assets are large and rapidly increasing. They are, moreover, of the highest character, yielding an average interest of 6.04 per cent. The overdue interest is small, and the Real Estate owned under foreclosure is only four per cent. of the amount of mortgages. This is a remarkable showing. The SURPLUS accumulated during the FOUR years of the current quinquennium is nearly THREE TIMES as much as the amount earned during any previous FIVE years, and the profits to Policy-holders cannot fail thus to be highly satisfactory. The following are the figures:—

Net Surplus, 31st Dec., 1881, (five years)					$64,324 97
"	"	"	"	1886,	59,482 97
"	"	"	"	1890, (four years)	226,175 69

"German Syrup"

A Farmer at Edom, Texas, Says:

"We are six in family. We live in a place where we are subject to violent Colds and Lung Troubles. I have used German Syrup for six years successfully for Sore Throat, Cough, Cold, Hoarseness, Pains in the Chest and Lungs, and spitting-up of Blood. I have tried many different kinds of cough Syrups in my time, but let me say to anyone wanting such medicine—German Syrup is the best. That has been my experience. If you use it once, you will go back to it whenever you need it. It gives total relief and is a quick cure. My advice to everyone suffering with Lung Troubles is—Try it. You will soon be convinced. In all the families where your German Syrup is used we have no trouble with the Lungs at all. It is the medicine for this country. John Franklin Jones.

The Market Tolls.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

DEAR SIR,—A letter in Tuesday's EXAMINER states that our market tolls should be let by tender to the highest bidder, or by auction. I agree with him in this respect, but would say by all means by auction, so as the public would be in a position to judge as to the squareness of the bidding, &c., &c. He also compares Guelph, Belleville, &c., &c., to our town as a market. Why, sir, Belleville market leases paid in 1890 over three thousand dollars and last year twenty-seven hundred, while most of the schedule prices of market fees are lower than ours. If the lessee can make a profit after paying such a price, how is it that our council of the past have shut out the public from competition? Surely our incoming councillors will see into this matter, and try and give every person a chance to compete by auction. I have no fault to find with our market clerk; if the council see fit to give it to him for nothing, it is no fault of his. But really to compare our market with others we as ratepayers are getting too little.

Yours truly,
A RATEPAYER.

Peterborough, Jan. 13th, 1892.

The Market Fees Matter.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

DEAR SIR,—I notice in the EXAMINER of a day or two ago, a letter referring to the present condition of our market tolls, and complaining that enough was not squeezed out of the present lessee—that we did not get enough cash for the privilege of farming our market tolls. Money is a good thing but there is a possibility of being penny wise and pound foolish. At present we have a good market, one that has a high reputation, and I question very much if it is wise to risk its popularity by trying to get too much tolls out of it. The present market clerk does his duty to the satisfaction of the farmers who visit the market, and in a manner to induce them to continue coming and others to come. Better let well-enough alone. There is now a strong feeling in favour of abolishing market tolls. Now if we encourage some crank who is fishing for the position to put up the price of the tolls and oust the present incumbent and put another in his place; through his anxiety to grind out all the tolls possible, we shall likely have trouble with farmers, and the beginning of an agitation for the abolition of market tolls, which may rob the town in toto, of the revenue now enjoyed from this source. Why not let well-enough alone. Our market is popular now; we want to keep it popular.

Yours truly
SATISFIED.

A Hunter Starves to Death.

ESQUIMAUX POINT, Que., Jan. 12.—A hunter arrived here reports he found a man on an island in Watichou Lake, 36 miles from Esquimaux Point, frozen to death. He had in his hand an oar, on which was cut with a knife "Joseph Galland, Mortici." It is supposed he died for want of food. Galland and another hunter left Aguinos, near Natashquan, last fall and were probably shipwrecked and lost their canoe. Nothing has been heard of the other man.

A Toronto Robbery.

TORONTO, Jan. 12.—Last week the jewelry store of Thomas W. Woolnough, 218 Queen-street west, was broken into and a large quantity of jewelry stolen. Yesterday the Montreal police arrested two men, Ben Rackaboy, alias Lavoy and Thomas Robertson, who were found dealing with articles suspected to have been stolen here. An officer from Toronto leaves today to bring the men to this city.

Gem Valued at $2500 Found in a Bivalve at a Church Entertainment.

PLAINFIELD, N.J., Jan. 12.—Mrs. J. W. Hummer of High Bridge attended an oyster supper for the benefit of the Methodist Episcopal Church. While eating the bivalves from the half shell her teeth suddenly struck a hard substance. Thinking she had bitten a piece of oyster shell, Mrs Hummer removed the substance from her mouth.

It proved to be an extraordinarily large pearl. A Philadelphia jeweler, who chanced to be present, pronounced it to be of perfect formation and exquisite color, and said it was worth at least $2500.

The London Chronicle says: "It is probable that it was a lively recollection of the Alabama award which caused a hitch in the Behring Sea negotiations. The English representatives need beware of all ambiguous proposals emanating from the other side. We believe, however, that the obstacle will not prove insurmountable."

Mr. Varley, a social purist, who has recently visited Singapore, has written to Lord Salisbury, charging the Government with permitting a horrible traffic in Chinese coolies to be carried on in Singapore. He says these coolies are drafted by thousands, almost naked, and thrust into large receiving sheds in Singapore by agents, commonly called slave dealers, where they are shipped by English steamers to Java, Sumatra, Borneo and other countries and hired out by agents to a system of enforced labor, where they have no voice concerning their position, work or pay.

The Head Surgeon

Of the Lubon Medical Company is now at Toronto, Canada, and may be consulted either in person or by letter on all chronic diseases peculiar to men. Men, young, old or middle-aged, who find themselves nervous, weak and exhausted, who are broken down from excess or overwork, resulting in many of the following symptoms: Mental depression, premature old age, loss of memory, bad dreams, dimness of sight, palpitation of the heart, emissions, lack of energy, pain in the kidneys, headache, pimples on the face or body, itching or peculiar sensations about the scrotum, wasting of the organs, dizziness, specks before the eyes, twitching of the muscles, eyelids and elsewhere, bashfulness, deposits in the urine, loss of will power, tenderness of the scalp and spine, weak and flabby muscles, desire to sleep, failure to be rested by sleep, constipation, dullness of hearing, loss of voice, desire for solitude, excitability of temper, sunken eyes surrounded with leaden circles, oily looking skin, etc., are all symptoms of nervous debility that lead to insanity and death unless cured. The spring or vital force having lost its tension, every function wanes in consequences. Those who through abuse committed in ignorance may be permanently cured. Send your address for book on all diseases peculiar to man. Books sent free sealed. Heart disease, the symptoms of which are faint spells, purple lips, numbness, palpitation, skip beats, hot flushes, rush of blood to the head, dull pain in the heart with beats strong, rapid and irregular, the second heart beat quicker than the first, pain about the breast bone, etc., can positively be cured. No cure, no pay. Send for book. Address M. V. LUBON, 24 Macdonell ave., Toronto, Canada.

My wife and self had dandruff and lots of it, accompanied by almost continual itching of the scalp. Anti-Dandruff entirely relieved us from both annoyances, and we think it the best preparation known to clean out dandruff, tone the hair and act as a dressing without giving an unnatural appearance.

Biliousness—Fever and Ague.

So pleasantly do Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills search out and drive away the seeds of disease that all persons living in a country where fever and ague, and all other billious diseases, are prevalent, will find they should never be without them. From two to four pills each night upon going to bed, will, in a short time, drive away the sickly yellow look of billious persons, and bring to their cheeks a beautiful glow of perfect health. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are sold by all dealers in medicine.

Dr. Low's Sulphur Soap is a delight shampoo. It cleanses the scalp and darkens grey hair.

Interested People.

Advertising a patent medicine in the peculiar way in which the proprietor of Kemp's Balsam for Coughs and Colds does, it is indeed wonderful. He authorizes all druggists to give those who call for it, a sample bottle free, that they may try it before purchasing. The large bottles are 50c and a dollar. We certainly would advise a trial. POLITICAL SITUATION.

PARLIAMENT WILL NOT LIKELY CONVENE UNTIL MARCH.

Further Nomination of Candidates for the Bye-Elections—Further Disclosures in Connection with the Alleged Boodling in Quebec—General Political News

OTTAWA, Jan. 1 .—I learn on reliable authority to-night that the Dominion Parliament will not, in all likelihood, be called together until well on in March, by which time all the bye-elections will have been held.

J. I. Davidson Again Nominated.

WHITBY, Jan. 14.—Music Hall here was filled yesterday by a mass meeting of electors in South Ontario opposed to the present Government at Ottawa to nominate a candidate for the bye-election through the unseating of James I. Davidson. James Campbell, Mayor of Whitby, seconded by Dr. Francis Rae of Oshawa, proposed Mr. Davidson; and no others offering he received the nomination. Hon. John Dryden, Joseph Tait, M.L.A., and J. D. Edgar, M.P., spoke at length on the political issues of the day.

GODERICH, Ont. Jan. 14.—The annual meeting of the Liberal-Conservative Association of West Huron was held in Smith's Hall yesterday. The attendance was very large. The nomination was postponed until Feb. 3, at same place.

MILTON, Ont., Jan. 14.—At the annual meeting of the Patrons of Industry of the county of Halton held at Milton yesterday, Mr. John D. McGregor of Trafalgar, farmer, was unanimously chosen as a candidate to represent their interests at the coming bye-election to be held in this county on the 28th inst. Mr. McGregor was present and accepted the nomination.

The Times on Mercier.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—The Times says the leaders of the Catholic party in Quebec are fully alive to the fact that their unique position would be irretrievably lost should Canada be annexed to the United States, and probably would seize the opportunity to get rid of a dangerous ally in Mr. Mercier, who had long been suspected of coqueting with annexationist designs.

QUEBEC, Jan. 13.—More revelations are being made as the search light is being turned into the various departments and the indictment against the Mercier regime being prepared. A very full list of letters of credit, approved accounts, drafts, etc., has been discovered by the Treasury and now under investigation by the present administration. The claim of the Caisse d'Economie Notre Dame de Quebec, amounts to $97,146,30, and includes the Langlais letters. The other institutions which have recognized claims against the province are: La Banque Nationale, $36,221.20; La Banque d'Hochelaga, $16,680; La Banque du Peuple, $9459.16; Union Bank of Canada, $14,711.57; La Banque Jacques Cartier, $6414.82; La Banque Ville Marie, $300. Mr. J. A. Delisle, broker of Quebec, holds paper for $350. The total statements amount to $181,253.05.

QUEBEC, Jan. 13.—It is stated that Hon. Francois Langelier will make application to-morrow to a judge of the Superior Court for a writ of injunction to prevent the Royal Commission from proceeding with the investigation, and that should the result be unfavorable it will be appealed to the Supreme Court or even to the Privy Council.

Newly-discovered letters of credit fill four columns of Le Courrier du Canada. The same paper also publishes the following letter from Mr. Mercier to Mr. Duhamel:

Gibsone re New Waterford Cove.

[Confidential.]

Hon. Mr. Duhamel is requested to consider, as favorably as possible, the enclosed petition, and to inform me immediately that it is granted if the thing is possible. This information is to be confidentially given and to be communicated by myself to the parties interested before being registered in the department. These documents are to be sent to me at the same time without any trace of them being kept in the department.

[Signed] H. M.

5th February, '91.

Result of the Bye-Elections in Manitoba Yesterday.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 14.—The election in South Winnipeg yesterday resulted in return of J. D. Cameron (Greenway supporter) over D. E. Sprague (Oppositionist) by a majority of 98. The contest was a very hot one from start to finish, within 350 of the total vote in the constituency being brought out. The Separate school question was entire issue and Sprague's defeat, it is unanimously admitted, was due to that cry. At last election a Greenway supporter was elected by nearly 300.

Manitou returned Huston (Oppositionist) over Tees (Greenwayite) by a majority of 24. At the last election Winram (Greenway supporter) was elected by acclamation. As the bye-elections go, therefore, the Government loses a seat.

No Corsets or Garters for Them.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 14.—Miss Helen H. Cole came to this city to take charge of the physical culture department of the State Normal School. She forbade any member of the class from joining in the exercises unless coraetless and garterless. Health waists and elastic stock supports, fastened to the waist and border of the stockings, were donned obediently by the pupils. That was last winter.

Now the 300 young ladies of the school of their own sweet will have discarded the corset and the garter as any part of the home, school or promenade costume.

VINCENT ON FAIR TRADE.

He Declares That Canada is Willing and Anxious to Enter the League.

SHEFFIELD, Eng., Jan. 14.—Howard Vincent was accorded an immense welcome home last night. The meeting he addressed is classed as being one of the most notable in years, and has been converted into a regular boom for "fair trade." The platform was crowded with the notabilities of Sheffield and of its neighborhood. Among those present were a very large number of the leading employers of labor in Sheffield and elsewhere. Mr. Vincent has made a tour of the world, visiting the United States, Canada, Japan and the east, in the interests of the Imperial federation of "fair trade," the commercial policy which he has taken under his protection.

Mr. Vincent during the course of his remarks gave a detailed account of his travels in foreign lands, and of the observations he made there as to the commercial policy which, in his opinion, should be adopted by the British Government. The speaker paid particular attention to the growth of trade and the importance of the British colonies, and earnestly advocated the "fair trade" program, which, he said, was the only sensible policy for the country to adopt in view of recent tariff changes in foreign countries, and in view of the rapid growth of the commerce of the British possessions.

The speaker then denounced the existing commercial treaties which govern the commerce of England and her colonies as being handcuffs which fetter the British trade. Mr. Vincent also insisted that Canada did not want a union with the United States, saying on the contrary that Canada desired to enter a fair trade league.

THE ENGLISH DYNAMITERS.

Is a Plot to Destroy the Principal Capitals of Europe.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—Scotland Yard is said to be meditating a large number of arrests of persons connected with the dynamite plot discovered at Walsall. Detectives will probably be sent to America to follow up clues there, as the police have evidence that several of the dynamiters have fled to that country. It is said that the London police are in communication with the New York Chief Inspector on the subject.

The Scotland Yard office has, it is reported, obtained no evidence of any connection between the Walsall dynamiters and the Irish physical force party. The police are said, however, to have proof that their prisoners now in hand, as well as others to be arrested, have some connection with the recent plots against the Czar and that they sold bombs to the Nihilists, well knowing the purpose for which they were to be used. There is also evidence in the possession of the police that it was intended to use a large quantity of bombs next May-Day in the principal capitals of Europe, both by attempting the assassination of sovereigns and other prominent people and by trying to blow up public buildings.

The English Gain a Friend.

CAIRO, Jan. 13.—The Moayad, a powerful independant Arab paper, hitherto opposed to the English occupation of Egypt, now gratefully acknowledges that benefits have been derived from the occupation, and expresses the hope that it will be long continued.

THE NEW KHEDIVE.

Ceremonies to Be Observed on the Arrival of the Young Prince.

CAIRO, Jan. 14.—Politics are at a standstill until the arrival of the new Khedive, who with his brother is expected to arrive on Friday. He will be received at Alexandria by the Ministers and the English officials. A reception at the palace will follow the Khedive's landing and the ceremony will take place in the Abdin Palace, where platforms will be erected for the officials, the Consular corps, the Ulemas and the other nobility.

The Khedive will be received at the foot of the staircase in the palace by the members of his family. His arrival will be announced by a salvo of one hundred and one guns from the citidal. After the presentation of the Diplomatic Corps the Khedive will visit his mother, the Khediva of the Koubbeh Palace.

THE ABDIN AND KOUBBER PALACES.

The Abdin Palace referred to in the above despatch forms one of a group of Ministerial offices and Khedival palaces built in the form of a horseshoe, and situated in the new quarter of the city of Cairo. The Abdin Palace is a commodious edifice. Opposite it is the Diwanel Wak, or government office for mosques and other ecclesiastical property. All the consulates are in the neighborhood.

The Koubbeh, or Kubbeh Palace, formerly belonged to the late Mustafa Fazyl-Pasha, the late Khedive's uncle. It was almost rebuilt by Tewfik and surrounded by beautiful orchards.

ANARCHISTS ARRESTED.

Suspected of Throwing Bombs Into a Police Station.

ROME, Jan. 14.—An Anarchist conspiracy has been discovered at Giosseto, Tuscany. Last week two bombs were thrown into the police office, and one exploded, doing considerable damage to the building, but not injuring anyone. The other did not explode.

An examination showed that it contained a high explosive and was evidently the work of some experienced dynamiter. The police have been busily at work since, trying to ascertain who the plotters were, and have secured evidence that they think justified the arrest of 20 Anarchists.

A PASTOR'S OSCULATION.

His Engraced Faith Home Girls, But Says the Bible Sustains Him.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 14.—Chaplain Morrow of Bethany Faith Home has been removed for kissing and hugging the female attendants. Mr. Morrow was caught in the act on one or two occasions.

Pastor Morrow when confronted with the charges acknowledged their truth and defended his action on the plea that it was perfectly right to kiss whomsoever he pleased. He confessed to having kissed the colored attendant, Aunt Lavina. He holds that the doctrine of St. Paul, which approved the holy kiss as the proper means of greeting, is his doctrine, and that he had a perfect right to carry out the directions of the Scriptures in that particular.

FAREWELL BENEDICTINE.

Destruction of the Abbey in Which the Famous Liqueur Was Made.

PARIS, Jan. 14.—Fire broke out afresh yesterday in the Benedictine Abbey at Fecamp, Department of Seine Inferieure, France, and the building was destroyed. Two hundred thousand bottles of liqueur were burned and a stock of 1500 hectolitres of alcohol. Explosions were heard in the cellars at short intervals. Finally the belfry collapsed.

The damage from the destruction of the abbey is placed at 2,000,000f. The prosperity of the town depended in a measure upon the abbey.

SKETCH OF THE CELEBRATED ABBEY.

Fecamp is a town of over 13,000 inhabitants, and its name is derived from Ficus Campus, field of the fig tree, from the alleged fact that the sea washed up on the coast here the trunk of a fig tree, in which Joseph of Arimathea had placed the Precious Blood. The town figures in the wars between England and France.

The monastery of Fecamp is also interesting as the only one of the famous monasteries of Normandy that stood to the northeast of the Seine. It was founded by Richard the Fearless, Duke of Normandy, about 990. The Abbey Church, a most interesting relic of the eleventh and sixteenth centuries, concealed an interior of great beauty and grace under a somewhat unattractive exterior. The central tower was stately though simple, and on the south side there was a fine portal of the fourteenth century.

Set Sail For Morrocco.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—The British Channel squadron sailed yesterday for Teheran, Morocco.

TANGIER, Jan. 13.—Information has reached this city, which is practically beleaguered on the landward side by the natives who are in rebellion against the Sultan, that the revolutionary movement is spreading. It is stated that the mountain tribes in Angora have demanded that the governor of the territory occupied by them be dismissed.

THE DEAD PRINCE.

Particulars of the Duke of Clarence's Death.

HER MAJESTY'S GREAT GRIEF.

Princess May Said to Be on the Verge of Insanity.

COMMENTS OF THE LONDON PRESS.

The Bells of St. Paul's Cathedral Toll the Sad News to London—The Scenes Around the Mansion House, Sandringham Hall and the West End Clubs—Messages and Visits of Sympathy—Deep, Respectful and Sad is the Popular Reception of the National Calamity.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—The Duke of Clarence and Avondale is dead. The Prince of Wales has sent the following telegram yesterday to the Lord Mayor of London:

"My beloved son passed away at 9 o'clock to-day. ALBERT EDWARD."

The news of the death of the Duke of Clarence has caused widespread grief, and already demonstrations of the public feeling are everywhere apparent. All public buildings display flags at half-mast throughout the city of London. The sad intelligence has been received with expressions of the deepest sorrow.

On receipt of the news of the death of the Duke, the Lord Mayor at once gave orders to have the great bell in St. Paul's Cathedral tolled, and also sent the following message to the Prince of Wales:

"We are profoundly moved by the sad news, and have communicated it to our fellow-citizens. We tender our deep and respectful sympathy with your Royal Highness in this great sorrow and national calamity."

The Bells of St. Paul's.

When the solemn tolling of the great bell in St. Paul's Cathedral was heard this morning it conveyed to everyone within hearing the fact that the Duke of Clarence and Avondale had passed away.

The bells in St. Paul's are never tolled save on the occasion of the death of an heir to the throne, and therefore no further information was needed for the people of London to make them aware that after a gallant struggle the Duke had finally succumbed.

The announcement of his death caused far less commotion in this city than was expected, but this was, no doubt, due to the fact that nearly everybody had given up hope yesterday and believed that death was sure to claim the Duke. The telegram from the Prince of Wales to the Lord Mayor announcing the death of the Duke was not posted at the Mansion House until 10 o'clock. When the little piece of white paper was put up there were only a few persons in waiting. They received the news with stolid indifference. The crowd at no time exceeded 30 during the first half hour after the announcement was posted. Scarcely any comments were made.

Discussing the Duke's Death.

At the West End there was a scene that was in striking contrast to the indifference displayed in the vicinity of the Mansion House. Hundreds of persons well known in the upper circles of society, members of the aristocracy and others gathered in little groups and generally discussed the death of the Duke and its effect upon the succession in all its bearings. Serious faces could be seen all along Pall Mall, and there is no doubt the calamity is much taken to heart by the English nobility. The blinds of public squares and many of the private houses and shops are drawn both in the West End and in the city. The afternoon papers all appeared with mourning borders.

At Sandringham Hall.

Up to noon no official bulletin of the death of the Duke had been issued at Sandringham Hall, but after 10 o'clock the blinds of the house were drawn, the flag on the church was placed at half-mast and the church bell began tolling. These facts gave to the people waiting about the gates the first intimation that all was over. From an early hour in the morning reinforcements of police were detailed to duty about Sandringham Hall and they prevented access to the house.

As the day progressed the crowd in the vicinity of Marlborough House increased. The Mall was at times completely blocked with carriages conveying the most noted people of the kingdom. Lord Salisbury, the Prime Minister, and Lady Salisbury and nearly the entire diplomatic corps were among the callers.

At 1 o'clock in the afternoon the following despatch was received from Sandringham:

After a marked improvement during the early part of the night the strength of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale suddenly failed. About 9 o'clock he began to gradually sink and death occurred at 9.15 a.m.

This despatch was signed by the three physicians who had been in attendance upon His Royal Highness. The bells in Westminster Abbey were tolled at 12 o'clock until 1.

Telegrams from all parts of the kingdom show that the news of the death of the Duke was received everywhere with tokens of deep respect and sorrow.

The Duke of Connaught, uncle of Prince Albert Victor and personal aide-de-camp to the Queen, arrived at Portsmouth at noon from Osborne. He traveled in the royal yacht Albert and Victoria. When he entered Portsmouth harbor with the ensign at half mast as the royal yacht got abeam of the flagship Victory the latter's ensign was lowered to half mast, and this movement was followed by all the other ships in the harbor. The Duke of Connaught immediately landed and took a special train and proceeded at once for Sandringham.

Flags are flying at half-mast on the parish churches at Dersingham and Wolferton close to Sandringham, and the flag on the church at the latter place is still floating at half-mast.

The blinds are drawn in the house of every tenant on the Prince of Wales' estate.

It is learned that most distressing scenes occurred at the bedside of the dying Prince all through Thursday night. Since midnight on Tuesday the Prince was either delirious or wholly unconscious save for a few minutes now and then. During his lucid intervals he was most tender and affectionate to his parents and others who were at his bedside. Between 7 and 8 o'clock last night the condition of the sufferer grew so bad that the usual bulletin was delayed, as it was feared that the end would come at any moment. Soon afterward he became a shade better and toward midnight he fell into a sleep, which, while it was disturbed more than usual, was considered beneficial. At 2 o'clock yesterday morning he again became worse, and the members of the family who had withdrawn from room were hastily summoned. They all remained at the bedside until death occurred.

Both the Prince and Princess of Wales look haggard and worn out by their continued watching by the bedside of their son. They are in deepest distress and nothing can afford them consolation for the loss sustained.

Wales Wrote His Own Messages.

The Prince of Wales would allow no one to write the telegrams announcing the death of his son to the Queen, the Lord Mayor and the various European Sovereigns. He reserved to himself this sad task and all these messages he wrote with his own hand. The telegraph wires leading from Sandringham were kept busy yesterday in transmitting messages from the family of the Prince.

Yesterday messages of condolence began pouring in, and already such messages have been received from most of the rulers of the world. Many messages have also been received at Osborne House. The Government is also receiving official messages from the Prime Ministers of many countries.

Telegrams from all the European capitals report a universal display of tokens of sympathy and visits of diplomatic and royal representatives to English embassies to express condolence with the Prince and Princess of Wales.

All the papers dwell upon the event as the saddest that has occurred since the death of Prince Consort.

The greatest sympathy is expressed for Princess Mary. The latest report from Sandringham which, however, is not confirmed officially, is to the effect that the Princess of Wales and Princess Mary are prostrated with illness.

To Be Buried at Windsor.

Her Majesty announces that the funeral of the Duke would be a state function and that it would be held in St. George's Chapel, Windsor Palace. It was in this chapel that the marriage was to have taken place on Feb. 27 next.

There is so much to be done in the way of preparation that the funeral can hardly occur till the end of next week. It will be of a military character.

President Harrison has cabled a message of condolence to the Queen.

Prince Leopold of Belgium will attend the funeral.

The Czar of Russia, Emperor William of Germany, King Christian of Denmark, the Grand Duke of Hesse, the King of Italy, the Queen Regent of Spain, the Emperor of Austria, the King of Portugal, King Oscar of Sweden and King Leopold of Belgium are among those who have already telegraphed their condolence to the Prince and Princess of Wales and the Queen of England. Lord Salisbury has cancelled the date of his visit to Exeter, Devonshire.

The Right Hon. A. J. Balfour also cancelled his big rallying campaign in Ireland, which was to have been opened Tuesday next.

The Prince of Wales, had it not been for the death of his son, was to have gone on Monday next on a visit to the Earl of Lonsdale at Lowther Castle, Westmoreland.

All the Cabinet Ministers and Liberal leaders who had engagements to appear in public have cancelled their dates.

The Queen's Sympathetic Message to the Mother and Affianced Bride.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—Although the Queen knew she was hoping against hope the announcement of the Duke of Clarence's death was a great shock to her. He had always been her favorite grandson, and his untimely death was a most severe blow to her. She immediately telegraphed a long message of sympathy to the Prince and Princess of Wales. She did not forget, in her own sorrow, the sorrow that has come to Princess May, whose love-dream has been rudely shattered by the hand of death. To her Her Majesty sent a message condoling with her in her sorrow and distress and in loving words expressing her sympathy.

She ordered the Duke of Connaught to proceed at once to Sandringham to represent her there. She also ordered that the court go into full mourning for three months and canceled all the "drawing-rooms" and state levees.

COMMENTS OF THE PRESS.

Wherein the Special Pathos of the Prince's Death Lies.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—The St. James' Gazette this afternoon says: It would be sycophancy to say that the hapless prince was regarded with enthusiastic devotion and intense personal regard by a majority of those over whom he might have ruled. We have the best reason to believe that in the death of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale we have lost a promising young prince, whose untimely taking off would claim our sorrow even without the exceptional circumstances of the occasion. But it is the circumstance of the approaching marriage wherein a special pathos lies. The death of the Duke can hardly make a serious difference in the political or dynastic situation. Prince George of Wales steps into the place of heir. If the tragic event has any lesson in it, it is that it's a duty that princes owe to their subjects from their position to take due and reasonable measures to make the succession secure.

The St. James' Gazette adds that the sense that tears are mortal thing, was never more deeply felt. The Duke of Clarence and Avondale, The Gazette continues, was of a retiring disposition and lived in the shadow of the Throne, and the public knew but little of him.

The Star gives utterance to a warm expression of sympathy with the parents of the dead prince and with the Princess Mary.

The Times says that the heart of the nation goes forth to the grief-bowed parents and to his weeping bride. The tragedy, The Times adds, is deepened in intensity by the light shadow which made its approach.

The Evening News remarks that the Queen's advanced years render her susceptible to the sorrow, and that the death of her probable successor has been the most severe blow she has felt since the death of the Prince Consort. The affliction, according to The News, is unique in its heaviness upon the parents of the dead Prince and cruel in its significance to the sorrowing bride.

The Dublin Newspapers.

In Dublin the newspapers appeared in mourning. Many of the leading stores put up their shutters. The Lord Mayor presided at a meeting of 30 members of the municipal council, who passed a vote of condolence with the Queen and with the Prince and Princess of Wales. The civic flag was placed at half-mast over the Mansion House as soon as the news of the Duke's death reached there.

THE DEAD PRINCE.

Brief History of the Man Whose Demise is Universally Mourned.

Prince Albert Victor Christian Edward, Duke of Clarence and Avondale, was the eldest son of the Prince of Wales and heir-presumptive to the throne of England. He was born Jan. 8, 1864, and was consequently 28 years of age. He was educated at Trinity College, Cambridge, and at the University of Heidelberg. Before entering college he served two years as a naval cadet on the Britannia, and in 1879 started with his brother, Prince George, on a three years' voyage round the world in the warship Bacchante.

After a visit to India he returned to England, and in 1890 took his seat in the House of Lords, having been in that year created Duke of Clarence and Avondale and Earl of Athlone. He was third major of the famous 10th Hussar Regiment, of which his father, the Prince of Wales, is colonel.

Prince Albert has been known to his associates as "Prince Eddy," and has been disrespectfully nicknamed "Collars and Cuffs" because of his careful attention to dress.

Intellectually he has been unfavorably compared with his younger brother, Prince George. He was very fond of music and was himself a performer on the violin.

In the Duke's Regiment.

A special telegram was despatched to the officers of the 10th Hussars, stationed in the Marlboro' barracks. The Duke was a major of this regiment and the knowledge of his death created much excitement. The barracks were immediately placed in mourning. The men belonging to the regiment were until yesterday engaged in collecting subscriptions for a wedding gift for the Duke.

New Heir Presumptive.

The heir-presumptive, Prince George Frederick Ernest Albert, the second son of the Prince of Wales, was born on June 3, 1865, and is therefore in his 27th year. In 1879, in company with his brother, the late Prince, he started on a voyage around the world in the Bacchante. The voyage lasted until 1882, when Prince George, having been thoroughly grounded in the science of navigation and even in the commoner details of a sailor's life, was entered in the navy. He displayed a remarkable aptitude for his chosen profession and rose rapidly.

Daily Examiner.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 15, 1892.

In his speech at Alexandria Sir John Thompson told the farmers of Glengarry "not to touch American gold." The advice, remarks the Ottawa Free Press, was as unnecessary as it was insulting. The farmers of Glengarry do not want American or other gold which they cannot honestly earn. Sir John Thompson is more in need of such advice himself. It is not very long since he was a hireling of the Washington Government. He accepted "American gold" to plead the cause of the Yankees before the Halifax Fishery Commission against his own country. Fortunately his efforts to disparage the interests of Canada on this occasion were not successful. The Liberal lawyers, Messrs. Davies, Dantre and S. R. Thompson, whom Mr. Mackenzie selected to uphold Canada's claims before the commission, did their work so well that Sir John Thompson's clients lost the case and the Dominion obtained an award of $5,500,000. And the man who accepted the Yankee shilling to work against his own country has the effrontery to lecture Ontario farmers about "loyalty!" Could shameless hypocrisy go further?

In his last open letter to Mr. R. S. White, M.P., Mr. Tarte makes some startling charges which parliament and the public cannot ignore. He alleges that a dozen or so of Conservative members of parliament and ministers of the crown received from Messrs. McGreevy, O. E. Murphy and Michael Connolly over $500,000 during the past ten years, and that they knew that the money came directly from the public treasury "through what nearly one half of parliament stated to be Sir Hector's connivance and participation." Mr. Tarte adds that $35,000 of this money went to purchase Le Monde, and that $39,000 are credited in the books of that paper to Sir Hector Langevin. "I saw with my own eyes," says Mr. Tarte, "as did several of our colleagues, $15,000 debited to Sir A. P. Caron in Mr. McGreevy's books, at the committee on privileges and elections." This statement ought to be investigated, if any regard is to be paid to morality in Dominion affairs. Is it possible that Sir Adolphe Caron, a member of the Government which is prosecuting Mr. McGreevy, for "conspiracy," got $15,000 of the money which Mr. McGreevy conspired to raise? If so the anxiety of Sir Adolphe's newspaper organs for the abandonment of the McGreevy prosecution is fully explained. But how utterly ridiculous it is for the Dominion ministers to pose as the prosecutors of the men who supplied them with corruption money. Mr. Tarte says that Sir Adolphe and the others knew the means by which Uncle Thomas raised the money which he gave them.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria

A QUEBEC despatch says that as soon as Sir Hector Langevin recovers from his illness he will commence a campaign against the Abbott government. This is probably the result of the course of several cabinet ministers in claiming credit for expelling Sir Hector from the cabinet. Sir Hector's friends say that he was merely the treasurer of the party's campaign fund, that all the ministers profited by his relations with the contractors, that they all knew where the money came from, and that that they are all quite as guilty as Sir Hector, who will not consent to act as a scapegoat.

TILBURY CENTRE, Jan. 12.—Boniface Dupris, aged 72 years, a prominent resident of Tilbury Centre, was found dead in bed Sunday morning.

Grip Loves a Shining Mark.

CAIRO, Jan. 14.—In addition to the mother of the Khedive the eldest princess and two other princesses of the Khedival family are down with the influenza.

LONDON, Jan. 13.—Among the persons prominent in English society who have been attacked by influenza are Lord and Lady Brooke, who are both prostrated at Warwick Castle, their residence in Warwick.

In Tiverton, Devonshire, with a population of 7500, there have been 30 deaths during the past fortnight.

One hundred and forty of the professors, students and attendants at the Catholic College at Teignmouth, Devonshire, have been stricken.

Advices from Paris show that influenza continues to increase everywhere in France, and the number of deaths resulting from the disease is very large.

In the lunatic colony at Gheel the disease continues to spread in spite of every effort to check it, and many of the residents of the colony have already died.

Laying Bombs Under the Czar's Train.

ST PETERSBURG, Jan. 14.—Two Nihilists were arrested at Moscow yesterday for complicity in laying bombs with an electric wire attachment under the line over which the imperial train was to pass from the Crimea. The plot was disclosed in an anonymous letter to a government official.

Too Much Medicine.

ST. JACOBS, Ont., Jan. 13.—Mr. Magnus Hoffman drank the contents of a bottle of medicine, which caused instant death.

Mercier May Be Arrested.

QUEBEC, Jan. 13.—It is said here that if the Liberals take proceedings against the Royal Commission the new Government will at once order the arrest of Mr. Mercier and his late colleagues.

Kills a Horse and Dog and is Clubbed and Speared Before Overcome.

PERU, Ind., Jan. 12.—At Wallace & Co.'s circus winter quarters near this city yesterday Diamond, the mammoth elephant, broke his chain in a fit of fury and killed the elephant dog, Mack, and the elephant horse, Davy. Both of these animals had been with him for the past five years. The building is badly wrecked.

It was only by the free use of iron spears and clubs that the other elephants were saved and the wild animal restrained. The horse was carried on his tusks for ten minutes.

The Duke of Clarence Ill.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—The Duke of Clarence, eldest son of the Prince of Wales, is seriously ill at Sandringham. He is suffering from a severe attack of influenza, complicated with pneumonia. The latest advices are that the patient has so far maintained his strength well. All the Duke's engagements for the present are necessarily cancelled. The Prince of Wales also announces that on account of the illness of his son he cannot leave Sandringham to keep his engagements in London.

The Occupation of Egypt.

LONDON, Jan. 11.—The Standard warmly repudiates the statement that the occupation of Egypt is continued out of hostility to France. It entreats the French to believe that England does not desire to be meddled with the Egyptian question and to consider that the difficulties of England's position are largely increased by the death of Tewfik, which throws upon English officials the trouble of educating and training his successors to an adequate comprehension of his duties and dangers.

Never permit the system to become run down, as then it is almost impossible to withstand the ravages of disease. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills stand at the head of all medicines as a blood builder and nerve tonic, correcting irregularities, restoring lost energies, and building up the system. Good for men and women, young and old. Sold by druggists or sent on receipt of price—50 cents—by addressing the Dr. Williams Med. Co. Brockville, Ont. dw

Worms cause serious sickness. Dr. Low's Worm Syrup destroys and expels all kinds of worms quickly and surely.

Dyspepsia.

This disease may be traced to a variety of causes, such as constipation, liver troubles, improper food, etc. There is one cure—Burdock Blood Bitters—which may be thoroughly relied on to effect a permanent cure. It has cured obstinate cases of 25 years' standing. dw

Familiar Family Friends.

The family store of medicine should contain a bottle of Hagyard's Yellow Oil. Mrs. Hannah Hutchins, of Rossway, N. S., says: "We have used Hagyard's Yellow Oil in our family for six years, for coughs, colds, burns, sore throat, croup, etc., and find it so good we cannot do without it." dw

DYSPEPSIA in its worst forms will yield to the use of Carter's Little Nerve Pills. They not only relieve present distress but strengthen the stomach and digestive apparatus. dw

The Vacant Seats.

Thirty-five seats in the House of Commons have so far been declared vacant by the courts. Thirteen of these were formerly held by Conservatives, twenty-one by Liberals and one by an Independent. Four of the judgments have been appealed, leaving twelve Conservatives and eighteen Liberal constituencies open. The deaths of Sir John Macdonald and of Mr. Dacost vacated Kingston, Ont., and Two Mountains, Que., while the elevation of Mr. Ouimet to the Ministry, and the expulsion of Mr. Thos. McGreevy leave Laval and Quebec West unrepresented. These four seats bring the number of Conservative vacancies up to sixteen, and with the eighteen Liberals and one Independent unseated make the total number of bye-elections now in sight thirty-five. The constituencies the courts have declared vacant are as follows, a star indicates the cases in which appeals have been entered :—

Mr. J. J. Brealey's Statement.

Mr. J. J. Brealey called on the EXAMINER on Wednesday to say that the location of the shots in the Grange hall door are incorrectly given. He says that the bullet hole nearest the key hole is three feet four inches above it, and that the other is within six inches of the top of a seven foot door.

Prevention is Better

Than cure, and those who are subject to rheumatism can prevent attacks by keeping the blood pure and free from the acid which causes the disease. For this purpose Hood's Sarsaparilla is used by thousands with great success. It is the best blood purifier.

Constipation is caused by loss of the peristaltic action of the bowels. Hood's Pills restore this action and invigorate the liver.

Just why so many people suffer pain when a remedy of known and certain effect like Hagyard's Yellow Oil may be had at every drug store, is not very clear. This peerless pain soothing remedy is a prompt and pleasant cure for sore throat, croup, colds, rheumatism, lame back, etc. Price 25 cents. dw

A Pleasant Herb Drink.

The best cure we know of for constipation and headache is the pleasant herb drink called Lane's Family Medicine. It is said to be Oregon grape root, combined with simple herbs, and is made for use by pouring boiling water onto the dried roots and herbs. It is remarkably efficacious in all blood disorders, and is now the sovereign remedy for ladies in clearing up the complexion. Druggists sell the packages at 50c and $1 dw

Thanks to J. H. Adams.

Falling Fast.

DEAR SIRS,—My mother was failing very fast after three months' suffering from dropsy being swollen from head to foot, but after she had used one bottle of your Burdock Blood Bitters it was removed, and she felt quite well. We think there is no better medicine, and are true friends to B.B.B.

A Fact

WORTH knowing is that blood diseases which all other remedies fail to cure, yield to Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Fresh confirmation of this statement comes to hand daily. Even such deep-seated and stubborn complaints as Rheumatism, Rheumatic Gout, and the like, are thoroughly eradicated by the use of this wonderful alterative.

Mrs. R. Irving Dodge, 110 West 125th street, New York, certifies :—

"About two years ago, after suffering for nearly two years from rheumatic gout, being able to walk only with great discomfort, and having tried various remedies, including mineral waters, without relief, I saw by an advertisement in a Chicago paper that a man had been relieved of this distressing complaint, after long suffering, by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I then decided to make a trial of this medicine, and took it regularly for eight months. I am pleased to say that it effected a complete cure, and that I have since had no return of the disease."

Mrs. L. A. Stark, Nashua, N. H., writes: "One year ago I was taken ill with rheumatism, being confined to my house six months. I came out of the sickness very much debilitated, with no appetite, and my system disordered in every way. I commenced to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla and began to improve at once, gaining in strength and soon recovering my usual health. I cannot say too much in praise of this well-known medicine."

"I have taken a great deal of medicine, but nothing has done me so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I felt its beneficial effects before I had quite finished one bottle, and I can freely testify that it is the best blood-medicine I know of."—L. W. Ward, Sr., Woodland, Texas.

The Toboggan Slide.

The toboggan slide is now in first-class condition, the recent snow and frost having had a beautiful effect on it. This is a very healthy sport, and it is somewhat surprising that a larger number of our townspeople, do not avail themselves of this opportunity of taking a slide. Toboggan sliding must be experienced to be properly appreciated. The sensation while rushing down the slide cannot be expressed on paper. One of the business men of the town tried it a few evenings ago, together with a friend. After their first slide, the gentleman referred to said: "I would not have missed that for $10." His friend then suggested trying another, "No sir," said the first, "not for one hundred dollars." It is hoped that more of the citizens will partake of this most exhilerating sport.

Annual Teacher's Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Sabbath School Teacher's of Charlotte street Methodist church, was held last evening. There was a full attendance, and the following officers were elected for 1892

SUPERINTENDENT—Mr. J. D. Mackay.
ASSISTANT SUPERINTENDENT—Mr. A. C. Babcock.
SECRETARY-TREASURER—Mr. W. G. Merrow.
ASSISTANT TREASURER—Mr. P. Hamilton.
LIBRARIANS—Messrs. W. Hamilton, T. Barrie and W. Squires.

The secretary's report was a good one, showing the school to be in a flourishing condition, with a membership of about three hundred scholars and twenty-eight teachers. The financial report was also very satisfactory, showing the total receipts for 1891 to be have been $795 45 and the expenditure $661 08, leaving the very respectable balance in hand of $134 37.

Obituary.

The Late John Tully.

One of the oldest residents of North Monaghan passed away on Thursday in the person of Mr. John Tully, who has lived in that township, man and boy, for 63 years. He was a native of Scotland, coming to this country and settling with his parents on the farm where he lived and died, in 1829 He was 82 years of age. He had three brothers who came to the country with him. His father died in 1870. In 1843 he was married to Miss Esther Ann Sheriff, by whom he had seven children. She died in 1886. Mr. Tully's family consisted of three sons and four daughters, several of whom are still living at home. Mr. Tully, in his younger years, took an active part in township affairs. He was for twenty years assessor, occupied a seat in the council and once contested the township. He enjoyed the high respect of the community in which he lived so many years.

A Canadian Arbitrator.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—At the meeting of the Cabinet yesterday, the Behring Sea question was brought up. It is understood that the case has taken a favorable turn within the last few days and that Secretary Blaine has been advised that Lord Salisbury will agree to his suggestion as to the method of selecting three of the arbitrators from countries which have no interest whatever in the questions at issue. When these three neutral arbitrators have been agreed upon there need be no further delay in deciding upon the personnel of the tribunal, it having already been arranged that the United States and Great Britain shall each have the appointment of two of the members. Another point settled is that one of Great Britain's representatives shall be a resident of Canada. Edward J. Phelps, ex-Minister to England, is mentioned as most likely to be one of the arbitrators on the part of the United States.

Makes the Weak Strong

The marked benefit which people in run down or weakened state of health derive from Hood's Sarsaparilla, conclusively proves the claim that this medicine "makes the weak strong." It does not act like a stimulant, imparting fictitious strength from which there must follow a reaction of greater weakness than before, but in the most natural way Hood's Sarsaparilla overcomes creates an appetite, purifies the blood, and, in short, gives great bodily, nerve, mental and digestive strength.

That Tired Feeling

"I derived very much benefit from Hood's Sarsaparilla, which I took for general debility. It built me right up, and gave me an excellent appetite." ED. JENKINS, Mt. Savage, Md.

Fagged Out

"Last spring I was completely fagged out. My strength left me and I felt sick and miserable all the time, so that I could hardly attend to my business. I took one bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it cured me. There is nothing like it." R. C. BEGOLE, Editor Enterprise, Belleville, Mich.

Worn Out

"Hood's Sarsaparilla restored me to good health. Indeed, I might say truthfully it saved my life. To one feeling tired and worn out I would earnestly recommend a trial of Hood's Sarsaparilla." MRS. PHEBE MOSHER, 20 Brooks Street, East Boston, Mass.

In its new dress the Lumberman is one of the best printed and neatest trade publications of the Dominion, and there is not a more neatly printed one on the continent. It is, besides, excellent in its contents, which appeal to every interest of the particular trade it represents. The EXAMINER gives the Lumberman its best wishes for continued prosperity.

Evangelistic Meetings.

At the meeting last evening Mr. Meikle gave a most solemn address upon the consequences of sin from the parable of the rich man and Lazarus. He showed the terrible consequences of sin in the life to come; and he argued that sin must be a terrible thing when a God of love visited it with such a punishment. The address was a fitting sequel to the one of the previous evening, which was upon the law, making us to know him. There were several anxious enquirers who waited for conversation at the close of the meeting. The meetings will be continued to-morrow evening at the usual hour.—Com.

The Canning Great Concert.

The lover of high class music will not miss the great Whitney Mockridge concert in Bradburn's Opera House on Friday evening, Jan 20th. Yesterday we referred in extenso to the record and abilities of Mr. Mockridge; to-day Mrs. Mayo-Rhodes, the prima donna soprano. She is justly considered a great artist. She has one of the most powerful and dramatic voices now on the concert stage, which, combined with a magnificent stage presence, never fails to arouse her audiences to enthusiasm. Her success in oratorio has been wonderful, always being recalled after a first appearance. All the other members of the company are A1 in their special roles and combined, they give a concert of the most musically recherche character such as is seldom given in Peterborough. Moderate prices of admission have been fixed. The tickets are 25 cents, 35 cents and 50 cents. The reserved seat plan will be opened at Greatrex's drug store to-morrow, when it is expected there will be a rush for seats.

Oh, What a Cough!!

Will you heed the warning. The signal, perhaps, of the sure approach of that most terrible disease consumption. "EAST"-ERN HOSPITALITY.

Brilliant and Successful Masonic "At Home."

The Brethren of the Craft as Hosts—A Gay Gathering in the Masonic Hall—Delighted Guests of Delightful Hosts—The Deputy Grand Master Present—A Fine Musical Programme—An Evening of Genuine Enjoyment.

If the brethren of the Masonic fraternity in Peterborough are as well-skilled craftsmen as they are genial and successful entertainers they must be master Masons indeed. Their "At Home" given in their spacious and elegant lodge rooms, Water street, was in every way a brilliant and successful event. The rooms were thrown open to the wives of masons and their friends and friends' wives. The apartments were profusely decorated with tastefully disposed flags and banners, and presented a gay and inviting appearance. At a comparatively early hour the blue room began to fill with guests largely composed of handsome and handsomely dressed ladies—there being many brilliant costumes. R. W. Bro. B. Shortly, P.D.D.G.M., occupied the chair and the Past Masters' chairs on either side were occupied by V. W. Chas. Cameron, W. Bro. E. J. Winch, V. W. Bro. John O'Donnel, W. Bro. Quinlan, Port Hope; W. B. Bro. J. E. Belcher, W. Bro. G. Peck, W. Bro H. C. Rogers R. W. Bro. Dr. Chamberlain, W. Bro. A. St. A. Smith, W. Bro. T. E. Bradburn and W. Bro. R. E. Wood. R. W. Bro. Prof. Arlidge, Past Grand Organist of Provincial Grand Mark Lodge, Hampshire, England, who also holds grand provincial honours in the Royal Arch, England, was also present during the evening.

Bro. SHORTLY, on behalf of the Masons of Peterborough in a few graceful words, cordially welcomed the guests to the hospitality of the brethren. It was the custom of the Craft here to have an annual gathering at which the wives and daughters of members and their friends could be admitted, and he again welcomed those who had honoured the rooms with their presence and wished them

A HAPPY AND ENJOYABLE EVENING,

He referred to the presence of Hon. J. M. Gibson, R. W. Deputy Grand Master, and that right worshipful brother was escorted into the hall and to the dais by W. Bro. B. C. Rogers and was received with the "grand honours." The Deputy Grand Master was also personally presented to and welcomed by R. W. Bro. Shortly, P.D.D.G.M; by W. Bro. Bradburn, on behalf of Corinthian Lodge No. 101, and by W. Bro. A. St. A. Smith, on behalf of Peterborough Lodge, 155.

Deputy Grand Master GIBSON assured the brethren that he considered it a high honour to be present and participate in the proceedings of an evening, which, from appearances, promised to be so enjoyable. He had accepted the invitation of the brethren the more gladly because he was not expected to make a speech, especially as the presence of ladies made it necessary for brethren in the east to be very chary in their utterances. He had long been desirous of becoming better acquainted with Peterborough and his present visit had fully justified his desire. He was especially pleased to make the acquaintance of the brethren he had met. He supposed that the ladies were anxious to know why they could not become Masons. He might risk so much of the secrets as to say that they were not made Masons, not because they were able to keep secrets—not because they were women—but because they were not men. He was greatly pleased to know that Masonry was flourishing in Peterborough and that its condition was gratifying. The Deputy Grand Master closed his remarks by thanking the brethren with all his heart for the hearty and gratifying reception that had been accorded him.

The chairman then introduced R. W. Bro. Dr. Chamberlain, P.D.D.G.M. of St. Lawrence district. In the course of a racy and humourous little speech he said it afforded great pleasure to be at their "at home" at which he felt "at home." Masons met as such for the benefit of their brethren and of their fellowmen. Masonry was broad in its charity, for while it naturally gave preference to the claims of brethren, it was extended to every sort and condition of men. All the secrets of masonry were in the interests of their wives and children. He was pleased to meet them in the busy, bustling, thriving and delightfully situated town of Peterborough. His duties took him from one end of the province to the other and he knew of no town or city either (except of course Hon. Mr. Gibson's city, Hamilton), that showed the thrift, push, business activity and go-ahead-itiveness of Peterborough.

THE MUSICAL PROGRAMME

then followed. It consisted of three finely performed selections by the orchestra—"Forget-me-not gavotte," "Siege of Paris" and "O Ma-Mama" waltzes and songs.

Miss Vair sang Franz Abt's "Tell Me O Bird of the Wildwood," in an exceedingly pleasing manner. Her carefully cultured voice was in excellent form and she very creditably responded to the rather exacting vocal demands of her selection. Mr. Arlidge played her accompaniment.

Mr. Drope sang Maiden's pleasing baritone song, "Afterwards," with his usual excellence and taste. Miss Nellie Wrighton furnished his accompaniment.

Prof. Arlidge's flute solo—to Miss Wrighton's accompaniment—"Jenny Jones," by Cuntos, was the musical gem of the evening. Prof. Arlidge gives a beautifully round full tone throughout the gamut, and his executive facility and resources, made his performance of this brilliant selection a delightful rendering.

Mrs. Clyde Green sang Mattei's "Dear Heart" in a very pleasing and finished manner. Her voice is sweet and well controlled. Mr. Clarke furnished the accompaniment for this and the following selection with judgment and taste.

Mr. Lount had in "Madeline" by C. A. White, a song that just suited his voice, and he did it ample justice.

The programme closed with a song by Mrs. Macklin, Kummer's "Von Dir,"—of Thee—(with flute obligato). Her singing of this fine song was marked by the strength and sweetness, delicate shading and correct method that characterize her vocal performances, Miss Cuxton furnished excellent accompaniment on the piano and Mr. Butcher played the flute obligato with much taste.

From the sublime in song to the substantial was but the step from the blue room to the refreshment rooms, where a very choice and elegantly spread supper table, supplied by Bro. Johnny Watt, was discussed by relays of guests, who were greatly pleased with the fare, excellent in quality and well served.

At the conclusion of the programme, the guests spent an hour or two in the rooms in social intercourse, after which all retired with delightful memories of the graceful and whole-hearted hospitality of the brethren of the craft. Every detail was carefully attended to, the division of labour producing effective work. The following are the names of the several committees:

INVITATION COMMITTEE—W. Bro. R. E. Wood, chairman. Bros. Parker, Schofield, Dr. Carmichael, A. St. A. Smith, and W. Bro. E. A. Peck.

RECEPTION COMMITTEE—W. Bros. T. A. Hay, chairman, R. W. McFadden, W. Martin, and Bros. Parker, Johnston, and Walkey.

REFRESHMENT COMMITTEE—W. Bro. Spence, chairman, Bros. A. Elliott, Metheral, Herridge, Kingan and G. W. Hall.

DECORATION COMMITTEE—Bro. G. J. Early, chairman, W. Bros. Rush and Belcher, and Bros. Mercer and Wilcox.

PRINTING COMMITTEE—Bros. Bradburn, chairman, Dobbin and Bain.

PROGRAMME COMMITTEE—Bro. Dennistoun, chairman, and W. Bros. Rogers, Lundy, Broadrette, and Bros. Logan, Stevenson and J. H. Burnham.

GENERAL SECRETARY—Bro. Schofield.

The very effective decorations were the handiwork of Bro. J. J. Turner.

Bro. Crosby supplied the fine Williams pianoforte used on the occasion.

The Masonic brethren of Peterborough are to be congratulated upon the signal success of their "At Home" for 1892, and those who were fortunate enough to be their guests are to be congratulated on the privilege they enjoyed of passing a most enjoyable and delightful evening.

MRS. GRIMWOOD'S STORY.

THE TERRIBLE MARCH FROM MANIPUR AFTER THE MUTINY.

In Her Own Words the Heroine Tells the Tale—A Plucky Woman Who Braved Everything Now Writes an Interesting Account of Her Experiences.

Mrs. Grimwood's book, "My Three Years in Manipur and Escape from the Recent Mutiny," which is published by Messrs. Bentley & Son, London, Eng., is a volume of over 300 pages, and it is safe to say that there is not a single dull page in it from first to last.

The first edition (1,500) was sold out before it appeared, as a very great and widely spread interest is of course taken in the work. The Queen, who has expressed the greatest admiration of Mrs. Grimwood's heroic conduct, has a copy. Mrs. Grimwood, who is living with her sisters in London, is still far from strong, and continues to feel the lameness caused by the neglected sprain during her march.

Eight months have not passed since the tragedy of Manipur, in which to the general public the most dramatic act was that of Mrs. Grimwood's escape through the jungle, under fire, without covering on head or feet, and in agonizing uncertainty as to the fate of her husband, whom she was obliged to leave behind. This act in the tragedy opened at the Manipur Residency, where she had tended the wounded under fire from shot and shell, and where as she helped out the last wounded man she saw poor Brackenbury carried back into her cellars dead, all her nursing having been of no avail in the face of his dreadful injuries. The spirit and courage of this brave woman, recognized by Her Majesty in the decoration of the Red Cross, is now further proved by her production, after so short an interval, of this bright and spirited narrative of the disaster which involved her in so much personal suffering.

Mrs. Grimwood recalls the light hearts with which she and her husband entered that stage of her life's history which was to end so sadly. When her husband was offered the post of Political Agent at Manipur he and she were much elated. She pictured herself the dignified mistress of a Residency, possessing servants in scarlet and gold, with V. R. on their buttons, and a guard of honor to walk out with her whenever she chose. She saw visions of a large house and extensive grounds, and pictured the ensign of old England dominating all. With such chatty confessions the story opens. Of her first meeting with the Senaputti, afterwards the Jubraj, for instance, she says:

We liked what we saw of him on this occasion, and thought him very good-natured looking. The other brothers did not strike us at all, and there were so many people there, including important officers of State, that I became confused, and ended by shaking hands with a Sepoy, much to that warrior's astonishment.

Afterwards there is much praise of the Senaputti, who, it will be borne in mind, was the personage Mr. Grimwood was afterwards required by Mr. Quinton to arrest as Jubraj.

The Senaputti in particular was our very good friend. There was something about him that is not generally found in the character of a native. He was manly and generous to a fault, a good friend and a bitter enemy. We liked him because he was much more broad-minded than the rest. If he promised a thing, that thing would be done, and he would take the trouble to see himself that it was done, and not be content with simply giving the order. He was always doing little courteous acts to please us.

Among those acts of courtesy was the firing of the mountain guns to please Mrs. Grimwood, who naturally remarks, "How little we could foresee the terrible destruction those same guns were to bring upon our peaceful home in the near future!" The friendship with and admiration of the Senaputti is further illustrated by other passages too numerous to quote.

The Senaputti, by the way, it is incidentally stated, was supposed to be the happy owner of nine wives, and the other princes had almost as many.

The Teagal General, of whom we heard so much during the rebellion and who was one of the executed, is thus described by Mrs. Grimwood:

He was an old man, nearer eighty than seventy, I should think, taller than the average Manipuri and marvellously active for his age. He had a fine old face, much lined and wrinkled with age and the cares of state which had fallen upon him when he was quite a young man, and had in nowise lessened as his years increased. He had piercing black eyes, shaggy, overhanging, white eyebrows and white hair. His nose was long and slightly hooked, and his mouth was finely cut and very determined. The Teagal always reminded me of an eagle. He had the same keen, rugged expression and deep-set, glowing eyes. Few things happened without his knowledge and consent, and if he withheld his approbation from any matter there would invariably be a hitch in it somewhere. He was credited with more bloodshed than any man in the kingdom.

There were eight royal brothers in Manipur, and they were not quite a happy family even before the quarrels that led to the rebellion. At the Maharajah's Court, where three jesters were kept, there were the usual human follies to jest over. A wealthy goldsmith's daughter divided the affections of two of the princes. When the dynastic quarrels broke out, of course these two were found on different sides. The final quarrel came over the animosities of the ill-tempered Pucca Senna and the youngest prince, Zillah Singh, a graceful boy known at the Residency as "The Poem." This lad was forbidden the Durbar through the intrigues of Pucca Senna. Thereupon the lad flew to the Senaputti, who was the Pucca Senna's rival in love, and presently there was a night attack on the Maharajah's palace. The old Maharajah's arrant cowardice is clearly brought out in Mrs. Grimwood's narrative. He abdicated against the Resident's advice in the most abject way. The de facto Government seems to have been recognized by the Resident, who, in fact, found it to be a great improvement on the old one. The goldsmith's daughter was added to the harem of the Senaputti, henceforth known as the Jubraj. Everything was going on well when the community was taken by surprise; and not more surprised was it than our own Resident to learn that the Chief Commissioner, Mr. Quinton, was coming. The Jubraj became suspicious, not being able to believe that his former friend, the Resident, could not tell what was the matter. It was in these circumstances that Mr. Grimwood received from the Chief Commissioner the news that the new Maharajah was to be recognized, but that the ruling spirit of his Government, the Jubraj, was to be arrested at the Dubar and banished. Moreover, Mr. Grimwood was himself commanded to make the arrest.

It is abundantly clear from Mrs. Grimwood's narrative that the Jubraj suspected treachery, and it is hard to maintain after reading her story that the procedure adopted did not justify his suspicions. It was not till after the failure of the attempts to get him to the Durbar that Mr. Grimwood was sent to inform him plainly that he was wanted as a prisoner. The Jubraj did not fall in with the scheme, and with that night there came to an end all the bright visions of the lady of the Residency.

Mrs. Grimwood's account of the attack on the Residency and of the flight has been anticipated by the thrilling letter of hers that appeared in our columns earlier in the year. Her last sight of her husband was during the negotiations for terms with the Regent after the first attack on the Residency. She wished to accompany him to the office where the Regent's letter was being translated. Mrs. Grimwood writes:

He said I was safer where I was, and bade me good-by, telling me to keep a brave heart, that the firing was at an end, and peace about to be restored; and he told me to try and get some rest, as I looked so tired. I never saw him again.

Poor Mr. Brackenbury, who had been singing comic songs to his own banjo accompaniment the night before, was now lying in agony, arms and legs broken, in the Residency cellar, with other wounded.

One minute he would lie down, and next beg to be lifted up, and every now and then his ankle would commence bleeding, and cause him agony to have it bound up afresh. His face was gray and drawn, and damp dews collected on his forehead from the great pain he was suffering. * * * There were some terrible sights in the cellar that night—I pray I may never see any more like them—but being able to help the doctor was a great blessing to me, as it occupied my attention, and gave me no time to think of all the terrible events of the day and the wreck of our pretty home. I was very weary, too—in fact, we all were—and when at about 10:30 I asked everybody to come and get some of a dinner they seemed much more inclined to go to sleep, and no one ate much. The dinner was not inviting, but it was the best that could be got under the circumstances, I had had to do it all myself. One or two of the servants still remained, but they cowered down in corners of the house, and refused to move out or help me at all. Perhaps had we known that it was our last meal for nearly forty-eight hours, we should have taken care to make the most of it; but no thought of what was coming entered our minds, and long before the melancholy meal was ended most of the officers were dozing, and I felt as though I could sleep for a week without waking.

Her sleep was rudely disturbed by the deafening booms of big guns again.

For a few seconds I could not stir. Terror seemed to have seized hold of me and my limbs refused to move; but in a minute I recovered and ran through the house down to the cellar again, where every one had become alive to the fact that all was over for us. Where was my husband? What had become of them all? This thought nearly drove me mad with anxiety. I could not imagine what their fate had been, but I knew the anguish of mind my husband would endure when the sound of those terrible guns would tell him that we were being attacked again, as he knew we were almost powerless to make any resistance through lack of ammunition.

Instant retreat was inevitable, and commenced with the deplorable incident of the death of Mr. Brackenbury:

The movement had killed him, and he had died on the grass outside a few seconds after leaving the cellar. Better thus than if he had lived a few hours longer to bear the pain and torture of our terrible march; but it made one's heart ache to leave that young lad lying there dead alone in the darkened cellar. I went back there just before we left the place, and covered him up gently with a sheet that was lying on the ground, and I almost envied him wrapped in the cold slumber of death, which had taken all pain and suffering away.

This is how Mrs. Grimwood was equipped for the flight:

Shells burst around us at every turn and kept striking the trees and knocking off great branches. All idea of going up into the house had to be abandoned, so I could not get a hat or cloak or anything for the journey before us and had to start as I was. Just before lunch time I had taken off the close fitting Winter gown which I had put on in the morning, and instead had arrayed myself in a blue serge skirt and white silk blouse, which gave me more freedom for my work in the hospital. I could not have chosen better as far as a walking costume went, and should have been all right if only I had been able to collect a few outdoor garments—hat, cloak and boots, for instance. As things happened I was wearing on my feet thin patent leather slippers, which were never meant for out-of-door use, and my stockings were the ordinary flimsy kind that women generally wear. My dress had got soiled already in the hospital and was not improved by the march afterwards; but I managed to get it washed when we eventually reached British territory, and have it by me to this day. It will be preserved as an interesting relic.

From 2 o'clock in the morning, all day and far into the next night, Mrs. Grimwood had to march, often under fire, once through water and with bare feet, her shoes having quickly given out. The officers gave her their great coats and bore the intense cold themselves while she slept from sheer fatigue, in spite of all her anxiety, as she had "seldom slept in a comfortable bed at home." When the Ghoorkas were at last sighted, and it was still doubtful whether they were Ghoorkas, a few minutes of suspense seemed hours.

At Cachar Mrs Grimwood saw the telegram arrive bringing news of her husband's death. "Well for me was it," she says, "that I was ignorant of my husband's fate. Had I known when we left the Residency that night that he and I were never to meet on God's earth I could never have faced that march."

The great popularity of Ayer's Pills as a cathartic is due no less to their promptness and efficacy than to their coating of sugar and freedom from any injurious effects. Children take them readily. See Ayer's almanac for this year, just out.

"August Flower"

What Is It For?

This is the query perpetually on your little boy's lips. And he is no worse than the bigger, older, balder-headed boys. Life is an interrogation point. "What is it for?" we continually cry from the cradle to the grave. So with this little introductory sermon we turn and ask: "What is AUGUST FLOWER FOR?" As easily answered as asked: It is for Dyspepsia. It is a special remedy for the Stomach and Liver. Nothing more than this; but this brimful. We believe August Flower cures Dyspepsia. We know it will. We have reasons for knowing it. Twenty years ago it started in a small country town. To-day it has an honored place in every city and country store, possesses one of the largest manufacturing plants in the country and sells everywhere. Why is this? The reason is as simple as a child's thought. It is honest, does one thing, and does it right along—it cures Dyspepsia.

G. G. GREEN, Sole Man'fr, Woodbury, N.J.

A BOOTBLACK'S LUCK.

But the boy stirred new well springs in his heart, of love and gentleness. He was a quiet, gentle child, with an active brain, but delicate constitution, one of the frail little ones who seem utterly unfit to cope with the trials and sorrows of this hard world. Willing, respected and gentlemanly, he was trusted with many errands that Mr. Meredith would have hesitated to give to a boy of less refinement and intelligence, and his gratitude made him ever eager to do his best to please his kind friend.

Winter was over, and April winds sweeping over the city, when one day Mr. Meredith sat waiting an answer to a note, in a state of wondering impatience. It was something altogether new for George to loiter on the way, or to neglect any detail of an errand. Yet he had been sent an a mission that need not occupy twenty minutes, and three hours had elapsed without his return.

Impatience was giving away to uneasiness, when a policeman presented himself.

"Lad employed here name of Scott?" he asked.

"Yes, what has happened?"

"Knocked down by a runaway team; badly hurt. We took him home, and he wanted me to let you know why he was away."

"Thanks. I will go to him."

He took up his hat as he spoke, wondering himself at the thrill of pain at his heart. He knew then that he loved the boy as he had not loved any one for many years. The lad's own sweetness, with the eyes that were a memory of his mother, had endeared him to the world-worn lawyer, till it was with positive pain he bent over the bed and saw the little face white and drawn with agony.

"My poor boy!" he said, tenderly. "what can I do for you?"

"Did mother go away?" the child whispered. "She said I might see you alone.'

"There is no one here but ourselves."

"Maybe I'm wicked," the child said, "because mother told me not to tell you what I am going to tell you now. No, please; don't stop me. I'm badly hurt, sir, and I may die, and mother will be all alone; and so I want to tell you that she knew you once, many years ago, and that my name was George Meredith Scott. I was named for you, sir; and mother's told me so much about you, and how good you always were, that I am sure you will be kind to her if I die."

"You may be sure, George, that while I live your mother will never want a friend."

Presently she came in, a pale shadow of his brilliant young love, and yet when they greeted each other the voices of both were unsteady, and in each heart was a memory that made the meeting at once a pain and a joy.

Over the little bed where George lay for weeks in patient suffering, George Meredith once more let his heart expand to new hope, loving with deep, protecting affection his love of long ago.

And the woman who had once thought life was to be all brightness, and who had shrunk from even a shadow on her path, knew at last what a heart she had once rejected. That he could love her again, with her beauty faded, her life broken by sorrow, did not occur to her, though she knew that her passionate gratitude to him had long been love, deep, sincere love, such as she had thought buried forever in her husband's grave.

It was in their first grateful joy over Dr. Turner's assurance that George was out of danger and would entirely recover, that these two long separated hearts met at last.

They scarcely could have told themselves in what words they exchanged vows of fidelity and love, but in Miss Scott's heart there was not one thought of the worldly gain that would follow her marriage, and George Meredith knew that for love, and by love alone, his wife was won at last.

Drowned While Out Driving.

PEMBROKE, Ont., Jan. 14.—Mr. Butler of Allumette Island and his sister, Miss Kate Butler, started to cross the Allumette Lake to the town on a sleigh. When not very far from Desjardins wharf the team and sleigh broke through the ice. Miss Butler was precipitated into the water and immediately disappeared under the ice, drowning in a few seconds. One of the horses was drowned.

The London Chronicle says: "It is probable that it was a lively recollection of the Alabama award which caused a hitch in the Behring Sea negotiations. The English representatives need beware of all ambiguous proposals emanating from the other side. We believe, however, that the obstacle will not prove insurmountable."

Mr. Varley, a social purist, who has recently visited Singapore, has written to Lord Salisbury, charging the Government with permitting a horrible traffic in Chinese coolies to be carried on in Singapore. He says these coolies are drafted by thousands, almost naked, and thrust into large receiving sheds in Singapore by agents, commonly called slave dealers, where they are shipped by English steamers to Java, Sumatra, Borneo and other countries and hired out by agents to a system of enforced labor, where they have no voice concerning their position, work or pay.

Prince George of Wales.

and on his own merits. When in command of the gunboat Thrush a couple of years ago he was stationed at Halifax for some time and paid a short visit to Montreal.

As the younger son George was much in the background, but his many lovable qualities endeared him to his associates, and their faithful reports won him a greater popularity with the English people than his more exclusive elder brother ever obtained. George was generally supposed, too, to be of much sterner stuff mentally than the heir-presumptive, and the popularity of the young successor will go far to temper public sorrow for the dead prince.

George is something under the usual size, of a slender but well-knit figure. His disposition is remarkably sunny and his manners hearty and pleasing.

Prince George Engaged.

The gossip concerning the succession which was freely indulged in during the illness of the Duke has been greatly increased by his death. It is generally agreed that haste will now be made in bringing about marriage of Prince George to remove the possibility of the Fife succession. As the succession now stands, in event of the death of Prince of Wales and Prince George, the throne of England would fall to the wife of the Duke of Fife, and after her death to Lady Alexandra Duff, her daughter, who is not yet a year old. This possibility is not viewed with equanimity by the members of nobility, who believe that all the heirs to the throne should be of the full blood royal.

It is hinted very broadly that a marriage between Prince George and Princess Victoria Mary of Teck will be arranged.

The weekly paper, Modern Society, however, to-day asserts that a marriage has already been arranged between Prince George and a daughter of Prince and Princess Christian. Princess Christian is the third daughter of the Queen and was married to Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein - Souderburgh - Augustenburg on July 5, 1866. There are four children of this marriage, two sons and two daughters. The eldest daughter, Princess Victoria Louise, was born May 3, 1870, and the younger Princess, Francesca Josepha, was born Aug. 14, 1870.

THE DUKE'S BETROTHED.

Sketch and Peculiarities of the Princess Victoria of Teck.

Prince Albert's betrothal to his cousin, Princess Victoria Mary of Teck, took place on Dec. 4, 1891, and was announced with the approval of all parties interested, on the 6th. Princess Victoria, or to describe her more accurately, Princess Victoria Mary Augusta Louise Olga Pauline Claudine Agnes, is the eldest child and only daughter of His Serene Highness the Duke of Teck and Princess Mary Adelaide, daughter of H. R. H. Prince Adolphus Frederick Duke of Cambridge, the seventh son of H. Majesty King George III., was born at Kensington Palace on May 26, 1867, and is therefore in her 25th year. Her mother, the Duchess of Teck, has always been a most popular lady and the Princess Victoria Mary is said to greatly resemble her both in person and manner. The Duchess is much given to embonpoint, and this the daughter inherits, and rumor has it that so much does she dread the approach of obesity that she has for two years past subsisted almost exclusively on a diet of toast.

The Princess's Anguish.

The condition of Princess May is pitiable. She wanders from room to room, weeping bitterly. She cannot be made to stay in one place for two minutes together, and she appears to be dazed at the sudden taking off of her betrothed husband. She refuses altogether to touch food and her terrible distress and wordless sorrow is causing much apprehension regarding her.

Death Stops the Looms.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—At Belfast the looms which were weaving the linen for the household of the dead Prince have been stopped and at Spitalfields where the satin for the wedding dress of Princess Mary was in hand the looms also stand still by order of death.

WHERE HE DIED.

Sandringham House, the Residence of the Prince of Wales.

Sandringham House, where the young Prince died, is in Norfolk county, near Norwich. Wolferton Station, on the Lynn branch of the Great Eastern Railway, a which visitors to Sandringham leave the train, lies rather low. The country between Wolferton and the Wash, consisting partly of reclaimed land, is a level expanse of meadow and arable; but beyond the station, hills of moderate elevation, which divide the village from what may be termed the plateau of Sandringham, run in ascending waves up to "the Heights." The country seaward is so flat that of a clear day there is a wide view over the sea toward Lynn on the left, and of the Lincolnshire coast, with the spire of Boston Church just visible in front. The farm and laborers' dwellings and a substantial old-fashioned house, inhabited by a country gentleman, on the Prince's estate, are seen below. The station is about seven miles from Lynn, two miles from the house, and not quite so far from the sea.

In 1862 Lord Palmerston recommended the estate to the notice of the Prince Consort, then in search of a suitable residence for his son, and as Mr. Spencer Cowper, the owner, was willing to sell the purchase was effected for the sum of £220,000, or $1,000,000, and in 1863 the Prince of Wales entered on the ownership of Sandringham. The estate contains a little over 8000 acres —one-third being very good mixed soil, one-third grass, marsh and arable and one-third of a kind suitable to game coverts and best left to pheasants and rabbits—and although the Cowpers improved the property the price for which it was sold was certainly tenfold that for which it could have been purchased in the time of Charles II. But the desert may indeed be said to have bloomed into a garden since the manor-house was handed over to the royal tenant. In 1869 Sandringham as it appears to-day replaced the residence which Mr. Spencer and Lady Harriet Cowper had rendered habitable and comfortable.

Sandringham may be considered one of the most successful combinations of the art of "laying out" with the natural condition of the land that can be well conceived; for with infinite care and taste, and at vast expense, every feature of the lanscape has been turned to account. Extensive plantations admirably planned have covered the land, where it is not adapted for pasture or culture, with masses of foliage, and skilfully conducted rivulets have been adapted to feed the lakes which lend such charms to the grounds.

The President's Condolence.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Sir Julian Pauncefote addressed to Secretary Blaine to-day a note, in which he said:

"It is my sorrowful duty to announce to you the lamentable intelligence which I have just received from the Marquis of Salisbury of the death this morning at Sandringham of H. R. H. the Duke of Clarence.

In replying to this note Secretary Blaine said:

"I have conveyed to the President the melancholy information you communicate in your note of this date of the death of H.R.H. the Duke of Clarence and Avondale, and I am directed by the President to express the sorrow with which he learns of this sad bereavement suffered by Her Majesty and the royal family.

By a telegraphic instruction sent to-day the minister of the United States has been directed to make suitable communication of the President's deep regret and sincere condolence.

Two Verdicts for Mary.

HAMILTON, Jan. 15.—At the Assizes today Mary Bell, aged 19, of Goderich, obtained a verdict of $500 and $650 agains Nathan Dougherty of East Flamboro. The plaintiff testified that she had known Dougherty some years and that he paid attentions to her in 1889 and 1890 and promised to marry her. In the summer of 1891 she had a child to him. She produced one letter from the defendant—the only one she had kept, having at the suggestion of Dougherty destroyed the others. This one letter was pretty full of expressions of loneliness at an enforced absence of a short time from "Mamie" and of hope for a meeting "on Sunday." Miss Bell swore that Dougherty promised in September, 1890, to marry her, but did not set any date.

A CANADIAN VISCOUNTESS.

The New Viscount of Dillon Married an Ottawa Lady

OTTAWA, Jan. 15.—By the death of Viscount Dillon a couple of days ago his eldest son, Harold Arthur, succeeds him in the title. The new viscount was born in 1844 and was at one time stationed in Canada as an officer in the rifle brigade. He married in 1870 Julia, daughter of the late L. P. Stanton, a member of the civil service. There is issue of the marriage one son, Harry Lee Stanton, born 1874. Viscountess Dillon is a sister of Mrs. Nelson, wife of the present Lieut.-Governor of British Columbia, and she has two brothers in the civil service, Ottawa.

The present Lady De Blaquiere is also a Canadian, and is the daughter of Mr. George Desbarats of Montreal, and sister of Mr. George J. Desbarats of the Railway and Canals Department of the Civil Service. She was born in Ottawa while her father resided here as contractor for the Government printing.

GLENGARRY, Ont., Jan. 15.—Rory Macleannan (Conservative) defeated McArthur (Liberal) in the Glengarry bye-election yesterday caused by the unseating of Mr. Macleannan. The majority was 236.

Chapleau's Retirement.

OTTAWA, Jan. 15.—Hon. J. A. Chapleau will definitely leave the Cabinet immediately after the Quebec provincial elections and the bye-elections are over.

L. A. Taché, late private secretary to Mr. Chapleau, said: "When the Quebec provincial elections are over, and the bye-elections passed, Mr. Chapleau will retire from the Cabinet on the ground of ill-health. His health is the only thing which prevents him from being an active participant in the Quebec struggle. I don't think he will accept the Lieut.-Governorship. I think he will retire for rest."

WILL MOVE ON MEXICO.

GARZA SAID TO BE PREPARING TO ADVANCE HIS FORCES.

Scouting Parties Find No Trace of Revolutionists—Infantry Ordered to the Rio Grande—Garza's Supposed Headquarters.

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 16.—Gen. David Stanley has just received confidential reports from the commanders of the different troops engaged in scouting for Garza to the effect that Garza and his men are engaged in mustering greater strength.

The United States authorities along the river between Laredo and Brownsville have received reliable information from Mexican spies that Garza now has his headquarters on the Mexican and Texas Railroad, about one hundred miles east of Laredo, and is receiving recruits from Mexico and various parts of Texas daily. These spies have discovered that there will be a concerted move of the entire revolutionary forces made on Mexico within ten days. These reports have recently stirred up the military authorities on both sides of the river. The United States troops are to be concentrated in the territory occupied by the revolutionists as rapidly as possible.

RIO GRANDE CITY, TEX., Jan. 16.—There is no truth in the report sent from Laredo that Garza's men attacked United States troops south of Edinburgh and rescued revolutionists prisoners. Every prisoner sent from this place to Brownsville has reached there in safety.

It seems that bandits are taking advantage of the Garza revolution to extort money, creating the impression at the same time that Garza is doing it. Recently Don Jose Vaello, a well-to-do stockman residing near Lenavides, received a letter from Mier, Mexico, signed "G. E. C.," telling him to put $2000 in an envelope and place it under a rock at a certain corner of the community schoolhouse.

The letter informed Don Jose that unless he did as commanded he would be killed. He communicated with Sheriff Buckley of San Diego. An envelope containing a lot of brown paper was placed at the spot. Close watch was kept for several nights, but no one came. At last the watch was withdrawn and that very night the envelope disappeared.

It seems queer to hear Catarino Garza spoken of as bandit, for there is only one instance in which he did not pay for everything he got. That time was in Mexico, when his band forced Louis Yzaguirre to give them two sheep. This occurred on Sept. 17 at Santa Lucia. The fact leaked out and Mexican officials arrested Yzaguirre, charging him with helping the revolutionists. He was put in jail, but finally acquitted. He threatened to bring suit against the Mexican Government, and to indemnify him, notwithstanding that he had had no previous military experience, he was made a captain in the regular army and placed in charge of the garrison at Camargo, which he now commands.

Lieut. Short and a detachment of Troop A, who have been at Havana for a week, came in to-day. They found a raft which the revolutionists had used in crossing the river, and the man who built it, but nothing else. Captain McKay and Troop C returned to-day from a two-weeks' scout without success. The troops will rest for several days and then go out on another scout under Lieut. Short.

Captain J. O. McKay says that he believes the Garza movement, so far as the Texas part is concerned, has collapsed, but he thinks that if there is anything to be done in Mexico Garza will mass the forces now in Texas at Los Angeles, Tex., and await a favorable opportunity to cross the river.

FORT RENO, Okla., Jan. 16.—The infantry companies now stationed at Fort Reno, Okla., have been ordered to Texas for service. It is presumed they are to take part in the troubles on the Rio Grande.

DEMING, N.M., Jan. 16.—An American named Martinez reached here from Ascension, Mex., to-day, and reports the revolutionists strongly fortified in a large stone grist mill in the outskirts of the town. They number 200 well-armed men, and are abundantly supplied with food. The residents are in sympathy with them, and no attempt has been made to dislodge the revolutionists from their position, nor will there be until the troops come.

Gais, the insurgent leader, is reported as issuing orders to refrain from all violence until a decisive battle is fought. The town is practically deserted. No business is being transacted and all the buildings, including private residences, have been barricaded. The flame of revolution have been smoldering for some time and it was doubtless increased by the news of the Garza revolt. It is scarcely probable that the outbreak would have occurred had it not been for the election of Ancheita to the Presidency of the town in defiance of public opinion.

ONLY ILL ONE WEEK.

FUNERAL OF THE DEAD PRINCE ON THURSDAY.

Particulars of the Illness of the Duke of Clarence—The Queen Inconsolable Over the Loss of Her Grandson, Who Loved Her Passionately.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—The Queen has directed the publication of the following: "Her Majesty received early Thursday morning, with the deepest grief, the news of a calamity that has befallen the royal family and the whole nation in the fatal termination of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale's short illness. The Queen was devotedly attached to her beloved grandson, who always evinced the greatest affection toward Her Majesty, and whose charming disposition and high character had endeared him to her since his childhood."

Her Majesty on receiving the news of the Duke's critical illness on Wednesday was anxious to proceed at once to Sandringham, but was dissuaded from doing so by her physicians. Arrangements are being made to hold funeral services in all English churches.

The gravest apprehension is felt in many quarters regarding the condition of the Princess of Wales. Her Royal Highness takes the death of her son very much to heart, and refuses to be comforted. A long service in the sick rooms of both Prince George and Prince Victor has naturally had the effect of greatly debilitating her and to-day she is completely prostrated. Dr. Laking, one of the physicians who attended the Duke in his last illness, remains at Sandringham, where his services are required by the Princess of Wales and Princess May.

The alarm of society people over the prospect of social re-unions being under a taboo the greater part of the coming season will be relieved by the announcement that the Queen, recognizing the necessities of society, will hold the usual May drawing-rooms and levees.

The Prince of Wales and family will not appear in public for a year to come.

The death of the Duke of Clarence has recalled the fact that he was born prematurely and that he always lacked the robustness of Prince George.

The Princess of Wales has not yet recovered from her grief and prostration. The latest from Sandringham to-night is that Dr. Laking is detained watching the Princess of Wales and Princess May, fearing that influenza may attack them.

The Funeral.

Prince George, who is still weak from his attack of typhoid fever, is also the cause of anxiety. The doctors have advised the Prince of Wales, as soon as possible, to remove his family from the scene of affliction.

Princess May's future is undoubtedly the subject of deep national concern. So profound and universal is the sympathy over her loss that it would be no surprise if Parliament accorded her some provision as a maiden widow. If the report be true that Prince George is attached to a daughter of Prince Christian his known streng will makes the project of an alliance with Princess May improbable. In the family circle Prince George has long been recognized as the superior of his brother in intellect, force of character and open geniality of disposition. From boyhood he has always held his own against his brother's pretensions as the elder. The concurrent opinion of those around the throne points to the future popularity of Prince George, if he lives to become the King.

The Queen has not yet decided upon the date of the funeral, but it will probably be Thursday next. Cabinet communications with the Prince of Wales and the Queen on the plan of interment have elicited an expression of feeling from the Prince of Wales against any ceremonial pomp. The day of the funeral will be observed as a day of general mourning throughout the country.

The Record of His Illness.

Nothing was publicly known of the Duke's illness until Monday, though he was really placed under the doctor's care previous to Thursday. Wednesday of last week he joined a party which shot over Sandringham covers as far as Wolferton station. The Duke remained with the party all day, but at luncheon he complained of being cold. At the close of the shooting he walked up the hill to Sandringham instead of driving with the remainder of the party. In the evening he dined with the company, but retired earlier than usual.

The following day an attempt was made to dissuade him from joining the shooting party, but he felt that he was equal to the exercise. After luncheon, however, he was compelled to return home, being accompanied in his walk thither by the Princess May and the Duke and Duchess of Teck. Notwithstanding the fact that the Duke was really ill he appeared at dinner that evening, but again retired early to rest.

On Friday it could no longer be disguised that his illness had assumed a serious character. He expressed a desire to attend the birthday festivities in his honor, but was unable to do so.

On Saturday his symptoms became so alarming that Dr. Laking was telegraphed for. On Sunday the services of Dr. Broadbent were called in, and the first bulletin as to his illness was made public. Even then people did not take it seriously.

Until Wednesday night the official bulletins issued by the doctors gave no great reason for anxiety. Morning papers contain resolutions passed by local bodies in the provincial towns to participate in the public celebration of the Duke's wedding. Before these papers were sold off the newsstands extras were on the streets containing the announcement of the Duke's death.

The Lancet publishes the following technical account of the Duke's illness, which is derived from an official source:

"He was attacked by influenza on Thursday, Jan. 7, but he first felt really ill on Friday, Jan. 8, when he was unable to attend the birthday dinner given in his honor. On Saturday, Jan. 9, a patch of pneumonic consolidation was discovered at the base of his left lung. There had been no distinct rigor, but His Royal Highness appears to have had some shivering on Thursday, the 7th.

"On Sunday morning, Jan. 10, an examination of the chest showed a considerable extension of the inflammation, which then involved a great part of the left lung, also a small portion of the right. His temperature was 103, his pulse about 90 and of good character, his respiration 30 and his intellect perfectly clear. The night of the 9th he was very restless. The night of the 10th there were snatches of sleep, and at one time his temperature fell below 102. No material change took place in his condition on Monday. His left lung was clearing up, but the inflammation was spreading in the right lung. During the night of Monday there was not much sleep. His condition in the morning was not satisfactory, though physical signs gave evidence of a further clearing up of the lungs. In the course of the day nourishment was taken well and the pulse continued good, but in the evening the patient became more excited.

"During Tuesday night he was very delirious and the delirium continued throughout Wednesday, although the lung condition materially improved. Further marked improvement in his general condition took place in the early part of Wednesday night. The delirium was less violet and less continuous with intervals of sleep, but about 2 a.m. collapse suddenly supervened with unconsciousness and this morning, seven hours later, he was dead."

He Loved His Mother.

There was one most remarkable feature in the Duke's character, and that was his affection for his mother and sister. He continually turned the conversation to them and they were evidently always in his thoughts. He quoted what they had said and spoke of what they were doing. They often came to see him, when all lunched together, and as they walked across the college court the Duke would draw his arm through his mother's and press her close to his.

The Princess of Wales, in her own family, has never suffered a nearer bereavement than the recent death of her niece, the Grand Duchess Paul of Russia, who was daughter to her brother, King George of Greece. Her father, mother, brothers and sisters are all alive.

His Grandmother's Favorite.

Next to the Princess of Wales the current of public sympathy runs deeply with the Queen. The poor old lady is dreadfully upset by her favorite grandson's death. While she is in remarkable good health for a woman of her years, it is not considered advisable by her doctors to risk crossing the Channel during the present stormy weather. It was all the Duke of Connaught and her doctors could do to dissuade her from going to Sandringham to the bedside of Clarence. Bulletins were sent her every hour. Until Wednesday night she does not seem to have realised that the Duke's illness was really serious.

It was the Queen who insisted upon giving Albert Victor the title of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale, despite the singular fatality attending it. The first Duke of Clarence, who was the third son of Edward III., died from riotous living in Italy. The Prince best known as the Duke of Clarence was the unhappy person put to death in the Tower in 1478.

The Duke of Albany held the title of Earl Clarence. His unfortunate death a few years ago is within the memory of all. For 300 years the title was in abeyance and was not revived until it was conferred by George III. on his son, afterwards William IV. He was the only Duke of Clarence who did not die before reaching 30 years of age. With this fatal title on his shoulders Prince Albert Victor took his seat in the House of Lords as peer on June 23 last, on which occasion he was introduced by the Prince of Wales and the Duke of Edinburgh. The ceremony was witnessed by the Princess of Wales and the Princesses Victoria and Maud, who occupied seats in the royal gallery. A message was read from the Queen declaring her wish that the Duke of Clarence should rank after the Duke of Connaught, but take precedence of the Duke of Albany.

The news of the Duke's death was dramatic because it was unexpected except among people who had information aside from the newspapers and official bulletins. Of course every one knew that as he was suffering from influenza, complicated with pneumonia, the Duke must be in danger.

Irish Opinion.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—The Irish newspapers all contain kindly articles upon the death of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale. The National Press, the organ of the McCarthyites, touchingly refers to the idyl of love which has been so painfully ended. It says: "All idea of royalty disappears before the malady in human life which touches every man's heart."

The Freeman's Journal (McCarthyite) says: "The Duke of Clarence and Avondale made no enemies. He will be mourned by all kindly and generous men with deep sympathy for his parents. The Prince of Wales has faults. He has sometimes forgotten that royalty has duties as well as rights, but the Prince has a certain royal generosity and kindness of heart which are liked by the people. The Princess of Wales has won the love and esteem of all. We believe she has sympathy for the sufferings and wrongs of the people of Ireland."

The Independent (Parnellite) says: "The utmost sympathy goes out from the hearts of the Irish people for the family in their deep affliction. The Duke of Clarence and Avondale was popular in Dublin. When he was here for a few days recently with his brother, Prince George, he visited Mr. Parnell's grave in Glasnevin cemetery."

Effect in India.

CALCUTTA, Jan. 16.—The death of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale has caused a widespread and deep sorrow throughout India. The Viceroy's Council was to hold a meeting to-day, but when the members assembled the Marquis of Lansdowne announced that no meeting would take place and that all public business would be suspended to-day as a mark of respect to the dead Prince. The Rajah of Bhinga, on behalf of the native races, expressed the deepest regret at the death of the Duke and the most profound sympathy with the Imperial family. All the public fetes and the races have been postponed.

Prince Ferdinand in Peril.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—The Eclair yesterday publishes a despatch from Sofia stating that fifty army officers were arrested in that city on the charge of being implicated in a plot against the lives of Prince Ferdinand, the ruler of Bulgaria, and M. Stambuloff, the Bulgarian Prime Minister.

The despatch adds that a report is current in Belgrade that Prince Ferdinand had a narrow escape from being poisoned by strychnine at the hands of the palace cook. Fortunately the man was observed acting in a suspicious manner. He was watched and was detected in the very act of placing the strychnine in some dish he had prepared for the Prince.

The Morocco Trouble.

TANGIER, Jan. 16.—The Sultan of Morocco has summoned to his presence the governor of Tangier with a view to conceding the demands of the insurgents for the deposition of that official.

The Next Session.

The indications are that the session of the Ontario Legislature, which will begin on February 11th, will be a quiet one. There has been during the year no demand for legislation except with reference to the mining laws, which are likely to be discussed freely. The agitation on the subject of French schools and Separate Schools ceased with the general elections. Mr. White, a leading member of the Opposition, has been talking annexation, and the leader of the Government has been writing on the other side of the question. It will not be surprising if these incidents are discussed during the session. The familiar face of Col. Gilmour will be missed, and Col. Clarke will sit at the clerk's table instead of in front row of the treasury benches. Mr. Metcalfe is giving up his seat in the Legislature in the hope of representing Kingston in the Federal Parliament; and Mr. Meredith is also said to be looking towards Ottawa. Mr. E. F. Clarke, being relieved of the duties attached to the mayoralty of Toronto, will probably take a larger share in the discussions in the Legislature. The great majority of the people of the Province are well satisfied with the present Administration, and if Mr. Meredith goes, there will be really nothing to keep the Opposition together.—Globe.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH.

Meeting of the "Mutual Admiration Society."

A Lively Session—The Council and the Sewerage Question—An Ambulance for the Town Required — The Medical Health Officers' Report Presented and Discussed.

A meeting of the above was held last evening in the Town Clerk's office, when there were present Messrs. Wm. Lech, chairman, Dr. Clarke, Medical Health Officer, Chief Rezsel, Medical Health Inspector, John R. Cobb, secretary, Edgecombe Pearse, B. Shortly, H. Dunne, Dr. Brennan, Dr. Fife.

Minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. In answer to Mr. Lech, Chief Rezsel reported that he has had no complaints recently regarding

THE EDISON SEWER.

Dr. Clarke said that he had heard some complaints about it. The people were afraid of disease being spread through its agency.

Mr. DUNNE said that the main sewer was worse than the Edison. It was very offensive, particularly in warm dry weather. He said that if the council did not attend to the matter, the Board ought to notify Dr. Bryce, the Provincial Health Officer in Toronto.

Mr LECH thought this was just the right time to notify them, to get the necessary work done.

In answer to Dr. Brennan, Mr. Dunne said Dr. Bryce could come to town and close all the sewers at present in use.

Dr. CLARKE quoted the Act of Parliment in support of an appeal to the Provincial Board.

Several members of the Board here spoke and all seemed to think that some decided action was necessary, to compel the council to take proper means so that the sewers, particularly the main sewer, should not be as they are now, sources of disease. The matter was discussed later.

The medical health officer then presented his annual report to the board as follows:

MEDICAL OFFICER'S REPORT.

To the Chairman and Members of the Peterborough Board of Health.

GENTLEMEN,—In presenting my report for the year 1891 I have to congratulate you on the low per centage of infectious disease, and on what may certainly be credited with being to a great extent the cause—a very great amount of sanitary work done, again largely in excess of any preceding year. At the same time health operations are assuming a more definite form. The work is becoming more systematic, although there is much to be desired yet. On the part of the public too, their is a greater disposition to rate sanitary work at its proper value. A few years ago it was laughed at as being largely frivolous and unnecessary. Later on a state of extreme and abnormal sensitiveness arose, the principal symptoms of which were a demand for burdensome and tyrannical precautions, and a strong desire to make some one personally responsible for every case of infectious disease. We are now reaching the stage of common sense, in which good health measures are desired and nothing impracticable demanded.

DEATH RATE.

In 1890 the death rate was phenomenally low, being only 12.85 to the thousand. In 1891 we had the natural recoil, the rate having risen to 16½. Although considerably higher than that of the preceding year, the rate is in reality a low one, the highest authority on the subject—the Registrar-general of England—considering 17 per thousand as a standard to be aimed at by sanitarians. The increase is due not so much to infectious disease, for had there not been a single death from that cause the rate would still be almost 16, but to a large number of deaths of old persons. People of advanced age who have been living on the verge of the grave for years are apt to succumb almost en masse when any wave of physical depression passes over the country, and the year 1891 has been a peculiarly depressing one throughout the world. Another consideration is that Peterborough has come to the most trying point of its existence in a sanitary sense. The town has become crowded in the central parts and we have no sewerage. With a low rate of mortality now, an efficient system of sewerage could not fail to lower it still more.

INFECTIOUS DISEASES.

Nine deaths from diphtheria, seven from typhoid fever, and three from measles, constitute the total mortality from this cause during the year. Our percentage is low; many of the towns and cities of Ontario having been extensively ravaged. Last April a number of cases of diphtheria appeared, principally in the vicinity of the West Ward school, and the greatest fatality of the year occurred at this time. I visited most of the places personally, and with the assistance of the sanitary inspectors took strict measures for isolation and disinfection which fortunately subdued it in three or four weeks. It was thought by some that the school should be closed, but as there seemed to be no infection arising from the building it was not considered necessary. A recent order-in-council of the Ontario Government entails still more stringent measures than hitherto on the appearance of diphtheria and particularly in case of deaths occurring therefrom, and your officers will see that these requirements are carried out. Regarding typhoid fever I find a difficulty in having cases reported partly because no placards are put up and partly because in Peterborough this disease is so masked by malaria that it is hard to tell where the one ends and the other begins. Many cases have run a malarial course all through, no distinctively typhoid symptoms being developed. In others the typhoid symptoms come on late, all at once. The only way out of the difficulty is to have all cases of fever presenting the malarial element reported as well as those of pure typhoid.

SLAUGHTER HOUSES.

It is believed that there has been very little if any slaughtering in town during the last summer, at least, for the first time in many years, scarcely any complaints have been made. It is quite easy to carry on a slaughter house without nuisance provided no pigs be kept and all the pigs were moved out of town. The slaughter house question, it is to be hoped, is a thing of the past, for it has been a most annoying matter to deal with.

REMOVAL OF GARBAGE AND EXCRETA.

There has been more removed this year than probably in all previous years put together, owing probably to the operation of Councillor Moore's by-law, which was one of the best health measures ever devised. The employment of a public scavenger was a step ahead, but only a step, for the care of the matter is not yet reached. At present people have to pay for everything removed in proportion to the quantity, hence it is but natural that much rubbish is scattered about or concealed rather than gathered up. What is wanted is a system that will induce the public to bring out and expose for collection all the rubbish of their yards and houses. This may be done by a scavenger paid out of the town funds, whose duty it would be to go wherever notified and cart away unsanitary accumulations at no direct cost to the occupant of the place. I can conceive of nothing in which the general public are more interested than this, and nothing, in consequence, more appropriate for general taxation. The expense to each individual would be less. Other towns have gradually come to this arrangement, and it is to be hoped that Peterborough will soon follow.

EARTH CLOSETS.

A large number have been substituted for vaults in the central parts of the town, in accordance with the provisions of the aforesaid by-law, and are a success as long as they are well kept, but otherwise not. However, with the present facilities for scavengering they are a great improvement on the old plan, and will answer very well until sewerage takes their place.

SEWERAGE.

This is at last taking a more practical form. Health considerations are supposed to override all questions of expense, but it was a pleasure to hear from Councillor Davidson that under good management it could be done at so small a cost. A good sewerage system for the town will soon rectify minor matters, such as the Edison drain or the outlet from [illegible] on George street. It will be necessary to exercise care in its selection as the plans must be approved by the Provincial Board of Health. An extract from the report of that body on the proposed system of sewerage in Brantford is worth quoting here: "It is especially satisfactory to note how in the details of the plans for the disposal of the sewage, attention has been given to the provisions of the Public Health Act with respect to supplying means by which the pollution of the river, in this case the Grand, is to be prevented by means of a sewage farm of precipation works, whenever the pollution of the river has caused a condition which might be prejudicial to the public health. Your committee, while recognising the fact that the scheme permits and provides for the pouring of the effluent sewage into the river temporarily are of the opinion that for a short time after the opening of the works there will be caused no serious nuisance, as it is always found that at first householders are slow to construct house plumbing, and that therefore this pouring in of sewage may at first be allowed while the further measures for treating the sewage are in progress."

PURITY OF WATER SUPPLY.

Samples of well water are sent in almost every day for analysis, and are found of varying degrees of purity, according to location and care taken to avoid pollution. I would again repeat that when diphtheria is prevalent, it is never safe to trust an analysis. One sample from a well may be pure and another taken only an hour after may be impure. Hence if at all suspicious the water that children drink should be boiled. Many wells are polluted by kitchen slop thrown too near them. Underground channels are so mysterious that contaminating matter has often found its way into a well from a spot hundreds of feet away.

THE ICE QUESTION.

I have examined samples from time to time throughout the year and find it reasonably pure. There is little cause for alarm as

A Fact

WORTH knowing is that blood diseases which all other remedies fail to cure, yield to Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Fresh confirmation of this statement comes to hand daily. Even such deep-seated and stubborn complaints as Rheumatism, Rheumatic Gout, and the like, are thoroughly eradicated by the use of this wonderful alterative.

Mrs. R. Irving Dodge, 110 West 126th street, New York, certifies:—

"About two years ago, after suffering for nearly two years from rheumatic gout, being able to walk only with great discomfort, and having tried various remedies, including mineral waters, without relief, I saw by an advertisement in a Chicago paper that a man had been relieved of this distressing complaint, after long suffering, by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I then decided to make a trial of this medicine, and took it regularly for eight months. I am pleased to say that it effected a complete cure, and that I have since had no return of the disease."

Mrs. L. A. Stark, Nashua, N. H., writes: "One year ago I was taken ill with rheumatism, being confined to my house six months. I came out of the sickness very much debilitated, with no appetite, and my system disordered in every way. I commenced to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla and began to improve at once, gaining in strength and soon recovering my usual health. I cannot say too much in praise of this well-known medicine."

"I have taken a great deal of medicine, but nothing has done me so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I felt its beneficial effects before I had quite finished one bottle, and I can freely testify that it is the best blood-medicine I know of."—L. W. Ward, Sr., Woodland, Texas.

Keep your eye open for the date, which will be announced soon.

A Dangerous Practice.

Last night a farmer on his way to town with a seeder on his sleigh, left it standing on George street just north of Smith, near the corner, with the tongue of the seeder projecting. A gentleman who was driving down Smith, turned rather sharply into George street to avoid another sleigh coming in the opposite direction. In the darkness he ran right into the farmer's sleigh, damaging his own very much. He and his horse narrowly escaped being seriously injured. This is a most dangerous practice and one that cannot be too strongly condemned.

The Great English Basso.

The public may well look forward with pleasant anticipation, to the Whitney Mockridge concert which will be given in Bradburn's Opera House, Wednesday night, Jan. 20th. The EXAMINER has already specially referred to the supereminent qualifications of Mr. Mockridge and Mrs. Rhodes, the tenor and soprano of the company respectively. Now attention is called to the splendid English basso of the company, Mr. Arthur Beresford. He is a native of Yorkshire, the county of England so noted for its production of bass voices of immense power and richness of tone, where he had the great natural advantage of thoroughly musical surroundings. His exceptional ability was early recognized by such critics as Dr. Monk, the eminent organist and composer. Mr. Beresford to day is certainly one of the great bassos in America. Of his singing the Columbus Journal says:—"Mr. Beresford, a native of England, made the success of the evening. He has a voice of phenomenal richness and power, the effect of which is greatly increased by a good method and genuine, deep musical feeling." In Bradburn's Opera House, Wednesday evening, Jan. 20th. Prices 25c., 35c. and 50c. Seat plan now open at Greatrex's drug store.

THE NERVOUS SYSTEM.—From the peculiar tendency which alcohol in the blood has to impair the functions of the nervous system arise many disorders, of which the most disastrous are Delirium tremens and insanity. The Father Mathew Remedy taken in time will certainly prevent these fatal disasters. 1d

Police Court.

SATURDAY, January 16th.

This morning at the police court Edward Butler was arraigned for being drunk. He was found last night sleeping in the market square. Had he not been discovered and taken to the police station, he would probably have frozen to death. The court reprimanded him and then allowed him to go, on promising to sign the pledge.

King of Medicines

A Cure "Almost Miraculous."

"When I was 14 years of age I had a severe attack of rheumatism, and after I recovered had to go on crutches. A year later, scrofula, in the form of white swellings, appeared on various parts of my body, and for 11 years I was an invalid, being confined to my bed 6 years. In that time ten or eleven sores appeared and broke, causing me great pain and suffering. I feared I never should get well.

"Early in 1888 I went to Chicago to visit a sister, but was confined to my bed most of the time I was there. In July I read a book, 'A Day with a Circus,' in which were statements of cures by Hood's Sarsaparilla. I was so impressed with the success of this medicine that I decided to try it. To my great gratification the sores soon decreased, and I began to feel better and in a short time I was up and out of doors. I continued to take Hood's Sarsaparilla for about a year, when, having used six bottles, I had become so fully released from the disease that I went to work for the Flint & Walling Mfg. Co., and since then on account of sickness. I believe the disease is expelled from my system, I always feel well, am in good spirits and have a good appetite. I am now 27 years of age and can walk as well as any one, except that one limb is a little shorter than the other, owing to the loss of bone, and the sores formerly on my right leg. To my friends my recovery seems almost miraculous, and I think Hood's Sarsaparilla is the king of medicines." WILLIAM A. LEHR, 9 N. Railroad St., Kendallville, Ind.

HAVE NOT LOST A SINGLE DAY

CHAS. CLUTHE, Esq., Toronto.

DEAR SIR,—I wish to inform you how I am getting on. I am splendid now. I can walk any distance. I work all the time. My mother and I do all the housework for a large family. You know when you came to measure me, I had to be held up, but after you put the instrument on I could walk through the house, and the third day I could walk out. I feel that I can never thank you or my enough for you, when I think that for three long years I was a poor helpless girl, sometimes in bed for four months at the time and getting worse every day. Anyone wishing further particulars refer them to me. Thanking you once more, I remain your true friend.

Evangelistic Services.

The service in St. Andrew's church last evening was in some respects the best service of the week. Mr. Meikle gave a stirring address upon the words in the parable of the marriage king's son, "But they made light of it." He pointed out that in rejecting the gospel offer the sinner was making light of reason, conscience, the soul, sin, eternity, judgment and of God's gracious provision for His salvation. He concluded with an appeal to decide for Christ.

On Sabbath at 11 a.m., Mr. Meikle will preach in the George street Methodist church and at 7 p.m. in St. Paul's. At 4 p.m. he will address a meeting for men only, in Bradburn's hall.

Oh, What a Cough!

Will you heed the warning. The signal, perhaps, of the sure approach of that most terrible disease consumption. Ask yourselves if you can afford, for the sake of saving 25c., to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will cure your cough. It never fails. dw

Personal.

The Lindsay Post says:—Miss Annie Fawcett of Peterborough, was in town Thursday and Friday last, visiting her sister, Mrs. S. G. Parkin of the north ward.

Rev. Mr. Ford, of Parkhill, and Rev. James Ford, of Westminster, Ont., are in town, where they came to attend the funeral of their brother in-law, the late Arthur Rutherford.

Mr. D. R. Gardener, who has for some time past, been in the employ of Mr. Frank Mercer of this town, leaves this evening for Mount Pleasant. Mr. Gardener, intends going into business for himself, having purchased the general store business of Mr. J. J. McIndoe of that place.

An Unrehearsed Tragedy.

BRAINERD, Minn., Jan. 16.—A terrible accident occurred on the Northern Pacific Railway at Jonesville, the first station east of here, at 3.50 o'clock yesterday. A special train consisting of the sleeping car, "Petrel," and a baggage car was running as the second section of No. 9. The special left South Superior at 11.30 last evening, having on board the Andrews Opera Company going from Duluth to Grand Forks. The train was running at the usual rate of speed when it struck a broken rail. The sleeper left the track and went down an embankment landing, bottom side up. The flames broke out from all parts of the car and burned so rapidly that the rescuers could do nothing. When all were believed to have been rescued a search revealed the fact that Mrs. Ed. Andrews, wife of the proprietor of the troupe, and her nurse, Miss Tilly Wallace, were missing. By this time the flames were burning so fiercely that it was impossible to get near the car. When the flames were finally subdued the remains were discovered so badly burned that it was impossible to identify one from the other. Mrs. Andrews and Miss Wallace had occupied the upper berth at the forward end of the car and were wrapped in the bedclothes. There was no outcry from this berth while the work of rescuing the injured was progressing and it is supposed that both occupants were killed instantly. The rapidity with which the flames caught hold and spread through the car caused no little surprise. It is not known whether they caught from the lamps or stove, but it is supposed from the rapidity with which they spread that they caught from the lamps. Twenty passengers, more or less seriously injured, were taken from the wreck.

Physicians were sent from Brainerd on a special train. The injured were brought back to this city and taken to the Northern Pacific hospital as soon as possible.

Several members of the company were seriously injured.

TORONTO'S NEW MAYOR.

Monday, January 4, was an exciting day in Toronto. Four candidates were in the field for the mayor's chair. These were E. B. Osler, R. J. Fleming, John McMillan and James Beaty. Mr. Osler was the nominee of the Board of Trade, and being a successful financier it was thought he would make a suitable head for a council that has the handling of three million dollars a year.

R. J. FLEMING, MAYOR-ELECT OF TORONTO.

Fleming is a young man, who, a couple of years ago, got a by-law passed in the council binding all contractors who did work for the city to pay none of their employees less than 15 cents per hour. It was this measure that gave him the working man's vote and placed him at the head of the polls with 350 votes more than Osler, the second in the race. Mr. Fleming is pretty well off. He made most of his money in real estate speculation.

George Macdonald, the Author.

George Macdonald's early home was in the bleak northeast of Scotland, about 30 miles from Aberdeen. The gray stone house, with its slate-flagged floors, in which he was born, stood in the market town of Huntly. Around the town are the moors and cold mountains and all the wild Scotch scenery of which his stories are so full. In the tales of Alec Forbes and Sir Gibbie and Malcolm and Robert Falconer and Warlock o' Glenwarlock there are vivid pictures of Scottish life from the humblest to the highest. He loves to write of snowstorms, of strong tides and great floods, of high wild places and of the fierce wind blowing over the wild Scotch hills. Not less truthful and loving are the descriptions of the meadows starred with daisies, of burns and heather banks, and the homely, humble life of the Scottish people whom he so dearly loves.

GEORGE MACDONALD.

There are some drawbacks to the pleasure of reading Macdonald's stories. Some of them abound in the hardest and broadest Scotch dialect, difficult to read and hard to understand. There is a high religious sentiment pervading nearly all of them. Sometimes his characters preach too much, and not all of his stories are equally interesting, but the influence of all is toward honesty and charity and real goodness. His child characters are dear favorites with Scottish children, and they have made him a popular writer also among English and American boys and girls.

Emerald Beneficial Association

Election of Officers—Removing a Retiring President.

At a meeting of the Emerald Beneficial Association, Branch No. 21, on January 14, 1892, the following officers were installed:

Ed. O'Neil.....President
G. H. Giroux.....Vice-President.
W. Hogan.....R.S.
Jas. Dunn.....F.S.
W. J. Devlin.....Treas.
Geo. Ahern.....Marshall.
M. Hayes.....Assistant "
Jas. Landrigan.....Messenger.
W. Hogan.....Stewards.
M. Giroux.....
Chas. Dunn.....
M Hayes.....
Joe Begley.....
Delegates to Grand Branch—W. Hogan and T. Dunn.

AN ADDRESS AND CANE PRESENTED.

At the time of installation the president elect, Mr. Ed. O'Neil stated that he was sorry that he could not accept the office as president as he was about to leave town. It was decided to leave the election of another president over until the next meeting. The officers were then duly installed. After the business of the branch was over the following address and presentation was made to Bro. Ed O'Neil by Bros. J. J. Sheehy and M. Giroux.

Mr. Ed. O'Neil, President Branch 21, E. B. A.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER.—Your brethren in this Branch have learned with deep regret that your removal to another country will deprive them of the pleasant associations which they have enjoyed with you for several years past, and also deprive this Branch of the valuable services which you have rendered the order, both in your capacity as a private member, and as the honored President. In this office you have discharged its duties with fidelity to the interests it represented and with a thoughtful courtesy towards those with whom you were associated in a manner to win our warmest commendation, and, therefore, we shall so much the more miss your presence in the chair. As a personal friend and associate we shall also greatly miss your genial companionship. Be assured that you carry away with you the genuine respect and esteem of your friends and the public generally, and the best wishes of all for your success in the new scenes upon which you are entering. In token of our esteem and good wishes kindly accept this gold headed cane. Again wishing you health, wealth and prosperity, we remain your faithful friends and brethren.

The address was signed by Rev. Father Scollard, W. J. Devlin, Vice.-Pres.; W. Hogan, R.S.; H. Carveth, Treas.; Jas. Dunn, F.S.; T. B. McGrath, M. Giroux, G. Giroux, J. J. Sheehy.

Curling.

Peterborough Curlers Win Again — Millbrook Now Vanquished by Them.

There was a good attendance at the rink last evening to see the curling match between Peterborough and Millbrook. A good game was witnessed, which resulted in a somewhat easy victory for the home team by nineteen shots. The total scores were: Peterborough, 36 shots; Millbrook, 17 shots. The Peterborough players were: A. Blade, D. Belleghem, G. Fitzgerald, C. N. Brown, T. Ferguson and J. Stanger; skips, J. Connal and J. B. Pentland. The Millbrook skips were Messrs. Woods and W. Kells.

When King James the first wrote his "counterblast to tobacco," the royal pedant knew nothing of the "Myrtle Navy." If he had, instead of wasting his brains over his curious production, he would have filled his royal pipe with it, and would have taken a royal smoke, he would then have been prepared to admit that with regard to the injurious effects of tobacco, it all depended on what tobacco you smoked. w3

THE BOARD OF HEALTH.

the ice-cutters now keep away from places that are likely to be polluted. Organic impurities may accidently find their way into the best of ice, but as the amount of drainage carried into the lake is small as compared with the large body of water, the risk is not great. This is simply another argument for sewerage, for as the town increases in population more and more sewage will be poured in until at no distant date ice cut from the lake would be utterly unfit for use.

HOUSE TO HOUSE INSPECTION.

The Chief and Sanitary Inspectors have done this very systematically throughout the year and have seldom found it necessary to prosecute offenders.

Let me say a few words as to the general management of sanitary affairs in Peterborough or in any town of similar extent. There should be a sanitray inspector with a certain amount of training in hygiene, disinfect'on and kindred matters. Of course any intelligent man could pick this up very soon. The Chief of Police tells me that more policemen are needed. Let the next appointment be that of a sanitary inspector exclusively, say during summer months. This would relieve the police of a large amount of work and put in the hands of one man who could keep a continuous supervision over places. At present the policemen change from week to week and from night to day work, and thus often lose track of sanitary operations. This would be entirely obviated by the appointment of a Sanitary Inspector, who would devote his whole time to the work. He should be guided by the instructions of the Medical Health Officer, and with a town paid scavenger, could notify the latter as to the immediate removal of any unsanitary matter, without being delayed by the jangling of neighbours as to who was responsible for its deposit, as is the case now. These would make an efficient staff, and practically would cost the ratepayers of the town no more than at present, assuming that a larger police force is needed. The town is growing and will continue to grow more rapidly in the near future, and any changes made should be on these lines.

I am, gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
J. CLARKE, M.D.,
Medical Health Officer.

INFECTIOUS DISEASES.

Typhoid fever	13
Scarlet fever	26
Diphtheria	45
Houses placarded	44

Mr. Denne moved and Mr. Pearse seconded that the report be received—Carried.

MR. PEARSE ON THE AGGRESSIVE.

Mr. PEARSE referred to several items in the report and quoted some statistics that did not agree with the report. He compared the death rate in Peterborough for six months with that of other cities and towns, showing that Peterborough, with the exception of Ottawa, had the highest death rate of any town or city in the Province. Belleville, he quoted, as only having one-half the death rate of Peterborough. He did not think the report ought to be adopted as it stood. The cause for the high mortality should be ascertained and remedied. This matter had been spoken of quite often by himself and others.

Dr. CLARKE contended that the report was correct. The death rate average per thousand had decreased since the formation of the Board of Health.

Mr. PEARSE said the fact still remained that, although Peterborough had no infectious diseases to speak of, the death rate was alarmingly high.

Mr. LUCH thought if the town were properly sewered the rate of mortality would be lowered.

Dr. CLARKE said, in answer to Mr. Pearse, that he and the chief had examined the sewers at Lakefield and found they did not, as a rule, pollute the river here.

AN AMBULANCE WANTED.

Mr. PEARSE referred to the fact of cabmen taking patients to the hospitals in their vehicles, and thought they ought to be compelled to be fumigated after each visit to the hospital.

Dr. Clarke and Mr. Pearse here had a little "passage at arms," the doctor contending that a health inspector was wanted, Mr. Pearse reminding him that he had one, referring to Chief Roszel.

It was then suggested that an ambulance was what was necessary.

Dr. BRENNAN, speaking of the death rate, said that if a proper system of sewerage was in operation the rate would not be so high. The ambulance was absolutely necessary to the town for the purpose of conveying to the hospitals sick and wounded people.

After some further discussion, Dr. BRENNAN moved, and Mr. SHORTLY seconded, that the report as amended be adopted.

Before this was put to the meeting, Dr. BRENNAN moved the following amendment: That the town council be requested to provide a proper ambulance for the conveyance of patients suffering from any infectious or contagious disease to the hospital, and until such ambulance be provided, our cabmen conveying such persons shall be required to present his cab to the medical health officer to be properly disinfected and receive his certificate to the effect that this has been done.

A MUTUAL ADMIRATION SOCIETY.

Dr. Pile did not look upon Dr. Brennan's motion as an amendment, as it had no connection with the report. The matter should be dealt with separately. He did not consider Mr. Pearse's figures as a contradiction of the report.

Mr. Pearse did not agree with what Dr. Pile said. The board had met as a kind of "mutual admiration" society for the last ten years. The board had been congratulating themselves on being the healthiest town in Ontario, whereas it was the most unhealthy town and city with one exception in Ontario.

After some further discussion the report was adopted.

Dr. BRENNAN then made his amendment as given above, into a motion. This was seconded by Mr. Pearse and after more talk regarding the urgent need of an ambulance, etc., was carried.

THE COUNCIL WARNED.

Mr. Denne then moved and Dr. Brennan seconded the following resolution:—

That this Board, owing to the largely increased death rate of the town, desires to call the attention of the council of the town of Peterborough to the necessity of immediate action being taken to obtain a general system of sewerage, and in default of action being at once taken, this Board will be compelled to report the matter to the Provincial Board of Health, and ask that an investigation be instituted [illegible] the Secretary forward a copy of this resolution to the council.—Carried.

The Board then adjourned.

ROSE TERRY COOKE.

One of the Most Popular Women Authors Still Living.

Some 20 or 25 years ago the name of Rose Terry began to appear frequently in the magazines and papers of this country, attached to some of the most bright and original stories and charming poems coming from any of our American authors. The leading story in the first number of the Atlantic Monthly was from her pen, and from that time until this it has been pretty busily employed for the pleasure and good of those who delight in pure and sparkling stories, sketches and verse. After a while the name became Rose Terry Cooke and under that title, which she has signed since her marriage to R. H. Cooke, in 1873, she has done much of her best work.

ROSE TERRY COOKE.

Though the name of Rose Terry Cooke became a very popular one among readers, little was known or written about the person herself, for in those times, a quarter of a century or more ago, writers were not interviewed and written up and solicited for photographs and autographs as they are now. It was known that she lived in Connecticut and her stories showed that she was a New Englander born and bred. She surpassed any other writer in those days in depicting the delicate shades and feelings and habits of New England rural life, and though there are many writers now who work most brilliantly and entertainingly in that field, they have none of them improved upon the original patterns of Mrs. Cooke. A large amount of her work, which has been appearing in magazines through all these years, has never been collected in book form. A collection of her poems was published before her marriage, and a few volumes of her stories have been issued since. One of her longer stories, entitled "Steadfast," was issued in a volume about two years ago, and last season there was published a collection of some of her later stories called "Huckleberries from the New England Hills."

Much that Mrs. Cooke has written in verse form is charmingly musical and spiritually lovely. "The Two Villages," beginning:

Over the river on the hill
Lieth a village white and still, has been printed and re-printed numberless times and is an example of sweet and touching rhythm. It is one of her poems which became universally popular. But perhaps the most of the true soul of her poetry and beauty of expression is found in the often quoted poem, "Trailing Arbutus:"

Darlings of the forest!
Blossoming alone,
When Earth's grief is sorest
For her jewels gone—
Ere the snow-drift melts your tender buds have blown.

Tinged with color faintly,
Like the morning sky,
Or, more pale and saintly,
Wrapped in leaves ye lie—
Even as children sleep in faith's simplicity.

There the wild wood robin
Hymns your solitude,
And the rain comes sobbing
Through the budding wood,
While the low south wind sighs, but dare not be more rude.

Were your pure lips fashioned
Out of air and dew—
Starlight unimpassioned,
Dawn's most tender hue,
And scented by the woods that gathered sweets for you?

Fairest and most lonely,
From the world apart;
Made for beauty only,
Veiled from Nature's heart
With such unconscious grace as makes the dream of Art.

Were not mortal sorrow
An immortal shade,
Then would I to-morrow
Such a flower be made,
And live in the dear woods where my lost childhood played.

Familiar Family Friends.

The family store of medicine should contain a bottle of Hagyard's Yellow Oil. Mrs. Hannah Hutchins, of Rosseway, N. S., says: "We have used Hagyard's Yellow Oil in our family for six years, for coughs, colds, burns, sore throat, croup, etc., and find it so good we cannot do without it." dw

DYSPEPSIA in its worst forms will yield to the use of Carter's Little Nerve Pills. They not only relieve present distress but strengthen the stomach and digestive apparatus. dw

Just why so many people suffer pain when a remedy of known and certain effect like Hagyard's Yellow Oil may be had at every drug store, is not very clear. This peerless pain soothing remedy is a prompt and pleasant cure for sore throat, croup, colds, rheumatism, lame back, etc. Price 25 cents. dw

MINISTERS, lawyers, teachers and others whose occupation gives but little exercise, should use Carter's Little Liver Pills for torpid liver and biliousness. One is a dose. Try them. dw

A Sensible Statement.

SIRS,—Having used your Burdock Blood Bitters successfully for some time past, I must state that for my complaint of biliousness and acid stomach I have never found an equal, and I continue to use it and recommend it to my friends and neighbors.

"German Syrup"

Asthma. "I have been a great sufferer from Asthma and severe Colds every Winter, and last Fall my friends as well as myself thought because of my feeble condition, and great distress from constant coughing, and inability to raise any of the accumulated matter from my lungs, that my time was close at hand. When nearly worn out for want of sleep and rest, a friend recommended me to try thy valuable medicine, Boschee's German Syrup. I am confident it saved my life. Almost the first dose gave me great relief and a gentle refreshing sleep, such as I had not had for weeks. My cough began immediately to loosen and pass away, and I found myself rapidly gaining in health and weight. I am pleased to inform thee—unsolicited—that I am in excellent health and do certainly attribute it to thy Boschee's German Syrup. C. B. STICKNEY, Picton, Ontario."

THE BIG BONANZA KING.

WHO TOOK 150,000,000 DOLLARS OUT OF ONE HOLE.

A Pocket of Gold as Deep as Trinity's Spire and as Wide as New York's City Hall Park—Entertaining Sketch of John W. Mackay, the Millionaire.

The country should know something of its noted men—of a man like John W. Mackay, as he really is and not as he is clouded by rumor and romance. No American in my remembrance has been so dimmed, as it were, the real man becoming lost in the ideals which the public fancy will turn into the most fantastic shapes. And yet there could be no more difficult task than to write of Mackay. I have seen him tried of the extremes of fortune, when he was the unchallenged Bonanza King, the shadow of his scepter over every exchange; and when he was struck by disaster of appalling magnitude, cyclonic in its swiftness and fury I have only seen him to admire the superb, instant courage with which he overcame disaster, as with all the world I had admired the equanimity with which he had borne the heavy trusts of fortune. And yet to write of him as he should be written, would be to risk the invasion of a modest and reserved personality, to dwell upon an honorable and blameless life, to reveal perhaps the splendid beneficence of so many deeds that have fallen unknown, even as the sunshine and the dew, upon humble places; and his ceaseless courtesy, anxious to anticipate the possibility of some kind, considerate act.

I was strolling with Mackay some years ago in Virginia City, where we looked down a smoking cavity in the ground that was soon lost in the darkness and at the mouth of which a windlass was slowly grinding. "Out of that hole," he said, "I took $150,000,000 in bullion." This was one of the famous Bonanza mines whose history all men know. The Big Bonanza, as it was called, and as Mackay described it to me at the time, was a "kidney" or a "pocket" of crude ore, about as high as the steeple of Trinity and in area as large as the City Hall Park of New York. This ore, shoveled out and reduced, gave the stupendous yield to which Mr. Mackay referred, and was the foundation of the Bonanza fortunes. Associated with him were three other gentlemen, whose names were to win a world wide mining fame—James G. Fair, afterward Senator from Nevada, whose skill as a mining expert had attracted the attention of Mackay; William O'Brien and James C. Flood. O'Brien and Flood had come to California as friends in the Argonaut days and had, like other men taken their humble parts in the creation of the Pacific States. In those times men who were to be major generals in the army drove drays for a living. Others who were to become luminous in statesmanship and jurisprudence joyfully mended their own trousers and washed their own linen. They were "partners," a term that Bret Harte has pathetically explained in one of his exquisite stories. "Partners," that is to say friends, with a friendship such as we who live outside of the atmosphere of adventure which enfolded the Argonaut days cannot understand, and which would be but vaguely explained if we compared it with the love of man and woman.

BILLY HIS PARTNER FOREVER.

"Billy was my partner once," as Mr. Flood said to me one day in Menlo, while we were looking at the portrait of O'Brien; "Billy was my partner once. He is my partner now, will be my partner forever"—a speech which made a deep impression, coming as it did from the lips of one of the most resolute, self restrained and undemonstrative of men. Flood was the financial representative and ally of the two young miners who were at work on the Bonanza; O'Brien the "partner" in the firm, because Flood could have no interest he did not share. O'Brien passed away in Bonanza times—Flood not many months since, in Germany. He was a brave, independent, reserved, conscientious man, especially charming and true in the higher relations of life—no better citizen, no truer friend—"in all that goes toward the development of manhood, the best man I have ever known," as Mackay said to me when the hour of irrevocable sillage had fallen. "I know only one man in the world that can break me and that is Mackay," this Flood said to me and I note it as showing the strong links which in these days bound the bonanza firm and gave it a strength and a confidence which were the basis of its power.

I have asked Mackay, when talking of the Bonanza outcome, whether there were any laws the application of which would lead to the discovery of other bodies of ore, whether if nature had in a prodigal mood buried this "kidney" in one of the Nevadas, she might not have been even less niggardly elsewhere. There is no law in mining," was Mackay's answer, "but the point of the pick." I presume if the truth were known, as much money has been expended by enthusiastic miners in the hope of discovering a new "kidney" as was taken out of the Comstock lode. I believe the Bonanza people themselves have given millions toward further experiments, with but partial success. I have heard Mackay say that theirs was the last of the Bonanzas. In mining, however, as in other affairs, especially where our knowledge, to use his own words, is confined to "the point of the pick," nothing should be looked for with more assurance than the unexpected.—John Russell Young.

Billiousness—Fever and Ague.

So pleasantly do Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills search out and drive away the seeds of disease that all persons living in a country where fever and ague, and all other billious diseases, are prevalent, will find they should never be without them. From two to four pills each night upon going to bed, will, in a short time, drive away the sickly yellow look of billious persons, and bring to their cheeks a beautiful glow of perfect health. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are sold by all dealers in medicine.

Dr. Low's Sulphur Soap is a delight shampoo. It cleanses the scalp and darkens grey hair.

Interested People.

WILL WATCH AND WAIT.

IT IS NOT POLITIC FOR FRANCE TO INTERFERE.

To Buy British Friendship—Price of a Possible Compromise on the Moorish and Egyptian Vexed Questions—General Foreign News of a Night.

PARIS Jan. 15.—North Africa at present demands the attention of the diplomatic world.

In Egypt we have had an unexpected change of sovereignty.

In Morocco we have seen the beginning of a revolt which is filling the harbor of Tangiler with English, Spanish, French and Italian men-of-war.

I have just had a long and interesting talk with a French diplomatist peculiarly well posted on African politics, whose name I regret I am not able to reveal.

"As regards Egypt," said he, "I do not think the advent of Abbas will change the situation which existed in the time of his father, Tewfik Pacha.

"France might, of course, have taken advantage of recent events to create political misunderstandings. But it was not to her interest.

"All she had to do in order to effect this purpose was to propose another successor to the Khedivehip.

"Halim Pacha, the son of Mehemet Ali, would naturally have been the French candidate. According to Mussulman custom he is the rightful heir to the Khedive dignity.

"The order of succession has, of course been modified, but it might not have been difficult to persuade Abdul-Hamid to cancel the imperial firman granted by his predecessor. If France had wished to attain this end Russia would probably have backed her.

France Does Not Wish It.

"But, I repeat, I do not think the interests of France would have warranted such a course.

"Hr proper policy is to maintain the attitude she has for some years past adopted—a policy of protestation against the English occupation of Egypt. She need not resort to more violent measures.

"All things considered, it may even be best for France that England should continue to occupy Egypt. For, at some time or other, an occasion will arise in which her assent to this occupation will be made the argument by which she will assure the English alliance—or, at all events, the benevolent neutrality of England.

"On that day we may see what is the value of the pledges which Lord Salisbury gave to Signor Crispi and Signor di Rudini.

Maintain the Status Quo.

"The maintenance of the status quo should be the policy not only of France but of all the Mediterranean Powers.

"England is now an intruder in the Mediterranean and she aspires to be a jailer. She already possesses Gibraltar. If she could get a footing at Tangier, now that she holds the gates of the Sues Canal, she would command all the points of access to the Mediterranean, and no other nation could enter or leave that sea without her permission.

"But, depend on it, we shall not let her get Tangier. France will not repeat the blunder she made at the time of the bombardment of Alexandria. Nor can I believe that Spain and Italy will be more tolerant. The Spaniards are peculiarly sensitive on the subject of Morocco. They have an old score to settle with the Moors, and they regard Morocco as a natural dependency of Spain.

Europe in Moroeco.

"If things should take a bad turn at Tangier there will be a joint landing of troops and a simultaneous re-embankment. We might, perhaps, consent to a Spanish occupation, however, in exchange for a rectification of our Algerian frontier in the direction of Morocco."

Such is the substance of the statement made me by one of the most prominent men in the French diplomatic service.

The Walsall Anarchists.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—The Anarchists arrested at Walsall on the charge of having in their possessions explosives for unlawful purpose were again arraigned before the Police Magistrate at that place. The chief constable testified as to the particulars of the arrest and intimated that the prisoners were implicated in a plot which concerned many countries beside England. The chief constable asked the magistrate to further remand prisoners to allow the police to secure further evidence as to the ramification of the plot in which it is alleged they were concerned. The request was granted and the prisoners were remanded until next Tuesday.

SPANISH ANARCHISTS.

Attack an Andalusian Town But Are Repulsed—Several Captured By Cavalry.

MADRID, Jan. 16.—The condign punishment recently inflicted upon the band of bold Anarchists which made an attack upon the city of Xeres does not seem to have awed the lawless characters in the vicinity of that city. It is not positively known what has caused the activity now prevailing among the Spanish Anarchists, but it is supposed to be due to the work of German Socialists, especially in the province of Andaulsia, in which province Xeres is situated. The Anarchists in Andaulsia have of late displayed a boldness that is startling. Xeres is a city of 64,000 population and there is always a military force stationed there. It was never dreamed that Anarchists would dare to attack such a well-defended place, but they did. They were repulsed, however, after desperate fighting, which lasted all night, and a large number of them were made prisoners. It was thought the fact that the prisoners would be tried by court-martial and summarily punished would have a good effect upon the other Anarchists and that it would be some time before they would again try conclusions with the authorities, either civil or military. Last night, however, another band of Anarchists made an attack upon Bornoes a town of Andaulsia, about 12 miles northeast of Xeres. They were armed only with stones, but it was impossible for the gendarmes to disperse them. The cavalry was summoned, and the troops soon succeeded in putting the band to flight. Several of the Anarchists fell into the hands of the calvalrymen. They will be tried by court-martial.

AN UNRIVALLED LEADER.

Cardinal Manning's Great Skill As An Organizer.

PARIS, Jan. 16. — Cardinal Manning was not only a controversialist of conspicuous ability, but his skill as an organizer and leader unrivalled among the chiefs of the Roman hierarchy in England. He was also prominent in all wise and earnest efforts for the improvement of the condition of the poor, whether such efforts originated with the Church of Rome or with the Salvation Army. Of late years he had several times appeared as the adviser and defender of the working classes and thus enjoyed a high degree of popularity with a part of the community to whom the more retiring, scholarly Newman was virtually unknown. His death leaves a vacant place which cannot easily be filled, and is one of the heaviest losses which the Church of Rome has latterly sustained."

BAILEY BUYS FOREPAUGH.

He Also Transfers a One-Half Interest to the Present Manager.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 16.—James A. Bailey, proprietor of the Barnum & Bailey shows, yesterday purchased from Catharine A. Cooper, widow of the late James E. Cooper, an administratrix of his estate, the Adam Forepaugh shows, including all property, right, titles and good will attaching to that well-known exhibition.

Mr. Bailey immediately transferred a one-half interest in the purchase to Joseph T. McCaddon, who had been the manager of the shows since Mr. Cooper purchased them from the Adam Forepaugh estate two years ago. The amount involved in these transactions is not known.

The shows are thoroughly organized and equipped for the coming season and will continue under the management of Mr. McCaddon, and all contracts and arrangements for the season will be fully carried out.

Mr. McCaddon is Mr. Bailey's brother-in-law. He is still a young man, but has had a long and varied experience in handling large amusement interests. He has been especially trained from boyhood up by Mr. Bailey to become his successor.

Death of Mrs. (Rev.) James Spencer.

PARIS, Ont., Jan. 16.—The death of Mrs. Sarah Spencer, widow of the late Rev. James Spencer, M.A., of Paris will be regretted by large circles of friends in many parts of Ontario. The event occurred yesterday at Rev. Mr. Kerby's residence, No. 139 Herkimer-street, Hamilton. Deceased had reached the age of 74 years. She was a Canadian by birth and had lived in this country all her life, her lovable nature making for her friends wherever she went. Her husband was for 9 years editor of The Christian Guardian, and had also labored in many fields of church work. Mrs. Spencer was mother of Mrs. Large, widow of the murdered missionary, who is now in Japan.

The State of Trade.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Special telegrams to Bradstreet's indicate that no revival in the demand for staple goods has appeared as yet, except in the territory tributary to Chicago. Canadian despatches report rather more favorably from Ontario than from the Province of Quebec, demand for staples and prices in the former showing some gain. There continues to be some uneasiness in the leather trade at Montreal and Quebec. There were 51 business failures in Canada this week as reported to Bradstreet's. Last week the total was 46, and one year ago for the week 51.

Caught by Grip at 101.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 16.—Thomas Schofield died at Forth Lyme yesterday aged 101 years and 3 months. La grippe was the cause of his death. Schofield was born in England. He had not needed a doctor's services prior to his fatal illness for 60 years.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

AT A REVOLVER'S POINT.

How Edith Cook Is Said to Have Been Abducted from Her Home.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Jan. 16.—William J. Benson was arrested yesterday afternoon, charged with abducting Edith L. Cook from her home in Rutland Township, Tioga County, Pa. The girl is said to have been taken from her home and friends at the point of a revolver, and forced to come to Buffalo and live with her abductor, who kept her so close a prisoner that she was unable to communicate with her relatives.

A month ago Benson was in Rutland county and met Miss Cook at social gatherings. He took a fancy to her and made several proposals that she accompany him to Buffalo. She refused. One day, it is said, he drove up to the schoolhouse, where she was alone, and drawing a revolver, forced her to go with him. They went to the nearest railroad depot and came to Buffalo. Upon their arrival Benson took the girl to a house of ill repute in Michigan-street, where she was kept a prisoner.

In the meantime her parents were looking high and low for her. Her father came to this city and secured the aid of the police, who found her, broken in health and spirit, at No. 1567 Main-street.

A WELL-KNOWN WRITER OF SONGS.

Charles A. White Dies in Boston After a Brief Illness.

BOSTON, Jan. 15.—Charles A. White, a well-known writer of songs and ballads, died here to-day of pneumonia, brought on by the grip, with which he was taken last Friday.

Bound Over to Keep the Peace.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—John Boerlas, who was arrested a few days ago for firing a pistol at Westminster Hall and who when arraigned declared he had taken this means to show his contempt for the House of Commons, was to-day bound over in the sum of £200, two sureties qualifying in £100 each, to observe good behavior for two months. Oscar Wilde became one of his sureties.

Died at His Evening Meal.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 16.—Captain William Johnston, formerly of Prince of Wales' Rifles, Montreal, died suddenly here to-night while at his evening meal. He was a respected member of the city postoffice staff and well known in Montreal, where he leaves a wife and several grown-up children. He was 59 years of age.

President Depew.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Chauncey M. Depew came out on top in the Union League Club election last night by a majority of 133 votes over Cornelius N. Bliss, the candidate on the members' ticket.

Scratched 28 Years

A Scaly, Itching, Skin Disease With Endless Suffering Cured by Cuticura Remedies.

If I had known of the CUTICURA REMEDIES twenty-eight years ago, it would have saved me $200 and an immense amount of suffering. My disease (psoriasis) commenced on my head in a spot not larger than a cent. It spread rapidly all over my body, and got under my nails. The scales would drop off me all the time, and my suffering was endless and without relief. One thousand dollars would not tempt me to have it in disease over again. I am a poor man, but feel rich to be relieved of what some of the doctors said was leprosy, some ringworm, psoriasis, etc. I cannot praise the CUTICURA REMEDIES too much. They have made my skin so clear and free from scales as a baby's. All I used of them was $5 worth. If you had been here and said you would have cured me for $200 00, you would have had the money. I looked like the picture (No. 2, page 47) in your book, "How to Cure Skin Diseases," but now I am as clear as any person ever was. Through force of habit I rub my hands over my arms and legs to scratch once in a while, but to no purpose. I am all well. I scratched twenty eight years, and it got to be a kind of second nature to me. I thank you a thousand times.

DENNIS DOWNING, Waterbury, Vt.

FUNERAL PREPARATIONS

A PRINCESS' TRIBUTE TO HER DEA BROTHER.

His Coffin Imbedded In Lilies of the Valley and Other Flowers—A Report of the Illness of the Queen Officially Denied—To-day's News From the Royal Household.

LONDON, Jan 16.—The coffin in which the Duke of Clarence is to be interred is of oak and made in the village. The Princess Victoria, sister of the deceased Duke, with her own hands arranged a bed of lilies of the valley and other flowers amid which the coffin rests. The Princess, while broken-hearted over the loss of her brother, has done much by her sisterly devotion and fortitude to sustain her father and mother and the Princess May in their distress.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—Preparations for the funeral of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale are being made on all sides at Sandringham by the railway companies and at Windsor Castle. It is believed the statements regarding the condition of the Queen's health are grossly exaggerated. As has before been stated, she is greatly afflicted by the death of her grandson, and her depression would naturally tend to make her more liable to an attack of the prevailing epidemic of influenza, but that she is seriously or at all unwell is not shown by the arrangements that have been made for her presence at the funeral ceremonies.

The body of the Duke will be conveyed from Sandringham and will arrive at Windsor Castle on the same day. All the details of the funeral have not been arranged, but it is announced positively the interment will take place at noon on Wednesday. The body will be placed in the crypt in St. George's chapel.

The Arrangements Completed.

The body will be taken from King's Lynn to London on the Great Eastern Railway. From the Liverpool-street station in London of that railway it will be taken to the station of the Great Western Railway, and thence to Windsor.

There will be a public and semi-military procession through London from one station to the other. The route will be kept open by soldiers. Upon the arrival of the train bearing the remains the coffin will be placed upon a gun carriage and will be escorted by the Tenth Hussars, of which regiment the Duke was a major.

The Prince of Wales is colonel of the Tenth Hussars. The body will be received at Windsor with military honors and will be guarded to the castle by a squadron of cavalry. In the procession through London the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Edinburgh and the Duke of Connaught will follow behind the gun carriage bearing the body. The guard will be detailed to line the route and keep it clear.

The Queen Will Not Attend.

The royal ladies will attend the funeral of the Duke of Clarence. The Queen, by medical advice, will not leave Osborne House at present.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—The general gloom caused by the death of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale will have a bad effect upon the London amusement world. The spontaneity displayed in the closing of the theatres testifies to the estimation in which the Prince of Wales is held by the managers. Not alone were the theatres closed, but the larger music halls and places of amusement of all kinds also shut their doors as a mark of respect.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—West end tradesmen are in despair over the losses of prospective profits, which they have sustained on account of the death of the Duke of Clarence. The six weeks period of official mourning, though shorter than might reasonably have been expected, is yet long enough to spoil myriads of plans that had been made for winter entertainments and festivities of various kinds. What makes the state of affairs particularly harassing to those who derive their main income from catering to the luxurious demands of society is the fact that the two preceding seasons have also been exceptionally dull and gloomy, so that this will be the third consecutive bad season for the trade. Many failures must inevitably result.

The Gray, Bowed Figure in Black.

The Prince, who is gone profited all his life long by the goodwill which descended upon him from his father's mother, as if he were heir not only to the throne but to the virtues and high capacity for rule which for more than 50 years have made this reign illustrious. He profits by them in death as he did in life. All thoughts turn to that gray, bowed figure in black at Osborne, who sends to Sandringham and publishes to the world her touching tribute to the boy whose death breaks the line of descent from herself and disturbs the order of succession in the oldest of reigning European dynasties—oldest, at least, in blood if not in title. When the Queen says she was devotedly attached to her beloved grandson every one knows that it is not a form of words, but the expression of a true feeling. Whoever has lived near the court will tell you how true it is also that Prince Eddie always showed the greatest affection to the Queen. He was a good grandson to his good grandmother. In the heated and artificial atmosphere in which these exalted personages live and move there is still a real freshness of affection, which is, to all those who share in it, as the breath of life. It is known to be strong and pure in all the three generations—indeed, there are now four—which together make up the Royal Family of England. The almost lifelong sorrow of the widowed Queen has been softened, if not cheered, by those nearest to her.

From the Colonies.

The message from the President of the United States came in less direct, more official and less personal form, but was expected and is welcome. There is no quarter of the globe from which something is not heard, for there is none where the British Empire has not a foothold. Colony answers unto colony, and the States which under this boy's ancestor were colonies do not forget that his people are their people, removed by a few generations only. The subject races of India and the freemen of Australia speak in the same tone, moved by the same human feelings. The despatches which come from Canada are like the despatches which come from the Cape, and both are all that the friends of the late Duke need desire.

The Princess May.

The human feeling is, indeed, widespread, and becomes most tender when the thoughts of men and women turn to the Prince's betrothed. Hers is, perhaps, the hardest fate of all. No day passes when parents do not lose their sons and maidens their lovers; but this girl loses a lover and a throne. The Princess Victoria, it is known, would have married Prince Eddie for a cottage, but none the less does she miss the most splendid destiny in Christendom. A week ago the people of England looked to her as their future Queen, the Empire as its future Empress. To-day she is again the Princess May.

A MOTHER'S VENGEANCE.

She Pours Kerosene on Her Daughter and Burns Her to Death.

PANAMA, Jan. 16.—News a horrible crime has reached here from Valencia, Venisulu. The daughter of Sylvester Guiterres persisted in attending a ball against the wishes of her mother, When she returned home the mother poured kerosene over the girl and her ball dress, to which she alighted a match. The girs suffered terribly and died of her injuries. The mother is in jail but it is believed the populace will lynch her.

Fire at Ottawa.

OTTAWA, Jan. 18.—Fire broke out in the city postoffice building at 1 o'clock this morning. From that hour until nearly 8 o'clock the brigade poured four heavy streams upon the building and of the damage, some $20,000, the greater proportion was caused by water. Two sharp explosions in quick succession aroused the postoffice clerk on duty, and on proceeding upstairs he found the office of the excise department to be ablaze. The firemen confined the blaze to that part of the building, but the adjacent Customs department and the postoffice on the ground floor were drenched so that the floors and ceilings will all have to be replaced. A good deal of the mail matter was spoiled.

The fire can only be accounted for on the theory that some specimen jars of gasoline or other inflammable fluid exploded spontaneously and scattered the flames all over the premises.

His Life for His Error.

PUEBLO, Col., Jan. 18.—The body of the Graneras station agent, E. E. Shafer, has been found on the plains, six miles from the station. By his neglect in delivering a train order, two Union Pacific passenger trains collided Dec 30. Shafer, discovering his error after the train had passed his station, departed hastily and was frozen to death on the Plains last night.

Clean Sweep in Quebec.

MONTREAL, Jan. 18.—The new Quebec Government has determined to dismiss a majority of the Government employes appointed under Mercier's rule. Already the Crown prosecutors appointed by Mercier have been dismissed and J. Z. Archambault and Mr. Atwater appointed in their places. The chief of provincial police, Phaneuf, has been replaced by Louis Chevalier. Other changes will follow.

Convicted of Forgery.

CHATHAM, Jan. 18.—A pump peddlar named Flynn was found guilty Saturday of having raised a note for $7 to $17 and negotiated it with his employer.

Drowned While Skating.

BROCKVILLE, Jan. 18.—George Kearns, aged 14, was drowned while skating on the river Saturday. Two companions witnessed his desperate attempt to save himself, but could not reach him.

Kate Castleton Suing for Divorce.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 18.—Kate Castleton, the actress, paid her husband, Harry Phillips, $2500 to relinquish all claim to her Oakland property and they have separated. She has sued for divorce and expects a decree on her return here. Cruelty and poker-playing are the grounds for divorce alleged in her bill of complaint.

Death Roll of a Day.

Rear Admiral Kelly, chief of th Chatham, Eng., dockyard.

Baron Abinger, William Frederick Scarlet of Innerlochy Castle, Kingussie, Inverness, born 1826, succeeded 1801. James Yorke Macgregor, born 1871, succeeds to the title.

John Copeland, registrar of Stormont, died yesterday. He was born in Kircudbrightshire, Scotland, in 1815, and settled in Cornwall in 1828, receiving the appointment of registrar in 1870.

The Newfoundland Census.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Jan. 18.—The census returns have been completed. They show the population of Newfoundland and Labrador to be 202,000, an increase in the last seven years of only 4100, or at the rate of 2¼ per cent. This showing is a great disappointment. The last census in 1884, showed an increase of 22¼ per cent. for the decade ending with that year. Emigration is the main cause of the decline. The population of St. John's decreased by more than 2000 in the last seven years.

Suicided in the Costume of Eve.

CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—Mrs. Mary Simpson, a fashionable dressmaker, Saturday night walked out upon the ice of the lake at the foot of Ohio-street, divested herself of all her clothing and lay down in a perfectly nude state upon the ice to die. Her dead and rigid body was found there this morning.

A NEW YORK MURDER.

THE GHASTLY WORK OF "JACK THE SLASHER."

This Mysterious Person Only Attacked Drunken Men—Several Cases Recently Reported to the Police—He is Captured in the Act of Cutting a Man's Throat.

NEW YORK, Jan 18.—The mysterious personage known to the police here as Jack the Slasher was arrested at 2.30 this morning and locked up at police headquarters. The police have been agitated since December 29 over a series of peculiar assaults, five having occurred up to date, and the last one resulting fatally. The victims have, without exception, been under the influence of liquor, walking or staggering along the street when someone has noiselessly approached from behind and slashed their throats with a razor, making his escape before being identified. One of the victims of the slasher was Lawyer James Carson of Baltimore, whose dead body was found in Christie-street on Friday morning with the throat cut from ear to ear.

Detectives last night saw prisoner accost a drunken man and the two walked together a short distance. Then the stranger fell behind. The drunken man had proceeded perhaps 20 feet in advance when the stranger suddenly flashed some glittering object from his pocket and sprang like a tiger upon the other. The latter fell and in an instant the detective arrested the fugitive. When he was searched a blood-stained razor was found in the pocket of his heavy night-coat. The victim whose throat was seriously, though not fatally slashed, was W. Miller of 226 Cherry-street. He had been drinking heavily and was going homeward when accosted by his assailant. The latter, a well-formed, middle aged man of medium height, with dark blue restless eyes, gave his name as Henry G. Dowd of 84 New Chambers-street.

Is the Slasher and Mayhap the Ripper.

Detectives have positive evidence that the man Dowd is "Jack the Slasher," and it is also hinted that it will be shown eventually that he is identical with "Jack the Ripper," and that he murdered the prostitute known as "Shakespeare" and in her early days as "Annie Brown," for the killing of whom a poor Algerian known as "Frenchy" is serving a life sentence. It was learned that Dowd was born in Liverpool 45 years ago. He came to this country while an infant. His father was one of the original Central Park engineers. He has long seemed to have a mania for slashing people and served two years on a five years' sentence for cutting a man, but was pardoned through influence of wealthy and powerful relatives, upon whose bounty he has since subsisted. He has a brother, James Dowd, who is now in custody as a religious crank.

Another of the slashed victims, John Clark of Elizabeth, N.J., is in Bellevue hospital.

Dowd admitted to the inspector today that he had cut the throats of a dozen different people and that he had a record of every case. Subsequently he told the inspector that when he was but a young boy a big German entered his home in Brooklyn and forcibly assaulted his mother before his eyes. He vowed vengeance on all Dutchmen, and as soon as he attained manhood's state he executed the threats of his youth upon every one whose face bore a resemblance to that of his mother's assailant.

He Killed Carson.

The police have positive evidence that Drew killed Carson. The latter's body was found on the sidewalk in Chrystie-street with a gash on the throat evidently made by a razor. He had not been robbed and had evidently been on a terrible drunk. Bloodstains were found on Drew's shirt, which had evidently been there for 24 hours.

Dropped Dead While Out Calling.

BRANTFORD, Jan. 18.—Mrs. William Robinson, aged 71, dropped dead while returning from a visit to a neighbor Saturday morning.

Forepaugh's Fat Woman.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Jan. 17.—Mrs. Hannah Bunnell, for years the famous fat woman with Forepaugh's circus, died last evening, near Bronson, of grip. She weighed but 400 pounds at the time of her death, and was 31 years old.

Immigration Decreasing.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—The number of immigrants landed at this port during the past week was the smallest for any week of which there is any record. From 13 ships there were 921 cabin and 2706 steerage passengers landed during the week.

The London N. Y. Herald Defunct.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—James Gordon Bennett has ordered the London edition of The New York Herald to cease publication after to-day.

Is the Queen Ill?

PARIS, Jan. 16.—It is rumored here that Queen Victoria is suffering from influenza.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—The following despatch has been received by the representative of the Associated Press in this city in reply to an inquiry concerning the health of the Queen: "Osborne House, Isle of Wight, Jan. 16, p.p.m. The Queen is perfectly well. (Signed) PONSONBY."

It has been ascertained this afternoon that the Queen remains in good health. She drove out yesterday in company with Princess Louise and the Duke and Duchess of Connaught. She personally dictated to the Earl of Latham, the Lord Chamberlain, her orders in regard to the state mourning.

To-day a message was received at Windsor Castle directing that the royal apartments be placed in readiness for occupation for Her Majesty.

Killed in Arkansas.

RIDGETOWN, Jan. 16.—On Friday Mrs. (Rev.) Iler received a telegram announcing the death of her brother, Mr. Frank Bassett, at Little Rock, Ark. Deceased, who was 38 years of age, was an engineer.

Dan is Dead.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 18.—Dan, the male ostrich of Robinson's circus, wintering here, died yesterday of la grippe, with which he was seized some days ago. A post mortem was held. The lungs were found congested, and the throat was enlarged and ulcerated, while firmly fastened in the coating of the stomach the $800 diamond that Dan picked last summer from a gentleman's shirt front in Montreal was found imbedded. The stomach was 18 inches in diameter.

Mr. Brown Renominated in Monck.

WELLANDPORT, Ont., Jan. 17.—Reformers of Monck County met in convention here Saturday and nominated John Brown, ex-M.P., as their standard-bearer for the Dominion Parliament.

A Successful Manufacturing Firm.

(Canadian Lumberman.)

Nine years ago Mr. Bradley B. Mowry, formerly of Peterborough, removed from the town of Lindsay to Gravenhurst, one of the progressive lumber towns of northern Ontario. There he formed a co-partnership with his two sons, Aldus and Bradley, under the firm name of B. B. Mowry & Sons. The beginnings of the business were on quite a limited scale, consisting principally in the repairing of machinery used in the many lumber and planing mills in that section of country. The business, however, grew modestly, yet stronger and stronger from year to year. In September of 1887 a terrible fire swept over Gravenhurst, laying almost the whole town in ashes, the Mowry works going down under the flames with the rest. This misfortune, however, was the stepping stone to greater things with this industrious and enterprising firm. In rebuilding they decided to do so on a much larger scale, the works to-day consisting of a two-storey machine shop, 115x40, a pattern shop co-equal in size, and a large foundry in which casting is done daily; six engine lathes, two iron planers, two large drills, bull lathe and a large number of smaller machines are constantly at work in these shops, driven by a Baxter engine, and as it is generally necessary to work overtime, the whole works after dark are illuminated by electric light.

With the expansion of business a third son, Albert, has been added to the firm, which now consists of the father and three sons, who are sole proprietors annd manufacturers of the "Boss" shingle machine, "Boss" jointer, drag saw sapper, and knot saw machinery, and of House's patent filing machine for shingle and mill saws, as well as the manufacturers of all kinds of general mill machinery. All the partners are practical machinists, and orders entrusted to the firm can be relied upon to be executed in a satisfactory manner, while promptness in all their business affairs has ever been a feature of the house of B. B. Mowry & Sons.

GOUGH BROTHERS
SEND GREETINGS!

We won't bother you with a sermon on buying just at this season. It's enough for us to know that you know where you can get the values. Fair Dealing makes Fast Friends. We have had ample proof of this, and we hold a trade that few city houses can boast of. To meet the demands of such a trade we must of necessity carry an immense stock, one that will fully meet all the requirements of taste, person and purse. Such a stock here awaits your coming. A Stock of Proper Garments at Proper Prices. At this season of good cheer Canadians have much to be thankful for—the peace that has prevailed in our Dominion for years, as well as during the past twelve months the plentiful harvest that has been reaped, and the many blessings that have fallen to the share of this country. These will be remembered along with the especial reasons for rejoicing on Christmas day.

While the Christmas season is on it is well to remember judicious economy. This cannot be bettered than by your buying! A noticed point is to get value! This you can positively receive by buying your Match-Making in Russia.

Only a few years ago nearly all the matches used in Russia were imported, but there are now upwards of three hundred match factories in that country. The imports have fallen from 1,535,000 pounds of matches in 1884 to 13,392 pounds in 1889, and in the latter year 31,000 pounds of matches were exported from Russia.

Good Deeds Done.

The good deeds done by that unequalled family liniment, Hagyard's Yellow Oil, during the thirty years it has been held in ever-increasing esteem by the public would fill volumes. We cannot here enumerate all its good qualities, but that it can be relied on as a cure for croup, sore throat and all pains, goes without saying. dw

THERE are many forms of nervous debility in men that yield to the use of Carter's Iron Pills. Those who are troubled with nervous weakness, night sweats, etc., should try them. dw

The Bye-Elections.

Bye-elections for the House of Commons have now been held in North Lanark, in Glengarry and in Richelieu. Three such experiments make too slender a basis to build an opinion on; but whatever advantage there has been has gone to the Liberals. The Government has lost one constituency, and has merely held its own in the other two, where its position was extremely favorable. In North Lanark the Liberals had no expectation that an election was coming, and had paid little attention to the lists; and the government, with a good deal of shrewdness, chose it for the first trial of strength. In Glengarry the majority of Mr. Macmillan, was so large and his personal following and influence so great that from the first Mr. McArthur knew that he was waging a well-nigh hopeless fight. The result up to the present time, therefore, is that the Liberals have gained a seat in Quebec, but that in Ontario each party has simply held its own. The dates of several other bye-elections have been fixed, and the contests are of great importance owing to the slimness of the Government majority. Writs have been issued for Kingston, Lincoln, Halton, Lennox, Prince Edward, North Victoria, South Victoria, East Simcoe, East Bruce and Laval. They have not yet been issued in Peel, East Middlesex and East Elgin, although there have been reports to that effect. In Kingston the addresses of Mr. Laurier and Sir Richard Cartwright have inspired the Liberals with great enthusiasm; they are making a splendid fight and are apparently well organized. Their candidate, Mr. Gunn, represented Kingston in the House of Commons from 1863 to 1867, and was looked upon as an authority on questions of trade and commerce. On the other hand, Mr. Metcalf's eleven years in the Ontario Legislature were noted only for lost opportunities of public service. Mr. Gunn is not only

BY FAR THE ABLER MAN OF THE TWO,

but he is the advocate of a policy from which Kingston would derive great benefit. As Sir Richard pointed out, Kingston stands midway between two great Canadian cities —Toronto and Montreal—and within ten hours' ride of New York and its cluster of cities. If it had free trade it would become a railroad centre, and great manufactories would spring up. It has the best harbor in Canada—at the foot of lake navigation, the head of the St. Lawrence River, and the outlet of the great commerce that would pass to the United States. The Liberals will make a strong fight to redeem this constituency. The Conservative majority in March last, it is true, was large—483—but it was probably obtained in some measure by personal appeals for the "Old Man" who as it was truly said, was asking for their votes for the last time. Now the local Conservative leaders are taking a new tack, and are asking the voters to return Mr. Metcalfe in order to show that they voted last March, not for the man, but for the policy of the party. The most sanguine of Mr. Metcalfe's friends, however, hope for nothing better than barely to hold the seat. The election will take place on the 28th instant.

On the same day will be held the election in Halton, where the Conservatives have renominated the unseated member, Mr. Henderson, and the Liberals his old opponent, Mr. John Waldie. It is understood, however, that Mr. Waldie will not be a candidate, and the Liberals will probably hold a convention shortly. Mr. John D. McGregor has been chosen as the candidate of the Patrons of Industry. Mr. Henderson's majority in March was 104.

In Lennox, where the election will be held on February 4, the candidates are Mr. Uriah Wilson, who represented the constituency in the last Parliament, and Mr. D. W. Allison, the unseated member, who is a splendid campaigner, and who, with the assistance of his friends, will make a strong fight to increase the majority of 57. Lennox is a county which, under reciprocity, with the people of the State of New York. As it is the census returns shows that its population between 1881 and 1891 actually declined by some 1,500. There has been a decline in the same period of nearly 2,000 in the population of the neighboring County of Prince Edward. This is the peninsula which forms the Bay of Quinte. It is studded with splendid harbors, and under natural conditions should be a flourishing part of the Province. It happens that the Liberal candidate here, Dr. Platt, was one of the first men to advocate unrestricted reciprocity, and has given that policy a steady and powerful support. He made a name for himself in Parliament, and from him to Mr. A. C. Miller was a great fall. Mr. Miller's majority was only 21, and if it is not turned into a minority it will indicate a curious state of public feeling in the county. The election will take place here and in South and North Victoria on February 4. In South Victoria the candidates will be Mr. Fairbairn, who was elected in the bye-election of 1890 by a railway subsidy, and Mr. Walters, who made a splendid run for the Liberals in March last, and was defeated by only 25. Mr. Fairbairn, during his short stay in the House, has shown himself little interested in the wants of the farming community, and has voted against every proposal for bettering their condition by enlarging trade with the United States or by relieving them of customs taxation. Mr. Walters is an able man and has a large personal influence, and he ought to be elected. In North Victoria the candidates are Mr. Barron and Mr. Hughes. All the signs point to the re-election of Mr. Barron, the Liberal candidate. He has served the constituency and the country well during the last five years, and has taken a prominent part in the debates of Parliament. The career of Mr. Hughes has been exceedingly erratic, and the utterances of his journal have been violent without strength.

WOULD DO A LARGE TRADE

IN EAST SIMCOE,

where the election will be held on February 11th, the Conservatives have put up Mr. W. H. Bennett to oppose Dr. Spohn, who was elected last March by a majority of 207. There is no reason in the world for making a change. Mr. Bennett is much inferior in ability to Dr. Spohn, who as one of the ablest of the new members in the present Parliament showed an unusual aptitude for public affairs and does honor to the constituency.

Among the other new men who achieved distinction last session was Mr. William Gibson, elected in Lincoln last March by a majority of 48. He devoted to the public welfare his great energy and the advantage of a thorough, practical knowledge of the construction of public works, and the result was that he was able to render his country eminent service. His fine personal qualities win him friends wherever he goes, and altogether the hope of the Liberals that he will be returned by an increased majority is well grounded. He is opposed by Mr. Neelon, whose political record will arouse no enthusiasm among Conservatives, and will certainly not win over any Liberal votes.

In East Bruce the contest between Mr. Truax, the unseated Liberal member, and Mr. Cargill, who represented the constituency in the last Parliament, will be keen. Mr. Truax is a strong candidate, and under his lead the Liberals will fight well and with their hopes of success.

The acceptance of Col. Ouimet of an office of emolument ader the Crown, has necessitated an election in Laval. His majority last March was large, and it is not likely that he will be defeated. On Friday next there will be an election in Richmond, N. S., the candidates being Mr. Gillies, Conservative, and and Mr. Flynn, Liberal. The Liberals everywhere seem to be full of enthusiasm, and as the contests are close, there is no need for warning them against over confidence. They are splendidly led, while the representatives of Ontario in the Cabinet are such as to make the rank and file of the Conservative party feel ashamed of their leaders.

A Fact

WORTH knowing is that blood diseases which all other remedies fail to cure, yield to Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Fresh confirmation of this statement comes to hand daily. Even such deep-seated and stubborn complaints as Rheumatism, Rheumatic Gout, and the like, are thoroughly eradicated by the use of this wonderful alterative.

Mrs. R. Irving Dodge, 110 West 125th street, New York, certifies:—

"About two years ago, after suffering for nearly two years from rheumatic gout, being able to walk only with great discomfort, and having tried various remedies, including mineral waters, without relief, I saw by an advertisement in a Chicago paper that a man had been relieved of this distressing complaint, after long suffering, by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I then decided to make a trial of this medicine, and took it regularly for eight months. I am pleased to say that it effected a complete cure, and that I have since had no return of the disease."

Mrs. L. A Stark, Nashua, N. H., writes: "One year ago I was taken ill with rheumatism, being confined to my house six months. I came out of the sickness very much debilitated, with no appetite, and my system disordered in every way. I commenced to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla and began to improve at once, gaining in strength and soon recovering my usual health. I cannot say too much in praise of this well-known medicine."

"I have taken a great deal of medicine, but nothing has done me so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I felt its beneficial effects before I had quite finished one bottle, and I can freely testify that it is the best blood-medicine I know of."—L. W. Ward, Sr., Woodland, Texas.

Self Application of Electricity

FOR MEDICAL PURPOSES

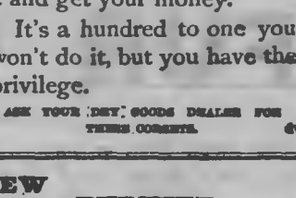
BY THE

DORENWEND ELECTRIC BELT

And Attachments.

HEAD OFFICE—103 Yonge St., Toronto

THE WORLD'S BEST.



ALL diseases curable by Electricity can be treated at home by the Dorenwend Appliance. The Dorenwend is the only legitimate Electric Belt made which fulfils the requirements of Electro-medical science. It is a complete BODY BATTERY. It has an independent Battery, which generates a mild, continuous current of Electricity (without shocks) and can be regulated to suit the strongest man or the weakest child. It is a CURRENT of QUANTITY, not merely a sensation current, and the quantity current is the greatest curative. It is a successful treatment for INDIGESTION, RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, LIVER AND KIDNEY TROUBLES, WEAK BACK, SPINAL DISEASE, HEART DISEASE, NERVOUS DEBILITY, PARALYSIS, VERTIGO, FEMALE COMPLAINTS, IMPOTENCE, SEXUAL DECLINE and all diseases of the Nervous and Muscular Systems.

Remember that the DORENWEND BELT is the very latest invention in this line, and was invented by a competent electrician, and ranks as the best in the world; we defy anyone to bring proof to the contrary.

Do not class this Belt with the humbug combinations of leather and metal with which the country is being flooded. If you wish to experiment with cheap articles, buy THEM. But if you want to procure a genuine Electric Belt and one that will be a benefit get a Dorenwend Belt.

A Serious Accident.

On Saturday Mr. Thos. Bolton, of Lakefield, was admitted to the Nicholls' Hospital suffering from the effects of an accident. On Monday last he was splitting wood when the axe slipped, inflicting a deep cut on his left knee. The wound was somewhat neglected, as the man did not think it serious until Saturday, when he was removed to the hospital. Blood poisoning has now set in, and there is very little chance of his recovery.

Gospel Temperance Meeting.

Miss Camilla Sanderson addressed the gospel meeting at the Royal Templar's hall yesterday (Sunday) afternoon. She gave a running comment on a portion of the 17th chapter of St. John's Gospel beginning with the 4th and ending with the 21st verse, touching upon Christ's finished work as referred to in the 4th verse, but dwelling most particularly on the necessity of our union with Christ in order that we may prove to the world that Jesus is the sent of the father. Miss Sanderson dealt with her subject very forcibly and was most attentively listened to throughout.

Personal.

Mr. John Lockhart, of Harvey street, is seriously ill of the prevailing epidemic. His condition gives his friends some anxiety.

Mr. A. Roy McDonald of Montreal, Professor of Dancing Department, &c., is in town to-day. He is a guest at the Grand Central.

His Honour Judge Weller has returned home from a visit to his brother in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and has resumed the exercise of his judicial duties.

Mrs. Wm. Mercer, though she is still very ill, is considerably improved in health. Both Miss Jessie Mercer and Mr. Frank Mercer, who have been prostrated with la grippe, are improving.

Mr. Wm. Hamilton, president of the William Hamilton Manufacturing Company, is prostrated with an attack of inflamma. He was quite ill on Saturday evening, there being complications of bronchitis and heart failure. His condition improved yesterday, and his condition is not now considered serious.

Mr. W. Ferguson has returned to town for the winter, from his farm at Melita, Souris District, Manitoba. He reports that all the settlers in that district had good grain crops and received good prices for their produce, chiefly wheat. The root crops are also very good, but the farmers show a disposition to turn their attention more to coarse grains. New comers have not sufficient knowledge of the soil and climatic conditions to enable them to grow roots successfully, especially in the matter of buildings warm enough to keep roots from frost. Mr. Ferguson says there has been a large influx of settlers into his district and that all the government land has been taken up, with a good demand for the lands of the C. P. R. and Northwest Land Company. The prices now being paid for improved farms varies from $10 to $12 per acre. The companies hold their land at from four to ten dollars per acre. Everything considered, Mr. Ferguson thinks it is a good country both to invest in and to settle in.

Obituary.

The Late Mrs. Renwick.

On Saturday evening Mrs. Alice Renwick, relict of the late John Renwick, passed away at the residence of her niece, Mrs. William Mercer, 369 Hunter street. Mrs. Renwick was a native of Jedburg, Scotland, where she was born on March 28th, 1815. She has resided with Mrs. Mercer for the past eighteen years. About eight months ago she suffered a fall, from the effects of which she never fully recovered. Three days ago she caught a severe cold, and this acting on her enfeebled constitution closed her earthly career, and she passed peacefully away Saturday evening. Owing to the dangerous illness of Mrs. Mercer and two other members of the family it was thought best to remove the remains to the residence of Mr. Andrew Mercer, from which the funeral took place at 10 o'clock this morning, the remains being laid at rest in the family plot, Little Lake cemetery. Mrs. Renwick was a lady of very excellent character and, though she lived a very retired life, she greatly endeared herself by her kindness and amability to all who had the privilege of enjoying her society. She was a consistent Christian and a faithful attendant at St. Andrew's Presbyterian church.

The Evangelistic Meetings.

Mr. Meikle, the evangelist, held crowded meetings yesterday. In the morning he occupied the pulpit of the George street Methodist church. He took as his text the third chapter of Revelations, from the fourteenth verse to end of chapter. He dwelt particularly on "lukewarm Christians," and said they had just enough religion to make them miserable. He concluded by an earnest appeal to all present to be one thing or the other, or, as the text had it, "hot or cold."

The afternoon meeting was held in the opera house, for men only, and the building was filled. Mr. Meikle gave an earnest, straightforward talk to the men present, which appeared to have great effect. He sang with vigour the touching pieces, "Over the Line" and "A Mother's Farewell to her Boy."

The evening service was in St. Paul's Church, which edifice was filled. The preacher took as his text I Cor., iii, 11, and Isa., xxviii, 16. He referred to Christ as a foundation for Christians to build upon. He was of tried stone, and could not be moved.

The meetings this week will be held in the Baptist Church, Murray street.

"Grange Hall" Doings.

Another Act in the Drama.

This morning the EXAMINER is informed the Grangers took possession of Esthen hall, and Mr. J. J. Brealy, hearing of the occupation, visited the spot armed with his rifle. He demanded admission. The door was opened, and Mr. Brealy, in the scuffle that ensued, was deprived of his Winchester and 36 cartridges. In addition, the application of the horse whips of the Grangers, compelled Mr. Brealy to beat a hasty retreat.

The Dancing Classes.

Mr. A. Roy McDonald, professor of dancing and deportment, arrived from Montreal to-day. He will be pleased to meet anyone interested in the same at the Grand Central Hotel either to-night or in the morning. Mr. McDonald comes to Peterborough well recommended, and has large and successful classes in other large towns. He is not leaving Montreal, but still continues his classes there. He is desirous of starting permanent classes here under his own supervision, assisted by competent teachers. He has with him many testimonials from prominent persons in Montreal and other cities, and is still the instructor of all the ladies' seminaries in Montreal.

DIED.

RENWICK—At the residence of her niece Mrs. Wm. Mercer, No. 369 Hunter street, on Saturday, Jan. 16th, 1892, Alice Renwick, relict of the late John Renwick, and a native of Jedburgh, Scotland, aged 77 years.

Church Chimes.

GEORGE STREET METHODIST CHURCH

Divine service was conducted yesterday at this place of worship in the morning by the evangelist, Mr. Meikle, and in the evening by the pastor, Rev. J. H. Locke. At the evening service Mr. Bowman sang two solos in fine voice. The congregations were large.

ST. PAUL'S PRESBYTERIAN.

The pastor, Rev. E. F. Torrance, conducted the service yesterday morning, and in the evening Mr. Meikle, the evangelist preached at the evening service. The anthem, "God of Morn, God of Night," was well rendered by the choir, and Master Gussie Arlidge sang the solo "I heard the voice of Jesus say." The services were well attended.

ST. ANDREW'S PRESBYTERIAN.

Owing to the illness of the pastor, Rev. A. McWilliams, the pulpit was occupied yesterday by the Rev. J. H. Locke, of the George street Methodist church, in the morning, and by the Rev. E. F. Torrance, of St. Paul's, in the evening. Good sermons were enjoyed by the congregation.

CHARLOTTE STREET METHODIST.

The Rev S. T. Bartlett, of Lakefield, occupied the pulpit at this church yesterday morning and evening. He preached stirring sermons, which were much appreciated by the congregation.

Dyspepsia

Intense Suffering for 8 years—Restored to Perfect Health.

Few people have suffered more severely from dyspepsia than Mr. E. A. McMahon, a well known grocer of Staunton, Va. He says: "Before 1878 I was in excellent health, weighing over 200 pounds. In that year an ailment developed into acute dyspepsia, and soon I was reduced to 163 pounds, suffering burning sensations in the stomach, palpitation of the heart, nausea, and indigestion. I could not sleep, had all heart in my work, had fits of melancholia, and for days at a time I would have welcomed death. I became morose, sullen and irritable, and for eight years life was a burden. I tried many physicians and many remedies. One day a workman employed by me suggested that I take Sarsaparilla, as it had cured his wife of dyspepsia. I did so, and before taking the whole of a bottle I began to feel like a new man. The terrible pains to which I had been subjected, ceased, the palpitation of the heart subsided, my stomach became easier, nausea disappeared, and my entire system began to tone up. With returning strength came activity of mind and body. Before the fifth bottle was taken I had regained my former weight and natural condition. I am today well and I ascribe it to taking Hood's Sarsaparilla."

Women's Auxiliary.
The winter quarterly meeting of the Toronto diocesan division of the Women's Auxiliary will be held in Peterborough on Wednesday and Thursday, January 20th and 21st. A reception and tea will be given to the delegates and their friends in the South Ward mission building on Wednesday, from five to seven p.m. 'Buses will then convey the ladies to St. John's for evening prayer at 7.30. A mass meeting for women will be held in the school house immediately after, to which all women are cordially invited. Papers will be read by Mrs. Broughall and Mrs. Cummings, of Toronto, Miss Stewart, of Orillia, and Miss Wilgress, of Cobourg. Holy Communion will be administered in St. John's church at ten a.m. on Thursday, when the Lord Bishop of Mackenzie River will preach. The afternoon session will be held in the Sons of England hall at 2.30. This meeting will be open to women only, and will be followed by tea in the same building. At eight p.m. a public missionary meeting will be held in St. John's school house, to which all are cordially invited, the Rev. J. C. Davidson, chairman. The Lord Bishop of Mackenzie River will give an address, describing his work, and it is to be hoped that as many as possible will avail themselves of the opportunity of hearing this devoted missionary.

Nicholls Hospital.

Important Addition to its Buildings—The New Diphtheria Ward now Ready for Use—Brief Description of the New Addition.

The Nicholls Hospital is widening the area of its beneficence. It is known as being well adapted and equipped for its special work, and under the present good management, has become known all over this part of the country, for the excellence of the attendance, and the great care exercised with each patient. Dr. T. F. Chamberlain, the Government inspector of Prisons and Public Charities, who was in town last week, visited the hospital, and expressed himself as being well pleased with the institution. He said it was the best equipped and managed institution of its character in the Province. Such words of praise coming from the lips of one who, in the course of his duty, has visited every such institution in the Province, speak more forcibly of its usefulness than if coming from any other less qualified person. The trustees have for some time seen the necessity of providing additional accommodation for patients suffering with diseases, which from their excessively contagious character, demand isolation from the family, and which could not be received in the main building. To meet this demand the new part of the building known as the infectious diseases or diphtheria ward has been erected and completed. Dr. Chamberlain expressed himself as being highly pleased with the new wards, saying they were well adapted to the purpose they were intended to serve.

THE NEW BUILDINGS

consist of the adaptation of the existing maternity ward to two wards for infectious diseases; to this is added an extension north ward of 92x17 feet, formed by adding another story to the laundry, summer kitchen, and other offices (one story in height) and adding an extension 16x31 to accommodate staircase giving separate entrance to this ward, and to provide room for a convalescent ward. The separate entrance is from the street on the west of the hospital buildings, Sunnyside Avenue, and the stairs open on a passage on the eastern side of the new story and continuous with the original entry to the maternity ward. From this passage there is admission to a balcony looking on the court between the new part and the main building. From this balcony there is an iron fire escape leading to the ground.

The new infectious diseases wing contains six wards of the following dimensions:—17x16 feet, 11x12 feet, two of 11x16 feet, 11x15 feet, and one, the convalescent ward, 16x31. These wards are each provided with open fire-places, the largest, however, having two. These are not for heating purposes, but solely for ventilation, the heating being provided for by the general hot water heating system in the building. At the central portion of the new wing is the hoist communicating with the kitchen below; here are also found clothes closets and bath room. The situation of the new wing, in relation to the main building, admits, in case of not all required for infectious diseases, of the maternity ward being isolated from the new building, and connected with the main building as formerly.

The new addition is fitted up with every consideration for perfect ventilation and the latest demands of sanitary science, and will meet a want that has long been felt. The wing is now ready for use but it is to be hoped that the occasion may be long deferred. The plans were prepared by Mr. W. Blackwell, Mr. W. H. McIlwain was the contractor, Mr. James Bogue did the brick work, the plastering was done by Mr. Henry, Mr. Adam Hall had the contract for the plumbing, etc.; the painting was done by day work. The contract price for the new wing was $2,278.

Opening Meeting of the New Council.

The Mayor Delivers his Inaugural Address—Appointment of Auditors, and Committee to Draft Standing Committees.

The proceedings of the first statutory meeting of the new town council for 1892 was opened at 11 o'clock this forenoon in the council chamber, Mr. John R. Cobb, town clerk, reading the official returns of the result of the elections.

The Mayor and councillors had previously taken the oath of office. There were present—the mayor-elect, Mr. Kendry, and councillors Cahill, Kelly, Young, Bradburn, Dawson, Meldrum, McIlwain, Dennistoun, and Mulhern and Ferguson.

Mr. J. Kendry then took his seat as mayor,

THE MAYOR'S INAUGURAL ADDRESS.

Mr. KENDRY when he rose to speak was received with applause.

Mr. KENDRY said:—

GENTLEMEN:—It gives me great pleasure to greet you at this inaugural meeting of the council. I am pleased to see so many of the old members and would cordially welcome the new ones, hoping that we all will endeavour to deserve the confidence of the ratepayers who have elected us to fill our respective positions. As we have come to the beginning of another municipal year it is a source of satisfaction to be able to report prosperity and a large increase of population in the town during the past year, and I hope the coming year will be no less prosperous and that every effort will be made by the council and myself to make this the best year in the town's history.

Sewerage will be a vital question and one that should be well considered. I would suggest that as soon as we receive the report on sewerage now being prepared by the sanitary engineer, a public meeting shall be called and an opportunity given, to have the report thoroughly discussed, so that the ratepayers may be able to vote intelligently on the question when it is brought before them.

OUR FINANCES.

I need hardly point out that it is essential for the council this year to use every effort to reduce the expenditure. In order to do this the strictest economy compatible with the best interests of the town will be necessary. Our aim should be to reduce our rate of taxation and so make this a desirable town for people to locate in. I would just say here that I am not in favour of granting bonuses to manufacturing concerns. This town, with its railway and natural facilities and its progressive business spirit, should manufacturer looking for a desirable place, have inducements enough for any bona fide I would strongly recommend in view of the natural desire of the public for the fullest information relating to the finances of the town, and the various accounts connected therewith, that the auditors' report for last year, when completed, shall be published. Other towns and cities are in the habit of doing this, and as the expense would not be great, and no such report has been published since 1885, the ratepayers, I think, would be pleased to have it for this year.

In conclusion I would recommend that in order to expedite the business of the council some system be adopted for having a stated time for the various committees to meet each month, and in case of any special meeting being called the regular two days' notice be given.

The Mayor on taking his seat was applauded.

Minutes of the previous meeting were then read and adopted.

APPOINTMENT OF AUDITORS.

Mr. DENNISTOUN introduced a by-law to appoint auditors for 1892.

The council then went into committee, Mr. Kelly in the chair. The Mayor nominated Mr. F. E. Bell as one of the auditors, and the council then confirmed the Mayor's nomination and elected Mr. W. H. Budden as the other auditor. The salary to be the same as last year, $75.

Mr. Meldrum moved, and Mr. Kelly seconded, that councillors Cahill, Winch, Kelly, Bradburn, Dawson, Meldrum, Mulhern and Dennistoun be a committee to strike the Standing Committees for the year 1892.—Carried.

The council then adjourned until 7.30 p.m.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

Rev. Mr. Meikle, evangelist, gave an impressive address at the young men's meeting Saturday evening, which was listened to with much profit by the large number of young men present. The singing was led by the orchestra. An after meeting was held with good results.

Mr. Albert Hamilton led the Bible study and consecration meeting Sabbath morning, which was a great blessing to all present.

Yesterday afternoon the opera house was filled with an interested audience of men only, who were greatly helped by the manly and straightforward address given by evangelist Meikle on the prevailing sins among men. It made a marked impression on all and many asked for prayer and remained to be personally dealt with, and several accepted Jesus, who alone can save us from our sins. The Y. M. C. A. band was out in full force, and led the singing very effectively.

Last evening at the gospel and song service Mr. Potter, the sailors' missionary, delivered a helpful gospel address, which made a good impression on all present, and fruit was borne for the Lord Jesus. A letter was also read from Mr. F. G. Saunders, of the China Inland Mission, which was full of encouragement, and the earnest advice given us as an association will be helpful to us in our work this year. The service was a blessed one, and we are receiving showers of blessing, for which we praise God.

The annual meeting of this association will be held on Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, when reports of the past year's work will be received and new Board of Directors elected for 1892.

Other sufferers from cold in the head and catarrh have been promptly cured, why not you? Capt. D. H. Lyon, manager and proprietor of the C.P.R. and R. W. & Co. car ferry, Prescott, Ont., says: I used Nasal Balm for a prolonged case of cold in the head. Two applications effected a complete cure in less than 24 hours. I would not take $100 for my bottle of Nasal Balm if I could not replace it. 1w

A VERY CURIOUS MIX-UP

THE TRUE STORY OF ANNIE HINDLE'S TWO MARRIAGES.

First a Wife, Then a He and, and Both Unions Sanctioned by the Church—Once a Stage Favorite, Now in Retirement, with a History That Tests Human Credence.

On the Jersey City Heights the other day there was held a funeral which in one respect presented probably the strangest spectacle ever witnessed in this or any other country. This funeral brought together as mourners not more than a dozen men and women; but among them were several who were once famous in an odd way on the American stage. They gathered in the little parlor of a pretty cottage; they sat for a while around a handsome coffin; they talked in low and sad voices, saying many good words of the woman who lay dead among the palms, the roses, and the smilax; and they seemed genuinely sorry for the chief mourner.

She was a striking person in every way. Her face was masculine in all its lines; her eyes were gray, but lit with a kindly expression; her mouth was firmly cut and, though her lips quivered with emotion, one could detect that this mourner was a woman of great mental force and capabilities. She was probably between 45 and 50 years of age. Doubtless she had been in her prime an excellent type of what is called the dashingly handsome girl. Once, indeed, audiences in every city in this country had gazed in wonderment and admiration upon her, and perhaps she is not yet entirely forgotten; but here she was a mourner by the side of her dead—that dead a pretty woman, and in life the lawful wife of the woman who now shed tears over her coffin. The wife of a woman? The expression sounds absurd, yet it is absolutely, literally correct. Annie Ryan, the wife, was dead, and Annie Hindle, the husband, was burying her. No stage romance is this, no fable of grotesque imagination, but simply proof anew that truth indeed is stranger than fiction. Listen to the facts, told as plainly as one can tell a story that almost surpasses human credence:

ANNIE HINDLE IN HER MAKE-UP.

When Annie Hindle was five years old the woman who had adopted her, and who gave this portege her own name, put her on the stage in the pottery district of Hertfordshire in England. The little girl sang well even so early. There was a fearlessness in her manner that tickled her rough audiences, and they made a favorite of her from the very first. At the outset she sang tender songs, with love as their theme, but, as she grew up and travelled to London, she enlarged her "repertory." One day, half in jest, she put on a man's costume and sang a rollicking ditty about wine, women, and the races. A shrewd manager who listened to her saw a new field open to her. In a week Annie Hindle was a "male impersonator," and all London was talking about the wonderful and minute accuracy of her mimicry. An American manager bargained with her, and about 1867 she came to New York, to triumph here as completely as she had triumphed in London. She was a blonde, about five feet six with a plump form, well-shaped hands, small feet, and closely cropped hair, which, on and off the stage, she parted on one side, brushing it away from the temples just as men do. Her voice was deeper than an alto, yet it was sweet, and it sang true and with great expression.

"Annie Hindle was the first out-and-out "male impersonator" New York's stage had ever seen. Ella Wesner had not yet ceased to dance obscurely in the ballet, with her sister; Blanche Selwyn was unheard of; Maggie Weston was yet to come along in the crowded ranks of Hindle's imitators. But in '67 all the glory was Hindle's, all the novelty was hers, and she got all the money, too. It is a fact that this dashing singer was the recipient of as many "mash" notes as probably ever went to a stage favorite in this country. Once she compared notes with H. J. Montague, that carelessly handsome actor at whose shrine so many silly women had worshipped; but Hindle's admirers far outnumbered his, and they were all women, strange as that may seem.

Travelling through America about this time was Charles Vivian, the English comique. He was a handsome fellow, a ready wit, a free spender, a great entertainer, and an admirable performer of the Lingard type. He was famous before he came here, and on Broadway—for our Vanity Fair then had a variety house on every third block—he never worked for less than $150 a week. His path crossed Hindle's one night. She was earning as much money as he was; she was as famous in one way as he was in another! their homes were across the sea, and there was otherwise much in common between them. Charley Vivian speedily fell in love with Annie Hindle. Nobody was surprised. The couple seemed devoted, and they made the courtship brief. On Sept. 16, 1868, Charles Vivian and Annie Hindle were married by a minister in Philadelphia. They started at once for the Pacific coast, as happy, apparently, as a pair of young doves. Yet they did not travel far together. At Denver a little later Vivian and his wife separated. They never met again. He told his friends that their honeymoon had lasted one night. Hindle has since said that he did not tell the truth.

"He lived with me," she declared, rather bitterly, "several months—long enough to black both eyes and otherwise mark me; yet I was a good and true wife to him."

Vivian did not get a divorce. He had no cause. Hindle did not seek one. She was free enough. So they travelled apart, both in their own way, busy enough, yet unhappy; and in March, 1880, Vivian died in Leadville. He had not prospered in his latter days. He should have had thousands of friends, for he it was who founded the great Order of Elks. Yet he was practically penniless when he died, and they buried him in an unmarked grave, which waited seven years before the Elks put a monument over it to the memory of their order's founder.

Hindle's strangest romance came later. In all her travels she had carried a dresser. Ella Wesner was once high factotum to this dashing male impersonator, and half a dozen women since famously known on the stage had at various times helped to "make up" Hindle and to dress her. In the summer of 1886 Annie Hindle's dresser and faithful companion was a pretty little brunette of 25—a quiet, demure, girl, who made friends wherever she went. She accompanied Hindle to and from the theatre, and she was a very valuable help to the singer. One night in June, 1886, Annie Hindle and Annie Ryan left the Grand Rapids theatre, where Hindle was then engaged, and drove to the Barnard House. In room 19 a minister of the gospel, the Rev. E. H. Brooks, awaited the couple. There was a best man, jolly Gilbert Sareney, who, oddly enough, was a female impersonator, but there was no bridesmaid. At 10 o'clock Mr. Brooks performed the ceremony, and solemnly pronounced Annie Hindle the husband of Annie Ryan. The female groom wore a dress suit; the bride was in her travelling costume. The minister put a fat fee in his pocket book, and Mr. Sareney, the female impersonator, and Miss Hindle, the new husband, opened a bottle of wine and smoked a cigarette or two. There was a sensation in Grand Rapids, of course, but the clergyman defended his action manfully. "I know all the circumstances," he said. "The groom gave me her—I mean his—name as Charles Hindle, and he assured me that he was a man. The bride is a sensible girl and she was of age. I had no other course to pursue. I believe they love each other and that they will be happy."

ELLA WESNER, TWENTY YEARS AGO.

The bride was happy and the clergyman was right; her happiness ended only with her death, for she it was around whose coffin Annie Hindle and her friends gathered the other day in the little cottage on the Jersey Heights. For four or five years Annie Hindle and her wife had lived in this cosey nest, which Hindle had built many years ago with her savings. The neighbors respected them. The outer world did not disturb them with its gossip. That they could live together openly as husband and wife, the husband in female attire always, and yet cause wonderment devoid of scandal, is the best proof of the esteem in which those around them held them. No children were born to them, and perhaps that is why Annie Hindle, with tears in her eyes, told a Sun reporter the other day that the best of her life is gone. A man's widow and a woman's widower, is she not a strange figure on the American stage?—New York Sun.

NORMAN, ONT., January 15, 1890.
W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville, Ont.
DEAR SIR,—Your "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills" are the best regulator for the system that humanity can use. Life is as the time-piece: frail and delicate are many of its works. A tiny particle of foreign substance adheres to the smallest wheel in the works, and what is the result?—at first, only a slight difference is perceptible in its time-keeping, but wait you; as the obstruction grows, the irregularity becomes greater, until at last, what could have been rectified with little trouble, in the beginning, will now require much care in thoroughly cleansing the entire works. So it is in human life—A slight derangement is neglected, it grows and increases, imperceptibly at first, then rapidly, until what could, in the beginning, have been cured with little trouble, becomes almost fatal. To prevent this, I advise all to purify the system frequently, by the use of Morse's Pills, and so preserve vigor and vitality.
Yours faithfully,
H. F. ATWELL.

QUEER OLD CARVINGS.

THE QUAINT DESIGNS IN SOME OF ENGLAND'S CHURCHES.

Many Things of Beauty to Be Seen, but None More Interesting than the Miserere—Rich in Illustrations of Medieval Life—The Scenes Depicted.

It is surprising what a vast amount of beautiful design and exquisite workmanship is "hidden from the vulgar eye" in out-of-the-way corners of the cathedrals, collegiate and parish churches of old England. No matter where one turns, whether to the bosses of the roof, the tiles of the floor, the stained glass of the windows, or the carvings of the font; whether one looks to the details of the screen, the marks and inscriptions on the bells, or the carvings of the pew ends, some object of art is sure to attract attention and to provide healthful food for invigorating thought.

Even under the seats of the stalls art and design in some of their highest forms exist and make a most interesting study for those who will take the trouble to look at them.

STALLS FROM AN OLD MANUSCRIPT.

Among all the varied objects that present themselves to one's notice the carved misereres are the most singular and the richest in illustration of medieval life, manners, occupation, sentiments and literature.

But first as to the use and position of stalls and misereres. Stalls are ranges of seats fixed in the choirs of churches or chapter houses for the use of the clergy. In most ancient churches of the west, in the cathedrals and great minsters, the abbot or bishop sat at the head of the choir behind the altar. Around them on semi-circular benches of stone, marble or wood were ranged the capitulars. The arrangement survives in some of the oldest Italian churches. From the thirteenth century the seats of the clergy have been placed in the choir, that part of the church where the service is sung or chanted.

The stalls are arranged in one, two or more rows down the side of the choir. Each row is raised by a step above the next one in front of it, and each row has its prayer desk or prie-dieu. The prie-dieu of the lower row forms the front, and the back of this row forms the prie-dieu of the second row, and so on, the backs of the last row being against the wall and often surmounted with richly carved canopies. The stalls consist of the miserere, the loose seat which turns upon hinges or pivots; the prie-dieu in front of the priest, the lateral pillar or partition, the elbow-rest, the back and the canopy. The miserere, when the stall is used for sitting, forms a strong, substantial seat, but when turned up the balance is usually so delicate that by a slight movement it can be made to fall forward with a loud noise.

There is a tradition founded upon this peculiarity that they were originally constructed as a preventive, or rather detective, of sleep on the part of priests during the celebration of divine worship.

It is on the underside of the seat, the part forming the rest or bracket when turned up, that the carvings are found, and these are, as a general rule, arranged according to one regular plan, although examples of a different character occasionally occur. This general plan is a large central subject, forming the rest and two lesser subjects, one on either side, connected with the central one by bands or foliage. Sometimes these side fobes form a part of the general subject of the carving. Sometimes they are quite distinct and are not infrequently simply composed of elegant foliage.

The range of subjects is a wide one, embracing mediæval traditions and romances, historical incidents, scenes in domestic, military and monastic life, armorial decorations, grotesque animals, diableries, etc.

Among the earliest remaining examples of miserer in England are those at Exeter Cathedral. They date from the end of the twelfth or the beginning of the thirteenth century, and are probably of Bishop Marshall's time, A.D. 1196 to 1206. The designs are of the usual character, among them a merman and mermaid holding a circular object—probably a mirror—between them, an elephant, a knight sitting in a boat drawn by a swan in illustration of the medieval romance of the "Chevalier au Cygne," a knight attacking a leopard—a monster on whose back is a saddle, a minstrel with pipe and tabor. At Rochester and Chichester there are some fine early examples.

In Norwich Cathedral there are sixty-two stalls intended for the prior, the superior and sixty monks. They are exceedingly rich and elaborate in character of the perpendicular period and probably of the fifteenth century. The misereres are of two periods, those of the earlier part of the fifteenth century being characterized by sharp angles to the ledge or seat, and those of the latter part of the century by having it rounded at the sides and sinking inwards at the center. Among the carvings is one of a schoolmaster in the midst of his scholars, scourging one of them in an energetic manner, and the singular but not unusual subject of a fox running off with a goose, pursued by an old woman with a distaff, while taking advantage of the confusion a pig feeds from the pot and sundry domestic utensils are thrown down.

Can You Eat

Heartily, with relish, and without distress afterward? If not, we recommend to you Hood's Sarsaparilla, which creates a good appetite and so invigorates the stomach and bowels that the food is properly digested and all its nutriment assimilated.

Hood's Pills are purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, effective, but do not cause pain or gripe. Be sure to get Hood's.

The Head Surgeon

Of the Lisbon Medical Company is now at Toronto, Canada, and may be consulted either in person or by letter on all chronic diseases peculiar to men. Men, young, old or middle-aged, who find themselves nervous, weak and exhausted, who are broken down from excess or overwork, resulting in many of the following symptoms: Mental depression, premature old age, loss of memory, bad dreams, dimness of sight, palpitation of the heart, emissions, lack of energy, pain in the kidneys, headache, pimples on the face or body, itching or peculiar sensations about the scrotum, wasting of the organs, dizziness, specks before the eyes, twitching of the muscles, eyelids and elsewhere, bashfulness, deposits in the urine, loss of will power, tenderness of the scalp and spine, weak and flabby muscles, desire to sleep, failure to be rested by sleep, constipation, dullness of hearing, loss of voice, desire for solitude, excitability of temper, sunken eyes surrounded with leaden circle, oily looking skin, etc., are all symptoms of nervous debility that lead to insanity and death unless cured. The spring or vital force having lost its tension, every function wears in consequence. Those who through abuse committed in ignorance may be permanently cured. Send your address for book on all diseases peculiar to men. Books sent free sealed. Heart disease, the symptoms of which are faint spells, purple lips, numbness, palpitation, skip beats, hot flashes, rush of blood to the head, dull pain in the heart with beats strong, rapid and irregular, the second heart beat quicker than the first, pain about the breast bone, etc., can positively be cured. No cure, no pay. Send for book. Address M. V. LUBON, 24 Macdonell ave., Toronto, Canada.

TRAIN ROBBER PERRY.

A Pinkerton Detective is in Canada Looking for Him.

SUSPENSION BRIDGE, Jan. 1.—Saturday A. A. Eusten, a Pinkerton detective of New York, passed through here.

He is on the trail of Oliver Perry, the man who robbed the express car on the New York Central at Utica last fall.

The detective had a letter written by Perry and mailed at Guelph, Ont. He went to Guelph and found the mail clerk who received the letter. He gave a minute description of the man, which tallied with Agent Moore's description of the man who committed the robbery. The mail clerk remembered the man particularly because he presented the letter with an American stamp on it and he told him he would have to use a Canadian stamp.

Eusten is confident he will capture the man in a short time. He says Perry has friends who keep him posted on the movements of officials. This friend is a woman who corresponds with him under an assumed name.

Toronto Topics.

TORONTO, Jan. 18.—The friends of Mrs. John Beverley Robinson were shocked to hear of her death yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Robinson had been ailing for the past three weeks, and while in a weakened state contracted pneumonia, which ended fatally yesterday. Mrs. Robinson was a daughter of the late Judge Hagerman, in whose office John Beverly Robinson as a young man studied law. She was a lady peculiarly fitted to shine in the high social position that she has occupied all her life, and it is not stating anything invidious to say that Government House never had a hostess who was so completely at home as the lady who died yesterday. Her reign at the gubernatorial residence was the most brilliant period of its history. She had a sweet natural voice and a decided taste for music, a taste of which her daughters have inherited a large share. She also possessed a perfect genius for making social events of all kinds a success. Hon. Mr. Robinson will have the sincere sympathy of the whole city in his heavy bereavement.

Ex-Detective Smith, whose death is announced in another column, had for many years ably filled the position of detective for the C.P.R. Previously to this the deceased was on the Ontario Provincial detective force. He was then in his prime of life and in that capacity he cleverely unravelled some of the greatest mysteries of the day. He worked up the Melady murder case at Goderich some 15 years ago and was instrumental in securing the arrest, conviction and execution of young Melady for the murder of his father and step-mother. Mr. Smith also arrested Mrs. Campbell, who was hanged at London about 12 years ago for the murder of her husband.

Among the victims of the prevalent disorder the death of Lieut.-Col. A. A. Miller, for some years commandant of the Q.O.R. has to be recorded. Deceased caught the prevalent disorder some little time ago and was being attended by Dr. Doolittle. Cardiac troubles, however, added to the original complications and he succumbed last evening to heart failure. Deceased was commandant of the regiment at the time of the Northwest rebellion.

Mr. William Smith an oldresident, of this city, passed away at his residence, 183 Duke-street, on Saturday. Mr. Smith was a native of Oxfordshire, England, but came to this country some 60 years ago. During 50 years of that time he has been in business as a carriage builder at the same place on Duke-street. This fact is indicative of the constancy and quiet persistence of his character in all respects. He was one of the early founders and adherents of the Parliament-street Methodist Church and remained one of its pillars to the end. He was a York Pioneer. Deceased leaves a widow, three sons and five daughters.

The Behring Sea Controversy Will Soon Be Settled.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—The Times says? Reports that there is a hitch in the Behring Sea negotiation are entirely unfounded. The joint commission in Washington will prepare a report embodying all the facts disclosed by the spot examination and any recommendations upon which the British and American representatives are able to agree. Points on which they disagree the commissioners will be at liberty to refer to their respective governments. The whole work will probably occupy 10 days. It is believed that Sweden, Switzerland and Belgium will be asked to name an arbiter, but this point has not been entered upon as yet.

He Leaves Four Wives and Twenty-Eight Children.

NORRISTOWN, Pa., Jan. 18.—Particulars have just been received by William G. Smith of Norristown, of the death of his uncle, Henry Grow, a prominent Mormon residing at Ogden, Utah. Mr. Grow was a builder and erected the great Tabernacle in Salt Lake City. He leaves four wives and twenty-eight children. Ten of his sons will officiate as pall-bearers.

Tied Himself to a Lamp Post.

PARIS, Jan. 18.—An English Anarchist named Thomas was arrested here to-day for preaching his doctrines in the street. He had attached himself by means of a steel chain to the top of a lamp post, and the police had to file through the chain before they could take him into custody.

A Plot Against the Sultan.

PARIS, Jan. 18.—According to The Eciar a plot against the Sultan of Turkey has been discovered in Stamboul and 300 persons have been arrested.

BRITISH AND FOREIGN

THE NEW BRITISH AMBASSADOR TO SPAIN.

Sir Drummond Wolff Receives the Appointment—Arrests of Anarchists in London and Paris—Cardinal Manning's Funeral—General Foreign News.

CAIRO, Jan. 18.—Prince Abbas, the Khedive, Saturday entered the harbor at Alexandria from Trieste on board a steamer. The steamer was accompanied by a number of British war ships, which as they entered the harbor thundered forth a royal salute. The Egyptian vessels responded. All the vessels are decked in rainbow style and the sight was very pretty.

All the members of the Egyptian Cabinet, Gen. Greufel, Justice Scott, Egypt's judicial adviser, and Prince Hussein, boarded the steamer and welcomed the Khedive.

Moukhtar Pasha, High Commissioner of the Sublime Porte to Egypt, intended to take part in receiving the Khedive, but he is suffering from an attack of influenza and had to forgo his intention.

At 8.30 the Khedive landed from the steamer and was received with great enthusiasm. He was met by the principal civil and military officers and a guard of honor composed of British and Egyptian troops. At 10 o'clock he took a special train and proceeded to Carlo.

Upon his arrival in this city the Khedive at once proceeded to the Abdin Palace. The square in front of the Palace was lined with troops and as the Khedive passed through, the officers saluted him with their swords and the privates presented arms. The members of the Khedive family and the high state officials awaited his coming at the entrance of the Palace. As Prince Abbas approached the group one of the officials stepped forward, and after making a low obeisance, read the Imperial firman from the Sultan of Turkey appointing him (Prince Abbas) Khedive of Egypt. When the reading of the firman was finished the bands played the Turkish and Egyptian national airs, and as the strains of the music died away, the youthful ruler of the land of the Pharoahs turned and entered the Palace.

Subsequently the Khedive reviewed the British and Egyptian troops in the Abdin Square and then held a reception at the palace, which was attended by the Ministers and all the members of the diplomatic corps. After the reception the Khedive visited his mother at the Koubbeh Palace. An immense crowd lined the route between the two palaces, and as the Khedive passed along he was enthusiastically greeted. The flat housetops along the route were filled with cheering spectators.

MANNING'S INTERMENT.

Cardinal Manning Taking His Well-Earned Rest.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—A cablegram was received from the Knights of Labor in America expressing sorrow for the loss of one who had rendered so great service to the cause of labor.

The body of the late Cardinal is placed on the purple couch where it is to lie in state. It is clad in the full robes of the Cardinal's office, the mitre by its side. Lighted candles surround the couch. An altar has been erected in the adjoining room.

While the body of the late Cardinal lay in state to-day 100 policemen were required to keep in line people wanting to view the remains. The line was at one time a mile long.

Hartington's Gilded Future.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—A strong belief prevails that Lord Hartington's succession to the dukedom has largely increased the prospects of his joining the Government. His acceptance of office so long as he was in the House of Commons would have had a revolutionary effect on the position of parties; in the House of Lords it can be arranged without fuss and difficulty. There is one post of the very highest order which he could take, to the great relief of Lord Salisbury, and that is the Foreign Secretaryship.

The Father of the Commons.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—The friends of Mr. Charles Villiers, the "father of the House of Commons," have made preparations to give the venerable member of parliament a banquet Tuesday, the anniversary of his birthday, when Mr. Villiers will complete his 90th year.

Sir Clare Ford.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—Referring to the appointment of Sir Clare Ford as British Ambassador to Constantinople, G. W. Smalley cables: The Briton recalls with satisfaction the memory of Sir Clare Ford's services on the Halifax Commission, when the United States had the pleasure of paying to Canada and Newfoundland some five millions that she did not owe.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—Sir Henry Drummond Wolff has been appointed British Ambassador at Madrid.

Beach Infinitesimal Proportions.

DUBLIN, Jan. 18.—The National League (Parnellite) has received during the past fortnight from all sources the sum of $110. The National Federation (anti-Parnellite) received during the last fortnight from all sources the sum of $300. These amounts will not in either case pay current expenses. Where are the funds to come from to meet the charges of the general election or to carry on any sort of agrarian campaign?

Tables Turned on an Informer.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Jan. 18.—Joseph Holly, head agent for the Massachusetts Law and Order League, was brought to Woodstock recently to act as an informer in the Scott Act case. He went about as a traveler and succeeded in obtaining information against several illegal liquor sellers. Yesterday he was arrested for doing business without a license. An effort was made to bail him out, but it was not successful, and he was sentenced to pay a fine, which not being paid he was sent to jail. Great excitement prevails over the matter.

Lack of Snow in New Brunswick.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Jan. 18.—Owing to the lack of snow lumbermen are beginning to fear that their operations will be small this winter. The crews of six firms that cut on the St. John and tributaries have returned to Fredericton. Nothing has been done on the Upper St. John in Madawaska and Victoria counties, while in the North the quantity of logs lying around is small.

Sad Indeed.

DUNDALK, Ont., Jan. 18.—James Bryce of Proton came to Dundalk to order a coffin for his sister, who had died the previous evening. On his return he found that his wife had during his absence given birth to twins and that she, too, had passed to the spirit land. He is left with a family of seven small children, two of them the newly-born twins.

C.P.R. Conductors Discharged.

OTTAWA, Jan. 18.—Several of the old-time conductors on the C.P.R. received notification yesterday that their services were no longer required. Amongst those notified were Conductors H. King, Morris and Martin, all well-known old railroad men. No reason was assigned for their dismissal.

Killed by a Fall.

BRAMPTON, Jan. 18.—William Blinco of the 12th concession of Peel had been out threshing at a neighbor's with his machine. On his return, in driving into his own barn at night, the machine slewed round and threw Mr. Blinco to the ground, killing him instaintly. The deceased was a son of Mr. William Blinco of Pilkington, and was much respected.

A VACCINE VIRUS VICTIM.

Frances Aston's Life for Six Years Was a Continuous Agony and Death Was Welcome to Her.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—In the cosy little parlor of the old-fashioned frame house No. 224 Eckford-street, Greenpoint, last night lay an icebox covered with a simple white pall. Within reposed the wasted body of a young girl, whose pinched face and spare arms indicated the terrible sickness through which she had passed.

It was vaccination that not only caused Frances Aston's death but caused her six years of indescribable pain. The vaccine, which was used with the greatest care by the family physician, Dr. C. A. Walters of No. 111 Milton-street, Greenpoint, developed a disease that baffled the skill of no less an authority than Dr. Janeway of Bellevue Hospital and a score of other famous medical men who came to view and study the case. Additional interest comes from the fact that the family has from time immemorial been opposed to the practice of vaccination, and only permitted it on their daughter because they were anxious to keep her at school, and the authorities had issued an order compelling all pupils to be vaccinated.

The dead girl's father is William Aston, a tool-maker, and one of the most esteemed residents of Greenpoint. Dr. Walters vaccinated Frances and her sister Edna in December, 1885. They returned to school, and five days later Frances complained of pain in her left side. The pain grew worse and two days later she became paralysed. She was unable to move her limbs without suffering torture, and whenever she was touched she screamed with pain. Dr. Walters was puzzled and called in other physicians for consultation. An abscess formed just over the girl's left knee, and the pain became so intense that she was unable to lie in bed or stand erect.

As time passed the pain became worse than before, and the shrieks of the girl continued sometimes for hours.

Every effort was made by the physicians to relieve her sufferings, but without avail. No amount of narcotics would ease her torment. Her screams would sometimes be heard a block away from her home. From August, 1889, she was a helpless cripple.

A week ago her limbs became rigid and she felt her end was near. To her mother, three days ago, the unfortunate girl said: "Mamma, I feel that I will soon be relieved of my agony." She died late on Friday night.

Dr. Walters, who is opposed to vaccination, has furnished Mr. Aston with a statement that on the day that he vaccinated Frances and her sister he vaccinated 10 other children, upon some of whom the vaccine virus produced serious results. Dr. Walters attributes Frances' illness and sufferings to the vaccine.

Stock Gambling Causes the Ruin of a Canadian Bank Teller.

OTTAWA, Jan. 19.—Edward Hubbel, teller of the Ottawa Bank, arrested for being $7000 short in his cash, has been a frequenter for over a year of a so-called stock exchange kept in the city by an ex-parson named Machray. On Thursday the manager of the bank counted his cash when the steal was discovered. He is ill in bed under the charge of the police.

Pastor Morrow Advocates His New Doctrine to Pennsylvania Women.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 19.—The Rev. John Morrow, who was recently expelled from Bethany Home, the Pittsburg faith-cure establishment, has been heard from at several small places in this section within the past few days. He was expelled from the Home for promiscuous kissing of the sisters, including an old colored woman.

Mr. Morrow is at present the guest of the Misses Coles of Warren, Pa. He has forsaken a pretty wife and two children and is traveling about proclaiming that he is guided by divine command to spread the doctrine of the holy kiss.

THE POLITICAL SLATE.

LONDON ELECTION PETITION TRIAL RESUMED.

Definition of the Ward Heeler—The Alleged Bribing of Colored Voters—The Quebec Conspiracy Investigation—More Election Dates Announced—General Political Notes.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—The Hyman protested election trial was re-commenced before Justices Ferguson and Robinson at 1.45 yesterday afternoon.

On Mr. Osler asking permission to make an amendment to charge 234, so that a case of bribing one William H. Evans might be included, a lengthy argument resulted, which ended in their lordships reserving decision.

The only charges gone into this afternoon related to the alleged corrupt practices resorted to for the purpose of controlling the colored vote, in which pig's feet and lager are said to have played a prominent part.

A Bad Memory for Dates.

Isaac Horace Duncan (colored) had a bad memory for dates, but as the refreshments served at the various meetings appear to have been somewhat diversified he made himself clear by that means as to the specific meetings at which certain transactions took place. At one of the meetings a subscription list for the band was handed around and T. S. Hobbs subscribed $5, but Mr. Hyman declined to put his name down.

There were several other subscriptions obtained and Mr. Osler asked that the subscription list be produced, but Mr. Blake objected and was sustained by their Lordships.

A Definition of "Heeler."

Thomas S. Hobbs, wholesale hardware merchant, said he went to the colored church occasionally, and in reply to Mr. Osler said there was more politics than piety in his attendance. He had attended some of the practice meetings of the colored band, but no refreshments were served while he was there.

On being questioned as to his presence in the vicinity of Port Stanley bridge at 2 o'clock on the morning of the election he said that there were nearly 100 men in that ward watching the "Tory heelers."

Justice Ferguson was somewhat puzzled by this phrase, and asked Mr. Osler for a definition, but that gentleman declared he was unable to translate, and appealed to Mr. Hobbs, who said a heeler was a man out late attempting to bribe or use other corrupt practices. They had chased a cab that morning and discovered a certain Custom house officer in hiding under the robes and, in his opinion, the watching was necessary.

Mr. Hyman Told a Bear Story.

At the celebrated Waterloo-street school house meeting, otherwise known as "Pigs Feet," Mr. Hyman told a bear story, but the only speech was made by himself (Hobbs). During the time Mr. Hyman and he were there refreshments were served. He called again about 2.30 o'clock in the morning, and found the meeting still in progress, but this was for the purpose of preventing the colored voters from falling into the hands of the Tory heelers whose special spread in the Primitive Methodist Church a few blocks away would probably have resulted in incapacitating the colored gentlemen from recording their votes that day.

Albion Jones (colored) was examined at considerable length in regard to what occurred at the meeting he attended, the persons there and certain payments made on behalf of the colored band, of which he is a member.

Thomas S. Hobbs being recalled said he paid the leader of the colored band $20 about three weeks after the election for their services that night.

Maurice S. Baldwin, lumber dealer, said he was a Conservative, had voted that way in the last election, always had done so and always would. He was out for a lark on the night of the meeting in the Waterloo-street school, and while going about town met a couple of Liberals, who treated. It finally turned out that Mr. Baldwin had unconsciously acted as guardian of the noted kegs of lager while in transit from the hotel to the school. However, he had a pretty good time at the meeting and saw nothing wrong.

All the witnesses were closely examined as to the actions of a certain Frank Halpin throughout these meetings, now said to be in St. Louis, Mo., and whom the petitioners' counsel is trying to show was an agent of the respondent.

Nothing very clear has been developed so far.

Court adjourned at 6.15 to meet at 9.30 to-morrow morning.

Getting Out the Writs.

OTTAWA, Jan. 19.—Writs were issued for the holding of a by-election in the county of Peel, necessitated by the unseating of Mr. Featherstone, the Liberal member. Nomination will take place on Jan. 28 and polling on Feb. 4. Mr. Featherstone was elected in March by a majority of 54 over Mr. McCulla.

Writs have also been issued for the by-election in Queen's, Nova Scotia; nomination on Feb. 2 and polling on the 9th. The unseated Reform member, Mr. Forbes, will again be the party candidate. He will be opposed by Mr. A. B. Morine, a native of the county, but for some years leader of the Opposition in the Newfoundland Legislature.

WHY THERE WILL BE NO FUNERAL PARADE IN LONDON.

Important Announcement in the French Chamber of Deputies Respecting the Possible Landing of Men-of-War's Men at Tangiers—General European News.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—The arrangements that were made for a public and semi-military procession through London to escort the remains of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale from the Great Eastern to the Southwestern Station have been changed, in consequence of the general epidemic of influenza prevailing here. Upon the views of the authorities, who made no concealment of their fears that exposure of the troops would probably result in a general attack of influenza, the Prince of Wales gave orders that the projected military funeral be abandoned. The Prince of Wales, with the example of the results of exposure during the presence of inclement weather before, as evidenced by the death of his son, has shown the greatest solicitude that the members of court should not be exposed to the unnecessary task which a procession through London would entail and would be certain to seriously affect the health of the aged. The Duke of Cambridge was upon the point of leaving Cannes to return to London to attend the funeral of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale when he received a telegram from the Prince of Wales requesting him not to leave as the Prince did not wish him to run the risk that would be entailed by the change of climate. It is deemed that the health of Prince George of Wales is not sufficiently robust to allow of his exposing himself in any way and the Prince of Wales has decided that he will not be allowed to attend his brother's funeral.

Dublin Corporation Condoles.

DUBLIN, Jan. 19.—The corporation of the city of Dublin has already adopted a vote of condolence with the Prince and Princess of Wales in the loss they have sustained in the death of their son. Yesterday the corporation held a special meeting, at which resolutions were adopted condoling with the Queen and other members of the Royal Family.

Even in the Transvaal.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—A despatch from Johannesburg, Transvaal, states that great excitement has been caused there by the action of the editor of an English paper published in that place. In an article on the death of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale, the editor took occasion to make an attack upon the character of the Duke. The man was driven out of a theatre by the angry people and was compelled to flee for his life. The newspaper building was stoned and all the windows were broken.

THE HOLY KISS.

While Clergy Are Blessing the Waters the Latter Engulf the Devotees.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 19.—A terrible catastrophe occurred at Tiflis on the occasion of the blessing of the waters of the River Kur. As a procession of the clergy and a dense crowd of people were crossing an arm of the river on a temporary bridge the structure collapsed under the weight of the mass of people and fell with its burden into the stream. The people nearest the bridge tried to retreat, but were met by a dense crowd still surging onward. The result was a terrific struggle in which many persons were crushed to death and a large number injured. In addition, a large number were drowned in the river.

Tiflis is the capital of the Government of the same name in Asiatic Russia and is celebrated for its warm baths. It was the capital of the former kingdom of Georgia and was added to Russia in 1801.

The Crews of French Warships to Land at Tangiers.

PARIS, Jan. 19.—In the Chamber of Deputies yesterday M. Ribot, Minister of Foreign Affairs, stated that the French representative at Tangier had been instructed to land the crews of the French war vessels if the Europeans in that city were endangered by the native rebels or if the sailors from other warships were landed. This statement was greeted with applause.

The Times' Advice to Newfoundland.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—With reference to Newfoundland desiring to proceed with the negotiations of the Bond treaty with the U.S., The Times urges Newfoundland to make friends with Canada, and to negotiate a treaty on a wiser basis with Canada and the United States, which shall include all of the privileges which Newfoundland desires.

A Pet Dog Licked the Wound.

PARIS, Jan. 19.—Jeanne Chevalier, discarded by her lover, committed suicide in a carriage yesterday. When found her pet dog was in her lap licking the wound of its dead mistress.

Chat from Over the Sea.

The British brig Wellington, bound from Portsmouth, was caught in a gale which prevailed yesterday and tossed broadside on against the stern of the British steamer Hunteman, which is stranded near the south pier at Shields. The Wellington struck the wrecked steamer with such violence that her whole side was crushed in and she filled and sank. Two of the brig's crew went down with the vessel.

Sophy Handcock's Skull.

TORONTO, Jan. 19.—Mr. Murdock yesterday moved that the skull of Sophy Handcock be returned to the parents, who wished to give it to Dr. Teaky. To this Mr. Clute objected, because the girl had been murdered and the murderer had not yet been discovered. Judge Falconbridge promised to call the Attorney-General's attention to the application, after which Mr. Murdock's motion might be renewed.

North Dummer.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

SIR,—In reference to a correspondence from this neighbourhood, which appeared in the EXAMINER of Jan. 7th, I may say it was a little one-sided. It is true that Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Batton had charge of the singing, but who gave it into their charge? I have no desire to criticise the singing, and as to the duets and trio, they were well enough played, but we are not commanded by God to make His house a house for theatres and dancing. "My house shall be called a house of prayer, but ye have made it a den of thieves." I consider that our organist, Miss P. Singleton, was robbed of the privilege she ought to have had. She has been organist in our Sabbath school for two years and did her work nobly and showed every respect to her Sabbath school teacher, and when our Sabbath school entertainment came off she was pushed, as it were, into a corner by those who never come to Sunday school; but allow me to bring her out. Miss Singleton played three pieces at one entertainment and had all the little children sing, and it was surprising that they did so well with such short practice, their contribution being considered one of the best things on the programme. I am glad that Miss Singleton is to be organist of the church and Sabbath school in the future, assisted by Miss Minnie Little and Miss Ida Carveth. I think that if our superintendent intends continuing in that position he might put more zeal and closer attention to the discharge of his duties. Thanking you Mr. Editor for your space, I remain—A TRUE CHURCH MEMBER AND NOT A DAMPER.

The Peculiar Grippe Cough!

The justly celebrated physician, Sir Morrell Mackenzie, says that grippe is a malady which assumes so many forms that it seems to be not one, but an epitome of all diseases, including almost everything, from a cold in the head to inflammation of the brain. One of the first symptoms with hundreds of people is a peculiar tickling sensation in the throat, which produces a painful and disagreeable cough. The bronchial tubes are affected seriously, and a difficulty of breathing is experienced. If our readers are wise and prudent, and anxious to avoid the effects of this dreadful influenza, they should lose no time in treating the symptoms just referred to. It has been found from several experience and tests that there is one agent which completely dispatches the tickling sensation in the throat, the cough, and every affection of the bronchial tubes; it is the celebrated Harvard Bronchial Syrup. It is prescribed regularly by physicians for these troubles, and to day is the most reliable agent for the banishment of the grippe cough. We think it wise, at this critical time, to recommend something to our people that has really proved effective in the past; and it will be an act of prudence for every family to have at hand a bottle of Harvard Bronchial Syrup for emergencies.

Other sufferers from cold in the head and catarrh have been promptly cured, why not you? Capt. D. H. Lyon, manager and proprietor of the C.P.R. and R. W. & O. car ferry, Prescott, Ont., says: I used Nasal Balm for a prolonged case of cold in the head. Two applications effected a complete cure in less than 24 hours. I would not take $100 for my bottle of Nasal Balm if I could not replace it. dw

A Sadly Sudden Death.

On Saturday a gloom was thrown over this pleasant little village by the sudden death of a guest from far-away Dakota. Miss Lottie Shields came to Mount Pleasant from Dakota about a month ago to spend a few weeks visiting relatives and friends. On Friday evening she was out spending the evening. On her return to her home for the time being, the residence of Mr. James Smith, she was attacked with severe chills, which ushered in congestion of the lungs. The disease so firmly fixed upon the young lady that she died at 4 o'clock on Saturday morning. Arrangements were made for the conveyance of the remains to Dakota for interment. They were accompanied by the brother of the dead girl, by her uncle Mr. Geo. Shields, and Mr. —. Tully and her cousin Mr. W. Shields.

MEN WITH MILLIONS.

HOW TWO WEALTHY NOBLEMEN GUARD AGAINST CRANKS.

Do Not Receive Strangers--A Thrilling Experience of the Duke of Westminster's Father Makes the Son Very Cautious--A Rothschild Without Money.

The recent attempt to blow up Russell Sage suggests a query as to the methods adopted by noted English millionaires for protection against cranks and blackmailers.

The two wealthiest British subjects are probably the Duke of Westminster and the Baron Nathan Meyer Rothschild, head in England of the great Jewish commercial house. It is certain that no rich man is more solicited by the needy or the designing, or more threatened by would-be extortionists, than the Duke of Westminster. There are several reasons for this. The Duke's estate lying chiefly in London, his riches are more conspicuous and more talked about than those of any other nobleman. "As rich as the Duke of Wertminster," is a common saying, not only in England's metropolis, but throughout Great Britain, and; while every charity appeals for his aid, he is likewise a shining mark for the crank and the criminal.

To reach the Duke, at Grosvenor House, is actually more difficult than to obtain an audience with the Prince of Wales. The latter will accord an interview to a stranger properly accredited. The Duke makes it an invincible rule never to speak with a stranger under any circumstances, no matter how strongly sustained by introduction and references. All his intercourse with the world outside of his set is carried on through subordinates. The Duke has no private mail. All his letters are opened, of course, by his authority, and only those of personal importance reach his hands. It is said that this regulation applies even to letters from his children.

WHAT HAPPENED TO HIS FATHER.

The Duke adopted his rule never to admit strangers to a private interview in consequence of a remarkable incident in the career of his father, the late Marquis of Westminster. While the Marquis was at Eaton Hall, his magnificent seat in the West of England, a stranger called with a letter of introduction purporting to be signed by the Earl of Scarborough, one of the Marquis' most intimate friends. The visitor called himself, and was called in the letter,

BARON ROTHSCHILD.

Richard Bulkeley Greenfell, of Taplow Court, Buckinghamshire.

There is a family of the name among the old gentry of Bucks, and the Marquis received the visitor cordially. The latter said that he had business of importance with which he had been entrusted by the Earl of Scarborough, and requested a private hearing. The Marquis escorted him to the library. As soon as the Marquis was seated, the caller suddenly drew a pistol and held it to the temple of the nobleman.

"Don't speak," he hissed, in a tone that meant a desperate resolve, "except as I tell you."

The Marquis sat as if paralyzed, staring at the man and waiting for the next move.

"Send for your check book," said the visitor, coolly. "I will lower the pistol here," he added, dropping his hand to where the weapon was concealed from casual gaze, between his body and the table near which they sat. "It is pointed at you, and the moment you disobey my orders I fire. Whatever the result to me, it will be the end of you."

The Marquis was a man of quick thought and not deficient in presence of mind or ability for action. He afterward said that he determined to comply with the fellow's demands, and rely upon the telegraph to stop the payment of any check he might give.

"Now, call the servant!" the man added.

The Marquis rang and the footman answered. The footman was told by the nobleman to notify his secretary. The latter came. The Marquis calmly directed him to bring the check book. It was an unusual order, for the secretary was accustomed to fill out a check already signed with the amount and dispose of it as the Marquis desired.

A THRILLING MOMENT.

Although the Marquis tried to act and speak in a natural way, the secretary suspected something wrong, especially as the visitor was grimly silent. Begging his Lordship's pardon, the secretary asked him to repeat the message, thus gaining a few moments for observation, which he devoted carefully and cautiously to the stranger. He noticed the constrained position of the arm that held the pistol, and he thought he saw a weapon grasped in the hand. The situation flashed on him, but he gave no sign. Bowing profoundly, he went to bring the check book.

When the secretary was absent the stranger said quietly, "Write a check for £10,000, payable to bearer. Then walk in front of me in the hall, and to where my carriage is waiting. If you make a sign, I will kill you. If the check is stopped, I will kill you at the first opportunity."

Meantime the secretary had told his suspicions to the butler, and the latter, accompanied by two stalwart servants, stood near the library door as the secretary entered with the check book. The Marquis and the stranger were sitting in the same position, and both silent. This convinced the secretary that his fears were well grounded. Stepping up to his master he placed the check book on the table, and with a quick glance he clearly discovered the muzzle of the pistol, which the visitor still held pointed at the Marquis. The secretary had agreed with the butler that the latter and the two servants were to rush in if they heard the secretary say, "Now!" in a loud tone.

As the secretary raised himself from the bow with which he accompanied the laying of the check book on the table, instead of retiring toward the door, he suddenly stepped between the Marquis and the visitor, completely covering the former with his own body.

"Now," he exclaimed: "Shoot if you dare!"

The stranger leaped to his feet with a fierce exclamation, just as the butler and servants rushed in. The baffled blackmailer covered the group with his pistol. He did not fire, but retreated backward to the hall. The Marquis ordered his servants not to risk their lives by following, and the fellow made his escape. He was never arrested. From that time the Marquis would never speak with a stranger, except in presence of some one that he knew, and his son has followed his example.

Baron Rothschild, of the great Jewish house, takes no special precautions against cranks or blackmail, and is as readily accessible in business hours as Russell Sage was to his dangerous caller. But it is well known that Baron Rothschild has no money, and not even a , ookbook in his private office. All business, to the smallest payment, is transacted through clerks, and neither sale nor securities are kept within reach of the many millionaire.

If the baron wants money he has to ask for it. Of course, this would not place him beyond reach of an irresponsible crank; but English cranks are eminently practical, and they have confined their assaults on Baron Rothschild to writing letters containing threats of what they would do unless money should be sent. In two or three instances persons sending such letters have been traced up and arrested. Everybody has heard the story of the communist crank who visited one of the Rothschild family in Paris and demanded that he divide his wealth with the rest of mankind.

"Here," said the baron, handing him two francs, "is your share of what the division would realise if equal distribution were made among the people of France."

The baron's bete noir for several years was a crazy Hebrew who claimed to be a descendant of King Solomon, and entitled to reign over Judea. He thought it Baron Rothschild's duty to purchase the country from Turkey, and put him in possession. He proposed, when established on the throne, to appoint Baron Rothschild his Premier, and make him Duke of Jerusalem.

The baron kindly humored the unfortunate, aiding him with charity while he lived and paying his burial expenses when he died. The reputation of the Rothschilds for charitable deeds is probably one of the reasons that they are so little troubled by those who would like to get their money unlawfully. It is said that all appeals are heeded to the extent of ascertaining what merit there is in them, and that the deserving are never ignored.—Curtis Kinglake.

A Fact

WORTH knowing is that blood diseases which all other remedies fail to cure, yield to Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Fresh confirmation of this statement comes to hand daily. Even such deep-seated and stubborn complaints as Rheumatism, Rheumatic Gout, and the like, are thoroughly eradicated by the use of this wonderful alterative.

Mrs. R. Irving Dodge, 110 West 125th street, New York, certifies:—

"About two years ago, after suffering for nearly two years from rheumatic gout, being able to walk only with great discomfort, and having tried various remedies, including mineral waters, without relief, I saw by an advertisement in a Chicago paper that a man had been relieved of this distressing complaint, after long suffering, by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I then decided to make a trial of this medicine, and took it regularly for eight months. I am pleased to say that it effected a complete cure, and that I have since had no return of the disease."

Mrs. L. A. Stark, Nashua, N. H., writes: "One year ago I was taken ill with rheumatism, being confined to my house six months. I came out of the sickness very much debilitated, with no appetite, and my system disordered in every way. I commenced to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla and began to improve at once, gaining in strength and soon recovering my usual health. I cannot say too much in praise of this well-known medicine."

"I have taken a great deal of medicine, but nothing has done me so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I felt its beneficial effects before I had quite finished one bottle, and I can freely testify that it is the best blood-medicine I know of."—L. W. Ward, Sr., Woodland, Texas.

Ediconian Skating Party.

An invitation party was given by the Ediconians in the rink last night. A large number of guests representing some of our best families responded to the invitations that had been issued. Mrs. Harold van der Linde acted as hostess and received the guests. Skating was indulged in until ten o'clock, when an exhibition match was played by the hockey club. At the close refreshments, provided by Mr. Harry Long, were served in the hall, and a very pleasant and enjoyable evening was spent.

Congratulatory Supper.

Mr. John Farley, in the employ of the Lock Works, was entertained by his fellow-boarders and friends to an elegant supper at the Balmoral House to celebrate the occasion of his marriage to Miss A. Wall, of Ashburnham, which took place this morning. The chair was occupied by Mr. Bert Thompson, and the health of the guest of the evening was drunk with enthusiasm. Other toasts followed, and a most enjoyable evening was spent, all present joining in wishing Mr. Farley and his partner much happiness in his new role of benedict.

Evangelistic Meetings.

There was a good attendance at the meeting in the Baptist Church last night, notwithstanding the unfavourable state of the weather. Mr. Meikle gave an earnest address upon the subject of salvation. He showed that salvation involved deliverance from the guilt and power of sin, from the fear of death, and from the wrath to come. He pointed out one stumbling block in the way of the sinner receiving salvation—his unwillingness to submit to the righteousness of God. He referred to Paul as an example to the Christian in his desire for the salvation of others. He related several striking anecdotes in illustration of his theme.

The meeting will be in the Baptist Church again this evening at 7 45 o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to all to be present.

THE DEAD PRINCE.

The sad death of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale, the heir-apparent of the throne of the British Empire, has plunged an empire in mourning. No event since the death of Albert the Good has stricken so deeply into the hearts of the people in every part of the empire, nor prompted such general demonstrations of grief, nor evoked such spontaneous expressions of sympathy as has the "taking off" of the high-souled, gentler-hearted prince on the eve of his marriage. This general regret, this universal mourning, serves to show that the strong bonds of personal love wrought by the blameless walk of our beloved Queen, and her many virtuous qualities, exercised for the past half century, which have become knit and interwoven with the hearts of the people, have also extended to her children. The great heart of the British Empire throbs in sympathy with the Queen, the Prince of Wales and the Royal Family, and not only of the British Empire, but of the whole civilized world. From every continent, from every clime, across snowy wastes of the north, across the burning mid-zone plains, under mighty seas, flashed in every tongue, the electric messages of sympathy. From every living sovereign, from every government have come similar messages. Every province and every colony of the Empire has lent its voice of condolence. Canada has not been behind in this regard—every corporation, village and hamlet has officially recognized Her Majesty's claim, founded on love as well as allegiance, to a respectful message of sympathy—with one exception, and that exception is Peterborough. Even Port Hope council at its inaugural meeting appointed a committee to draft a resolution of condolence. The slumbering loyalty of our town council in all the more to be regretted because it does not represent the feelings of the people. The news of the "fatal fourteenth" fell upon the hearts of our people like a heavy blow. From the church towers and towers of our public buildings the half-mast flags drooped sadly, and neighbour spoke to neighbour in subdued tone of the great grief that had come to the royal household. Death knocks with impartial foot at the peasant's hut and the palace of the king. In like manner the grief it brings falls as heavily upon the prince's as upon the pauper's heart, and human sympathy goes out to both alike. The royal grief was all the more sympathized with because death has been so busy in our own midst, that our hearts are softened and we all the more readily mourn with those that mourn.

In this state of the public feeling in reference to the death of the favorite grandson of our beloved Queen, the indifference of the mayor and town council to this sad event which absorbs the present attention of the world, becomes particularly emphasized. At the inaugural meeting Mayor Kendry made a carefully prepared and set address, deliberately compiled with a presumable desire to include every matter of public interest worth referring to. This address was published word for word in the EXAMINER yesterday and our readers saw no word of reference to the death of the Duke of Clarence. A meeting of the town council was held last night and there was not a word of reference to the sad event. Instead the session wound up with a supper and jollification, at which no toast or reference was made to the royal family. This is doing an injustice to and throwing discredit upon, the loyalty of the town. When popular feeling is so strongly stirred, and the genuine mourning that prevades the public heart, gives evidence of unflinching loyalty to the Queen, Royal Family, and monarchical institutions, it is to be deplored that the chief representative body of the town, the mouth-piece of the people, was disloyally silent, indifferent, and unsympathetic. We have as a member of the council a captain and adjutant of the Fifty Seventh Battalion—to whom the death of a distinguished brother officer, not to say a prince of the blood—suggested no expression of sympathy. The great majority of the council are members of a political party, who arrogate to themselves the possession of all the loyalty extant—men who wave the "old flag" in season and out of season, men who call their neighbours traitors because they differ with them on great public questions; men who win elections on the cry of loyalty, and wrap their successful candidates in the folds of the old flag—these men are the only men in all the world, belonging to any civic corporation who have kept a sullen silence, in the hour when their sympathy should have been strongly expressed. In this matter the council has fallen far short of representing the town, especially the town which received the deeply-appreciated and warmly welcomed honour of a visit from the dead prince's father some years ago.

If the Prince of Wales could for a moment glance at the effusively loyal addresses presented him in Peterborough in 1860, could he believe that the largely Conservative majority of the present town council represented the same people? Would he not naturally conclude that the loyalty that forgot him at the moment of the supreme grief of his life, found its chief function in promoting party interests, and had little existence when real need for its generous exhibition was called for? It is safe to say that the unsympathetic attitude of the town council does not receive the approval of the loyal inhabitants of the town, who deeply sympathize with the royal family in their bereavement, and who have a right to feel that the council, as our highest representative body, has signally failed in its representative capacity.

Accident in Smithsmere.

Last week Mr. Clarke, son of Mr. Alexander Clarke, of Smithsmere, was engaged chopping with a companion in the woods there. The latter made a mistake, sending the blade of his axe in the track of Mr. Clarke's left hand as it rested on his own axe, completely severing the middle bones and tendons. Dr. Goldsmith gave the necessary surgical attention.

Mayoralistic Hospitality.

The New Mayor Feasts the New Council—A Jovial Banquet at the Balmoral Hotel.

Last night at the conclusion of the first council meeting, Mayor Kendry in, doubtless, celebration of his victory at the recent municipal election and as evidence of his generous good-fellowship, entertained the members of the council, the press and the civic officials. A full course dinner was laid in the dining hall of the Balmoral Hotel, and Mine host Cavanagh showed himself to be a first class caterer. The viands were in great variety, and of the most appetizing character. In contradistinction to the usual custom of modern days, the liquid department was not neglected, the wine and liquor list of the menu in excellence and variety, corresponding to that of the solid department.

The social part of the evening which succeeded the banquet was jovial and enjoyable. There was little formality though the mayor occupied the chair. The usual "loyal and patriotic" toasts were dispensed with, and the toasts, honoured with great enthusiasm, were of a reciprocal character, the older toasting the new members, and the new toasting the "middle" members. Many comic songs were sung and gave variety to the programme. The evening's enjoyment was brought to a close, the guests singing "God Save the Queen" as they retired from the hall, with the feeling that their host was a jolly good fellow.

Ashburnham Council.

Owing to pressure on our space, the report of the above council meeting is held over until to-morrow.

That each member of the Charity Committee distribute charity in his own ward.

That the sum of $250 be granted to the Mayor to meet the contingent expenses of his office.

All of which is respectfully submitted.
(Signed), W. H. MELDRUM, Chairman.

—Adopted.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH.

Mr. CAHILL introduced a by-law to appoint a Board of Health. He referred to the communication received from the old board re sewerage, and said perhaps it was not generally known in town that the council were proceeding in this matter. Plans and specifications were being arranged and would be presented to the council in due course. A public meeting of ratepayers would be called and then it will be for them to say whether they want sewerage or not.

The council then went into a committee, Mr. Donnelstown taking the chair. The following were then nominated:—Mayor Keadry, ex-officio, Wm. Loch, Dr. Fife, Dr. Brennan, B. Shortly, J. L. Hughes, Brownscombe Pearce, H. Dennis and E. H. D. Hall.

On resuming, the by-law was read a third time and passed.

HIGH SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

Mr. Donnelstown moved, and Mr. McIlwain seconded, that Messrs H. Dennis and P. Hamilton be re-appointed High School trustees.

Mr. Meldrum moved an amendment, seconded by Mr. Malhern, that H. Dennis and Dr. McGrath be appointed to the position.

The amendment was lost and the motion declared carried.

For the amendment—Messrs. Meldrum, Malhern, Ferguson, Cahill and Kelly. Against the amendment—Messrs. Donnelstown, McIlwain, Winch, Best, Young, Bradburn and Dawson. This vote reversed caused the original resolution.

THE AUDITORS' SALARIES.

Mr. MELDRUM referred to the bylaw passed in the morning, voting $75 to the auditors, and said the council had exceeded their limit. Only $50 was granted last year.

Mr. KELLY said that $75 was not too much for the work, and he did not see how they could very well rescind the bylaw now. Although the bylaw only said $50 last year, yet $75 was paid to the auditors. He could not say how it was that they received the extra money. It was not by vote of the council.

Mr. DAWSON said he thought $75 was granted last year. If he had thought that only $50 was paid last year he would not have moved the bylaw for $75.

The MAYOR explained that although only $50 was voted last year, $75 was paid. By whose authority the extra $25 was paid he did not know.

Mr. YOUNG said he was prepared to support any economic measure submitted to the council but $75 he thought was quite small enough. In fact he had felt like proposing it be $100 at the morning sitting of the council. This was not too much for the work.

Mr. DAWSON did not think Mr. Young or any one else would pay more for work than was asked. If he could get a man to do work for $50 he would not be willing to pay $75.

During the discussion it was elicited that the bylaw was passed for only $50 last year and $75 was paid. No one it appeared had any authority to pay this extra amount.

Mr. YOUNG here said that if the corporation expected the work to be done in a proper manner they must expect to pay for it.

The Mayor explained that the question was not how much the work was worth, but when a bylaw was passed for $50 why should $75 be paid? He said that for the last two years bylaws had been passed for $50 but $75 had been paid. He knew this much had been paid, because he had seen the vouchers.

Mr. MULHERN suggested that the auditors be asked to refund the money paid too much.

Mr. KELLY objected to this.

Mr. Donnelstown moved and Mr. Mulhern seconded, That the matter of the overpayment of the auditors for 1890 and 1891 be referred to the Finance Committee with power to act—Carried.

TENDERS FOR SUPPLIES.

Mr Cahill moved and Mr. Best seconded, that the Street and Bridge Committee be directed to advertise for tenders and award contracts for the necessary supplies for streets and bridges for the current year.

Mr. DENNISTOUN thought that the tenders mentioned in Mr. Cahill's motion should come before the council.

The MAYOR thought that the tenders should be brought before the council so that all the members should have the information. He intended to work on the line of economy through the year and hoped to be supported by the council.

After some further discussion the motion was carried.

Mr. Winch moved and Mr. Best seconded, that tenders be asked for one hundred cords of wood for charitable purposes.—Carried.

COMMITTEE MEETINGS.

The Mayor here asked if the chairman of each committee would consider the matter he suggested in his inaugural address, that the committees have regular meeting nights. They would then have better attended committee meetings.

PRINTING AUDITORS' REPORT.

Mr. Kelly moved, seconded by Mr. Meldrum, that the clerk be requested to get for publication from the auditors a detailed report of receipts and expenditure, assets and liabilities, for the year 1891, somewhat like the auditors' report of 1879, and that the printing committee have the same published.

Mr. BRADBURN though the cost of printing these reports was too much to spend, if the council were going to work on the principle of economy.

Mr. KELLY said it would be money well spent. The ratepayers could then see where the money had been spent, and who had got it.

Mr. MELDRUM spoke in support of the motion and said the ratepayers ought to know where the money went. At present even the councillors did not know exactly how the money was spent. (Applause.)

Mr. BRADBURN said that the auditors' report had not been before the council yet, and why order a report to be printed that had not been received?

THE RATEPAYERS SHOULD CRITICISE.

The MAYOR, before putting the motion, said that the ratepayers should know what was done. They should be educated to criticise the expenditure of the council. If the report cost $150 or $200 it would be money well spent. He hoped at the end of the year to be able to show what they had done and how they had spent the money, and to show that everything had been conducted in a straightforward manner and above board. This was a good way of doing it, and he was glad Mr. Kelly had introduced this motion.

Mr. DENNISTOUN suggested they might have the report printed in the newspapers, part of it at a time, and thought that the matter might be referred to the Printing Committee.

The motion was carried.

The Council then adjourned at 9 o'clock.

Police Court.

TUESDAY, Jan. 19th.

At the police court this morning, Sam Herron was arraigned for being drunk. It appears that prisoner had only been released from jail yesterday morning after serving a sentence of three months for theft. He was on his way home when he was overcome with the effect of the potations he had indulged in to celebrate his release. He was allowed to go on promising to leave town.

THE CEMETERY COMPANY

Held Their Annual Meeting Yesterday.

Reports Received From the Directors—The Superintendent and the Auditors—Election of Directors, Auditors and Officers—One Man One Vote.

The annual meeting of the Directors and Shareholders was held in the council chamber, President, Mr. Denne in the chair. The following directors were present: Messrs. Denne (president), Denniston, Shortly, Lundy, Stapleton, and Mr. E. A. Peck, secretary.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed, after which the following report of the Directors was read.

THE DIRECTORS' REPORT.

To the shareholders of the Little Lake Cemetery Company:—

The Directors of the Company beg to present the following report of their proceedings for the past year:

At the first meeting of the Directors, Mr. Stevenson, who had been president for the preceding three years, declining re-election, Mr. Denne was elected president.

The preservation of the books and records at the cemetery has this year received the special attention of the Board. It is of the highest importance that the registers of lots, and of interments, etc., be preserved from loss, and as the safe in use was not sufficiently large, and the papers, etc., requiring to be preserved are continually increasing, the Board decided to erect a vault adjoining the present office. This was done at an expenditure of $226.00 The building was erected by Mr. Adam Dawson and the doors were procured from Messrs. J. & J. Taylor, Toronto.

REVISION OF BY-LAWS.

The tariff of charges has been this year carefully revised by the Board and extended so as to provide all the ordinary services that are rendered by the superintendent and those under him.

The printed copies of the rules revised in 1886 being almost exhausted the Board decided before reprinting to again revise them. The many changes and additions now made in them, will, it is hoped, further tend to the preservation of order in the cemetery and to the making it beautiful and attractive.

Copies of the rules will be supplied to the shareholders on application. With them is printed an historical sketch, which it is thought will be interesting to the shareholders. The drafts of the new rules and sketch were prepared by the Superintendent whose services in this connection, the Directors are glad to acknowledge.

STATE OF THE FINANCES.

The usual statement of receipts and expenditure of the year, with the Auditors' report thereon, is also submitted.

The balance of cash on hand is $1,895 as against $1 374 at the end of the previous year, showing a gain during the year of over $520. While this large surplus is gratifying, it should be noted that a large portion—$1,430—of the receipts for the year is derived from the sale of lots and graves, a source of income which must some day be exhausted. While the expenses of maintenance increase annually as more of the ground is brought into use at some period in the future, the Directorate will have to depend to a great extent on the income derived from the accumulations of the past for funds to carry out their work.

It is therefore to be hoped that during the next four years, when no very extensive improvements will probably be required, considerable sums will be set apart annually to increase the present reserve fund.

The directors have been so far unable to carry out the proposal expressed in their last annual report, to invest $1,000 of the cash surplus in the purchase of a debenture of the town, as none during the year were offered for sale. They understand, however, that some will be issued by the town in a few months, and they, therefore, recommend that when possible $1 500 be invested in this manner, and that another debenture of $2,000 be obtained in exchange for the one for that amount held by the company and which has only one year more to run.

Signed on behalf of the directors,

HENRY DENNE,
President.

Peterborough, 18th Jan., 1892.

The report was received and adopted.

THE SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT

was then read as follows:—

PETERBOROUGH, January 18th, 1892.

To the President, Directors and Shareholders of the Little Lake Cemetery Company:—

I beg to submit the following report of the improvements made and the receipts and expenditure for labour at the cemetery for the year ending December 31st, 1891.

In the forepart of the season about 80 trees and shrubs were planted, and the piece of ground at the left of the entrance was sodded over. This latter work and sodding of lots and graves required 7,500 superficial feet of sod.

About half an acre in the back part of the cemetery was levelled and sown with grass seed for sod for future use.

The road leading from Conger Avenue to the south entrance was cut to a regular width, graded and gravelled, making a good south entrance. This work required 26 square yards of gravel.

Five hundred and fifty feet of water mains have been laid, and six hydrants erected at convenient places.

At the single grave plot the balance of Block 2 has been filled to a depth of two feet with earth, levelled and seeded with grass seed, making a pretty plot of 200 single graves.

Across the road from the single grave plot, in the pine grove, where the trees were becoming too thick to allow the grass to grow, some trees were removed; also the dead trees and stumps north of the office and along the lake shore, and the ground levelled, giving it a neat appearance.

The terraces along Lake Avenue and Conger Avenue, and some on Maple Avenue, and on the north part of Section C, facing Ravine Avenue, were re-sodded. This work required 1,755 superficial feet of sod.

NEW VAULT FOR BOOKS.

A vault for the preservation of the books and records, etc., has been built in connection with the office.

A tool house has also been fitted up, as the one in use was too small for convenience.

There have been removed several of the fences encircling lots, (upon being instructed by the owners to do so.) It is hoped that this work will be continued as most of the fences and railings are becoming badly dilapidated and do not from the good appearance of the lot and cemetery.

I would recommend that a deep drain be made and laid with tile next fall, running along Ravine Avenue, from the north to Range Avenue and along Range Avenue and some cross drains in section C, to intersect said drain on Ravine Avenue, as this part of the cemetery should be drained.

—Adopted.

VOTES OF THANKS.

A vote of thanks was then proposed to the Directors, moved by Mr. Telford and seconded by Mr. Irwin, for their report and services.—Carried.

Messrs. Lundy and Stapleton briefly replied on be half of the Directors.

Mr. Shortly moved a special vote of thanks to the Superintendent, Mr. Wm. Foord for his kindness, courtesy and general services rendered in preparing the sketch and bylaws of the company.

Mr. A. V. R. YOUNG in seconding thought that the Superintendent should receive this acknowledgment for his services and general willingness, from the annual meeting.

This was carried, after which

Mr. NORTHEY spoke of the services rendered by Mr. Foord, the Superintendent, and moved that his salary be increased to $525 for the next year. This was seconded by Mr. A. V. R. Young.

Mr. IRWIN asked if this matter did not rest with the Directors.

Mr. NORTHEY thought this motion expressed the feelings of all Directors and shareholders alike.—Carried.

ELECTION OF AUDITORS.

Mr. Stevenson moved, and Mr. Croft seconded that the late auditors Jno. J. Hall and Jas. A Hall be re-appointed.—Carried.

Mr. Kingan spoke briefly of the present unsatisfactory manner of voting in the election of directors. He moved that it be referred to the directors for consideration and alteration to the one man one vote system if it were possible.

Mr. DENNISTOUN here explained the basis of voting, and did not think anything would be gained by an appeal to the directors.

Mr. YOUNG thought the present system was an unfair one to the general number of shareholders.

Mr. Kingan's motion was carried.

THE ELECTION OF DIRECTORS

was next proceeded with. Messrs. Kendry and Young being elected scrutineers.

The following nominations were then made: Messrs. Stevenson, Lundy, Denne, Denniston, Kendry, Stapleton, Spry, Barnham, Shortly, Moore, Clementi, and T. E Bradburn.

Mr. Kendry withdrew his nomination after which the following were declared elected directors:

Messrs, Lundy, Stevenson, Stapleton, Shortly, Denne, Denniston, Barnham, Moore and Clementi,

A vote of thanks was then tendered to the scrutineers for their services.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The Directors afterwards met and elected the following officers:—

PRESIDENT—H. Denne.

SECRETARY TREASURER—E. A. Peck.

SUPERINTENDENT—W. H. Foord.

MANAGING DIRECTORS—Messrs. Shortly, Lundy and Stapleton.

The directors then adjourned.

When the system is all run down and there seems to be no hope of obtaining nourishment for the body by the ordinary process of food supply and digestion, when the body is shaking fast, then is the time to use Miller's Emulsion of pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil. It always works wonders, because it is a flesh and blood maker, and contains all the constituents for nourishment found in wheat, in fact Miller's Emulsion is a perfect "staff of life" and has never been excelled. W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville, Ont.

DEAR SIR,—Your "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills" are the best regulator for the system that humanity can use. Life is as the time-piece: frail and delicate are many of its works. A tiny particle of foreign substance adheres to the smallest wheel in the works, and what is the result?—at first, only a slight difference is perceptible in its time-keeping, but wait you; as the obstruction grows, the irregularity becomes greater, until at last, what could have been rectified with little trouble, in the beginning, will now require much care in thoroughly cleansing the entire works. So it is in human life—a slight derangement is neglected, it grows and increases, imperceptibly at first, then rapidly, until what could, in the beginning, have been cured with little trouble, becomes almost fatal. To prevent this, I advise all to purify the system frequently, by the use of Morse's Pills, and so preserve vigor and vitality.

Yours faithfully,

The progress made by the SUN LIFE during 1890 was remarkable. The new business was the largest in the Company's history, and was equalled by but one other Canadian Life Company. The income for the year exceeds $2,000 for each day in the year, Sundays included. The Assets are large and rapidly increasing. They are, moreover, of the highest character, yielding an average interest of 6.94 per cent. The overdue interest is small, and the Real Estate owned under foreclosure is only four per cent. of the amount of mortgages. This is a remarkable showing. The SURPLUS accumulated during the FOUR years of the current quinquennium is nearly THREE TIMES as much as the amount earned during any previous FIVE years, and the profits to Policy-holders cannot fail then to be highly satisfactory. The following are the figures:—

Net Surplus, 31st Dec., 1881, (five years)	$64,524 07
" " " " 1886, "	90,452 97
" " " " 1890, (four years)	232,175 00

"German Syrup"

Here is something from Mr. Frank A. Hale, proprietor of the De Witt House, Lewiston, and the Tontine Hotel, Brunswick, Me. Hotel men meet the world as it comes and goes, and are not slow in sizing people and things up for what they are worth. He says that he has lost a father and several brothers and sisters from Pulmonary Consumption, and is himself frequently troubled with colds, and he often coughs enough to make him sick at his stomach. Whenever he has taken a cold of this kind he uses Boschee's German Syrup, and it cures him every time. Here is a man who knows the full danger of lung troubles, and would therefore be most particular as to the medicine he used. What is his opinion? Listen! "I use nothing but Boschee's German Syrup, and have advised, I presume, more than a hundred different persons to take it. They agree with me that it is the best cough syrup in the market."

QUEER OLD CARVINGS.

THE QUAINT DESIGNS IN SOME OF ENGLAND'S CHURCHES.

Many Things of Beauty to Be Seen, but None More Interesting than the Miserere—Rich in Illustrations of Medieval Life—The Scenes Depicted.

At Worcester the series is of unusual interest. The stalls to which the seats belong were put up in 1397, and although a century and a half later new canopy-work was placed above the stalls, the misereres were retained. With reprehensible taste they were removed in the beginning of the present century and formed into a cornice on the organ screen, where they remained until the last few years, when they were wisely restored to their original position. Some singular representations of domestic incidents, scenes and occupations in husbandry are among the subjects.

One carving exhibits an old man wrapped up in a coat, with cape and gloves, seated before a fire. He has taken off his boots and is warming his feet, while with his right hand he is stirring some savory mess in a three-legged pot on the fire. One of the lesser side subjects represents a flitch of bacon; and the other a cat, which, like its master, is sitting up enjoying the warmth of the fire. Another has a man apparently playing on a flute; and in a third a husbandman sowing grain is shown. He has his seed-basket slung over his shoulder, while on either side of him is a larger basket standing on the ground. The side subjects, with characteristic drollery, are two birds, one flying towards him, the other down to the ground as if, with the natural instinct of its kind, to pick the seed the man has sown.

Sixty-four misereres in the Cathedral at Boston, Lincolnshire, makes a series which from the variety of their character and the excellence of their execution is one of the finest and most interesting in all England. Prominent among the subjects is an illustration of a medieval romance which was popular in the fourteenth century. The carving represents the front of a castle flanked by four circular turrets provided with archery slits and surmounted throughout by embattled parapets. On each side is a most dangerously large round-headed window, and in the middle a similar large arched door-way, through which a stout horse with a club tail has partly entered, when the portcullis descends upon its hind-quarters. This is an incident in the life of Sir Yoain, when, in hot pursuit of the "knight of the basinet," he galloped over a drawbridge after him, and the portcullis dropping upon his unfortunate steed cut it in half, while he escaped, according to a

FROM LUDLOW.

French romance of the latter half of the twelfth century.

> Then fel the portcullis on ene
> Through midel and stede it smote al down
> His horse of his heles it schure.

Thus he and half his horse were helplessly sprawling within the castle entrance, and it seemed to be all over with him, when he was rescued by a damsel called Lurit, who enabled him to escape through a door between two gates of the castle. Perhaps this adventure suggested, in later times, one of the marvelous incidents in the life of Baron Munchausen. Only one side subject remains to this carving; it is the entrance of a castle corresponding with the central one.

A domestic storm is the subject of another of the Boston misereres. On the right is the husband, in cap and gown, holding a bow by the string in his left hand, near to which are two large arrows, but no game. On account of this woful lack of provender, his angry wife seizes him by the beard and threatens to strike him with the distaff, with the spindle suspended from it in her right.

WELLINGBOROUGH, NORTHAMPTONSHIRE.

At Bristol, where the misereres were constructed in the early part of the sixteenth century, are two scriptural subjects—the Temptation, the tree entwined by the serpent being in the center, with Adam on one side and Eve on the other. The tempter has the head of a woman. The other carving represents Samson slaying the lion, with a man and woman rising from flowers as side subjects.

Among the fine series of misereres at Stratford-on-Avon, accompanying a shield of armorial bearings, the medieval story of the virgin and the unicorn is represented, the unicorn lying with its head in the maiden's lap, while a hunter is striking it in the rear.

At Ludlow Cathedral the awful end of a wicked alewife is graphically portrayed upon a miserere. The day of judgment is supposed to have arrived, and she has received her sentence. A demon, seated, forms one of the side subjects; he is reading a list of the crimes she has committed, which the magnitude of the parchment shows to be rather a long one. Another demon (whose head has been broken off in the original) carries on his back in an irreverent manner the unfortunate woman in order to throw her into the mouth of hades, which forms the other side subject. She is naked, with the exception of the fashionable head-gear, which formed one of her vanities in the world, and she carries in her hand the false ale-measure with which she cheated her customers. A demon bagpiper welcomes her on her arrival with demonstrations of fiendish joy. Into the mouth of hades, conventionally represented as an enormous pair of jaws, a nude figure is being pitched head-foremost.

Don't experiment with your health. You may be sure of the quality of your medicine even if you have to take much of your food, upon trust. Ask your druggist for Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and no other. It is the standard blood purifier, the most effective and economical.

The good deeds done by that unequalled family liniment, Hagyard's Yellow Oil, during the thirty years it has been held in ever-increasing esteem by the public would fill volumes. Cure for A Constipation and Headache

Dr. Silas Lane, while in the Rocky Mountains, discovered a root that, when combined with other herbs, makes an easy and certain cure for constipation. It is in the form of dry roots and leaves, and is known as Lane's Family Medicine. It will cure sick-headache in one night. For the blood, liver and kidneys, and for clearing up the complexion it does wonders. Druggists sell it at 50 cents a package. dw

TWO YEARS MINUS FOOD.

REMARKABLE CASE OF A PENNSYLVANIA WOMAN.

Fed by Absorption—She is Said to Have Cancer of the Pharynx and Death Was Predicted Months Ago — Physicians Puzzled.

WHITEHALL, Pa., Jan. 19.—It is now 653 days since Mrs. Adam Wuchter, a native of this hamlet, has swallowed a morsel of food or a drop of liquid, or received nourishment of any nature in the regular manner.

"Death seems to have forgotten me," she whispered to her husband in a moment of consciousness a few days ago, and, indeed, it seems as though death had forgotten to snuff the faint spark of life that for nearly two years has but barely flickered in her emaciated frame.

Mrs. Wuchter's case is one that has puzzled all the local physicians and has attracted the attention of many medical men in various parts of the state and country. She lies now blind, bedridden, paralyzed and wasted to a shadow, almost pulseless, and yet she is hardly less feeble than when her condition first attracted attention, fully a year and a half ago.

At that time her death was regularly predicted with each recurring week, yet she still lives, showing a tenacity of life that is as mysterious as it is unusual, taking no medicine and almost no sustenance, swallowing nothing, either solid or fluid, and living it would seem partly by substances held in the mouth for a brief interval and absorbed by the glands and partly, and perhaps entirely, by superhuman will power.

History of the Case.

News travels slowly to the outside world from the Lehigh Valley, and it was fully two months before news of Mrs. Wuchter's condition reached Allentown and Easton and the country beyond. Then it was sent out in the form of a report that the woman was starving herself to death, and that she could not survive beyond the week. This was in June, 1890. The case at once attracted attention, and daily and weekly bulletins were issued for fully six months. Then the interest died out, only to be aroused again after this lapse of time.

The history of the case, so far as it can be ascertained and verified, is as follows: Mrs. Wuchter had not had good health for 10 years. About that time she suffered from a cold which left her with a bad cough. Gradually her voice began to fail, until the vocal cords refused to perform their function and she could make only the breathing and aspirate sounds. Her words became almost unintelligible to a stranger. The wasting process continued, and a little more than two years ago Dr. Charles Seiger of Siegfried's Bridge made a thorough examination and diagnosis. He came to the conclusion that his patient was suffering from cancer of the pharynx.

Shortly after this swallowing became difficult for Mrs. Wuchter and, according to Dr. Seiger's records, on Good Friday, April 4, 1890, she was unable not only to masticate and swallow food but also to drink water. It was never a voluntary act upon Mrs. Wuchter's part. When food or drink was offered to her she essayed to partake of it, but was unable to do so. Her efforts to obtain nourishment brought on convulsions of an epileptic nature. These were repeated at frequent intervals, sometimes as many as 40 occurring in one day.

Fed by Absorption.

A paralytic stroke followed in August, 1890, which affected her left side. Then she lost the entire sight of her right eye, and could only distinguish between day and night with the other eye. Both these resulted from the convulsions. For a while she obtained nourishment entirely by absorption. She was bathed frequently and her hand was kept immersed in water.

Dr. Seiger said, in talking of the case today, that he was absolutely powerless to do anything for the woman. He freely admits that he is at a loss to account for the fact of her living under the existing conditions. The Doctor still maintains that his diagnosis of cancer of the pharynx is correct, although several visiting physicians believe the woman to the suffering from consumption. Dr. Seiger explains that the cancerous growth is not progressive, but remains as it did a year ago. He says the woman's œsophagus is closed even against an instrument. The doctor, being unable to find any parallel of the case in the medical books, thinks that it should be made the object of study by medical men.

To All Appearances Dead

Mrs. Wacher, to all appearances, is inanimate. She presents a pitiful appearance. Her eyes are bandaged and she is wasted to skin and bone. Apparently there is no movement of the pulse, but her heart beats regularly, although feebly.

The mucous membranes still retain moisture, but her tongue is slightly coated. At intervals the only evidence of life is manifested in an internal convulsion, then again upon certain occasions she shows, for her, a remarkable awakening of vitality, and can even utter a few gasping words. Her mind is unaffected, and at such times she recognizes the presence of acquaintances by their voices. Her movements occur infrequently, upon one occasion only after an interval of five weeks.

The "Devil" Goes to Church.

AMHERSTBURG, Jan. 19.—The prize offered by the Rev. W. H. Gane to the pupil of the Amherstburg Methodist Sunday school for regular attendance at the Sunday services was awarded to David Johnson, The Echo office "devil," he not having missed a service during the year.

BOILER EXPLOSION.

The Explosion Heard for Miles Around—Not a Survivor Left Alive to Explain the Disaster.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 19.—Specials from the cities near Ceredo, W. Va., tell the news of a terrific explosion of the Phœnix powder mills, which was very destructive to life, this morning. The Phœnix mill is situated at Gretna City, near Ceredo and about half way between Huntington, W. Va., and Catlettsburg, Ky. This is the third explosion at this mill within three months, and is by all odds the most destructive one. How the awful wreck of to-day was brought about will never be known, because not a soul that was in the mills is alive to tell the story. At 8.30 this morning people in Ironton, 25 miles away, heard the terrible detonating roar.

In Ceredo, three miles away, windows were broken and wares in the stores were shaken from the shelves. In Catlettsburg, nearly 10 miles away, the earth shook and people were alarmed. Everybody divined the cause and there was a rush from all directions to the scene. The first to go was the glazing room, in which were 10 tons of powder. Thus successively the packing house, the magazine and the four-wheel mills and lastly a carload of gunpowder went hurling in the fiery fragments through the air. Not a vestige of the entire plant remains, and the country for half a mile around is strewn with fragments of the buildings and of the bodies of five men, victims of the disaster. It is not known definitely, but at the presenting writing it is believed not less than 35 tons of powder were burned in the several explosions.

The Killed.

ARCHIE LIVINGSTON, a Scotchman, superintendent of the mills, blown to atoms.

ED WINTON, the architect and engineer, who built the works. His body was very little mutilated.

JOHN BENTON, a workman. body horribly mangled.

JOHN SCHLO and CHARLES SCOTT, workmen, both terribly mutilated.

The mortally injured are Robert Cook, a glazing mill hand, who was approaching to the mill when it blew up. His clothing, hair and whiskers were burned off. He ran 200 yards to a stream and jumped in. He will not live.

The seriously injured are: K. O. Reice, James Estep and John Justice, who happened to be in the vicinity when the explosions occurred.

Explosion of Natural Gas.

LANCASTER, O., Jan. 1.—At 6.30 yesterday the residence of Judge John S. Brazee, a two-story brick in North Columbus-street, was leveled to the ground by an explosion of natural gas. Mrs. Brazee, four grown children and the servant were in bed at the time and escaped injury. Judge Brazee, the only occupant stirring, was blown 60 feet across the street and fatally injured.

Betrayed a Young Woman and the Murder of Himself and Another Followed.

SANTA ANA, San Salvador, Jan. 19.—The scandalous conduct of a priest in the little village of Texacalco has resulted in two murders. The prettiest girl in the village was recently betrothed to Adrian Garcia and pending the arrangements for their marriage the young man commended his fiancee to the care of the priest at the village church. The girl was betrayed by the priest. She confessed to her lover and Garcia shot the priest.

All the religious fanatics of the town were aroused by the shooting of the priest. They refused to believe the girl's story, and demanded that Garcia be turned over to them for summary punishment for murdering the priest.

On Friday night a mob surrounded the jail for the purpose of securing Garcia and wreaking vengeance upon him. The officer at the jail refused to surrender his prisoner, whereupon the mob attacked the jail and literally tore the officer to pieces. Garcia escaped during the riot and is now in hiding. Thirty persons in the mob have been arrested. They are in jail awaiting trial.

QUEER PERJURY CASE.

Ignorance of the Law Does Sometimes Excuse the Culprit.

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask., Jan. 19.—Francis Turond was tried before Judge McGuire and a jury on a charge of perjury. The case arose out of the late election for the Legislative Assembly in Batoche. The defendant, having voted for M. Nolin, it was shown that he did not reside in the electoral district of Batoche, although he took the oath declaring that he did. The charge of perjury was brought against him by M. Boucher, the other candidate, Mr. J. McKay prosecuting for the crown. After hearing evidence and argument His Lordship Justice McGuire, in charging the jury, gave a summary of the case. The excellent character borne by the defendant and his well-known reputation for truthfulness were strong points in his defence. There seemed to be some uncertainty in his mind as to the meaning of domicile, and he believed that what he swore to was correct. The jury, after a few minutes' retirement, found the defendant "not guilty."

KILLED BY A MOOSE.

Two Indian Hunters Killed by an Old Bull Which They Had Wounded.

RAT PORTAGE, Ont., Jan. 19.—Two Indians hunting near the Lake of the Woods came across a band of moose, consisting of an old bull and a cow and two calves. The Indians were armed with old guns and knives. One shot at the bull moose and hit the animal in the shoulder, wounding him in such a manner that he could not run fast. They ran after him, firing again and again, but with no success, until at last the moose turned upon them, and as they had followed closely, they had but little time to get out of his way.

The moose rushed at the Indians, and one of them, as he turned to get away, tripped on a root and fell at the feet of the enraged brute. He at once trampled and cut the man with his hoofs in a most terrible manner, and did not leave him until life was extinct. Meanwhile the other Indian was doing all in his power to save his companion and was stabbing the moose with his knife, having discarded the gun as being useless for fear it might hurt the man who was down.

When the moose had satisfied its rage upon the man that was down it turned upon the other and threw him to the earth, where it attacked him as savagely as it had his companion, and soon the second Indian was dead also. They were missed by their companions and a party came up just as the man was dead and the animal fell to the earth exhausted from the many wounds which had been made by the knife of the last victim. The moose was one of the largest ever seen in this part of the country and stood fully 10 feet high to the top of its antlers.

Thrilling Adventure of Two Boys—They Show True Grit—In an Encounter With a Lynx.

Mr. J. J. McBain, who has returned from a visit to his uncle, Mr. Geo. McBain, of Cavan, brings news of a startling adventure that befel his two little cousins last Saturday. It appears that the two sons of Mr. Geo. McBain, aged respectively nine and thirteen years, were allowed to go for a sleigh-ride by their mother. They harnessed their two splendid dogs to the sleigh and started off down the road with the intention of visiting some friends.

On their way home again they saw a team coming down the road at a very rapid rate. They seemed to be almost beyond the control of the driver, and to avoid a collision the boys drew their sleigh into the side of the road near a wood-pile. Just as the horses were passing the spot where the boys were sheltering, they took fright and started off. A large animal then on to the back of one of the dogs harnessed to the small sleigh, and started worrying it. The other dog then took a part in the affray, while the boys, being very much frightened, ran away. The animal finding that the two dogs were becoming more than a match for it, evidently considered discretion in this case to be the better part of valor, and made off over the fence. The two dogs started off after it, and were gaining, when the animal took refuge on the top of a tree stump. The boys by this time had recovered their presence of mind, and followed the dogs. When the animal saw it was cornered, it

SPRANG AT THE ELDEST BOY.

Just at this moment, however, the dogs got hold of him and got him down. The boys then assisted the dogs by killing him with a heavy stick. They loaded the animal on the sleigh and took him home, not knowing what it was. On arriving it was discovered that it was a LYNX, or wild cat. It was a very large specimen, and stood two and a half feet in height, and was four feet in length. It possessed enormous and powerful teeth and claws, which the animal well knew how to use. The dogs ears were badly lacerated in the affray. This all goes to show the grit and courage of the boys, who have reason to be proud of their achievement.

Telfordian Temperature Topics

The Coldest Day of the Decade—Thirty Four Degrees Below Zero Last Night.

PETERBOROUGH, Jan. 20th.—Yesterday at sunrise at zero, rising little during the day, sundown 2° below, the coldest throughout last night being down to 34°, and at sunrise this morning at 32°, and at 10.30 at 10°, a very high record so late in the day; but the wind being changeable it will moderate some. Only once during the last eleven years has the glass fallen so low as the following will show:—At sundown on the 22nd of January, 1882, the thermometer stood at 2° below zero, the morning of the 23rd at 23° below, at sundown at 18° below. The morning of the 24th of the same year at 34° and at sundown at 10° below; so you will perceive the year 1882 outdoes our present days, continuing so long, consequently it was the coldest during the last eleven years, although '82 and '92 each came down to 34° and only four days of a difference, the one on the 20th the other on the 24th. We shall soon have another storm.—THOMAS TELFORD.

The Duke of Clarence and the Town Council.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

SIR,—Allow me in the absence of Mayor Kendry, to refer briefly to the EXAMINER'S editorial of last night, on the death of the Duke of Clarence. It is to be regretted that a resolution of condolence was not introduced and passed in open council at the inaugural meeting, but this oversight has been rectified as far as possible by forwarding under the hand of the Mayor and Town Clerk to the Governor General, for transmission to the Queen, and the Prince and Princess of Wales the assurance that the people of the town of of Peterborough tender them their respectful sympathy in the hour of bereavement. I am,

Yours truly,
R. MAX DENNISTOUN.

Terrible Suffering.

The original cause of rheumatism, as of many other diseases, is a leak of nerve force and power. Nature's remedy, Paine's Celery Compound, works directly on the nervous system, and speedily drives away all traces of rheumatism. It has worked some wonderful cures in Canada quite recently. Try it sufferer.

SENSATIONAL SCENE IN THE FRENCH CHAMBER.

Blows Struck and Ears Cuffed and Half a Dozen Duels on the Tapis in Consequence — 73 Bodies Recovered From the River Kur—O'Brien Endeavoring to Reconcile the Factions.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—There was unusual excitement in the Chamber of Deputies today. A Boulangist member, M. Laurer, wished to ask a question, the object of which was to have newspaper articles read from the tribune reflecting on the Government.

The matter was shelved after discussion, and as M. Laurer was leaving the tribune M. Constans, toward whom the insinuations were directed suddenly, advanced and struck him in the face. There was an uproar immediately.

The Government supporters wildly cheered M. Constans.

Various groups of deputies became engaged in violent quarrels. During one of these disputes M. Delpech, a Republican, cuffed the ears of Deputy Castelin, a Boulangist. As the result of this act of violence M. Dumarteil waited on M. Delpech in the lobby to arrange for a duel with Castelin.

At this juncture there was another row resulting in arrangements for another duel, which it was settled should precede that between M. Castelin and M. Delpech.

About the same time, also in the lobby, a well-known journalist struck M. Boudeau, a Boulangist member.

Later on the interrupted sitting was resumed. M. Constans on entering the chamber was greeted with cheers. He responded by expressing his satisfaction at the sympathy shown him in the chamber, adding that it was sometimes impossible to maintain one's sang-froid.

Another French Decoration Scandal.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—From present appearances the country is on the eve of another decoration scandal similar to that in which Wilson, the son-in-law of President Grevy, was the central figure, and which caused his retirement. De Cassagnac and La Lanterne both charge Gen. Brugere, the secretary of the president's military household, with having conferred the red ribbon of the legion of honor upon several persons for pecuniary considerations.

Left 250 Dead on the Field.

MARSEILLES, Jan. 20.—There has been further trouble between the French and the Dahomians. Advices by steamer report that 2000 Dahomians attacked Kotonu. The French garrison made a gallant defence and the fighting lasted three hours. Finally the French made a sortie and the attacking party fled, leaving 250 dead on the field. The French loss was 30 killed and 10 wounded.

Submitted to Arbitration.

DUBLIN, Jan. 20.—Another effort has been made to reconcile the two opposing factions of the Irish Nationalists. William O'Brien, apparently of the opinion that the recent Parnellite victories have widened the breach between them and their opponents, has published a lengthy open letter addressed to John E. Redmond, in which he proposes that the existing differences be submitted to arbitration. Mr. O'Brien even offers to retire from public life if it should be considered that such a course would tend to secure the end in view.

Shot by Masked Men.

DUBLIN, Jan. 20.—Near Newgrove, County Clare, four masked men stopped a car in which Charles Perry was riding. After shooting and killing the horse they fired at Mr. Perry, wounding him in both thighs. He was pulled out of the car and his clothes closely searched. A number of papers were secured by the men, who hastily decamped.

73 of the Bodies Recovered.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 20.—The search for the remains of the persons who met their death in the catastrophe which occurred at Tiflis yesterday, on the occasion of the ceremony of the blessing of the waters of the River Kur, has been unremittingly continued since the accident happened. At last accounts 73 bodies had been recovered.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 20.—There has been fighting at Kallasdash arising from a revolt fomented by Persian priests on the tobacco question movement, the local troops having been defeated by the insurgents. In the engagement 80 soldiers and 200 rebels were killed and more than a hundred wounded.

A DOCTOR'S CRIME.

He Kills His Child-Betrothed and Then Commits Suicide.

BERLIN, Jan. 20.—Dr. Bredermann, director of the chemical laboratory in the University of Berlin, yesterday killed his betrothed, Margaritta Emer, and then committed suicide. Dr. Bredermann was 42 years old, while the girl was 17. The affair is enshrouded in mystery.

The Pope Has the Grip.

ROME, Jan. 20.—It has just been announced that the Pope is suffering from an attack of influenza. The report has caused considerable apprehension owing to the extreme age of His Holiness.

Wales' Message to Dublin's Mayor.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—The Prince of Wales has sent to the Lord Mayor of Dublin a telegram in reply to the resolution adopted by the Dublin corporation condoling with him and his family on the death of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale. His Royal Highness says:

I and the Princess of Wales are deeply touched by the resolution of condolence adopted by the corporation of Dublin. Your words of sympathy have gone to our hearts. Our dear son was very happy in Ireland and he would have shortly returned there if he had not been stricken by a fatal illness.

WAS FARMER POST CRUELLY DONE TO DEATH.

A Dog Found Crouching on its Master's Dead Body—The Man Left a Hotel in Company With Two Companions and Next Day Was Found Frozen to Death.

WINDSOR, Jan. 20.—William Sexton and John Ward, two travelers, who were seeking game in the vicinity of Elmstead Station, near Windsor, observed a large dog crouching upon a little eminence near the railway track. The brute was howling, but refused to obey the men's whistle to approach them.

Thereupon the two hunters approached the animal. The dog was crouched upon the form of its master, who proved to be George Post, a farmer living near by. With the exception of his chest, stomach and throat, the poor fellow was frozen stiff. Strange to say life was not extinct, owing to the fact that the warmth of the dog's body had not allowed the frost to affect the stomach, breast and throat of the poor fellow. The faithful brute had crouched upon his master's form through the long hours of the night without moving from his position. Post only lived a short time after being found.

It was learned that Post had left a saloon at Elmstead Station, accompanied by his dog and a couple of unknown men, to walk to his home, 1½ miles distant. He had been drinking during the evening and it is claimed had a goodly sum of money in his possession. When the body was searched after discovery Saturday morning not a penny of cash was found and therefore suspicion points to foul play.

A Buffalo Boy Driven Insane by Attending Dark-Room Seances.

BUFFALO, Jan. 20.—The exhibitions of Spiritualists have driven Edward J. Atwell, a 17-year-old boy, crazy and yesterday he was taken to the insane asylum.

Some three months ago he was introduced into a meeting of Spiritualists, and since then he has been a constant attendant at their seances. At one of these meetings the alleged "materialization" sights and sounds so affected him that he was attacked with hysteria and had to be removed from the room.

He believes that he is full of disembodied spirits and that his clothing confines them. To release them he tears his clothes off. That's what he was doing when he was arrested in the street to-day.

Mr. Crowley's Successor.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—Mr. J. A. Bailey has just purchased, through his European agent, for "the Greatest Show on Earth," an adult male orangoutang. Not only is this specimen full grown and perfect, but he is a veritable giant of the species, measuring when erect fully 5 feet 6 inches in height, which is 1 foot 4 inches taller than the largest of these animals mentioned in books of natural history.

The price paid for the strange creature was $3500. This is the first adult orangoutang ever seen in captivity here or in Europe. Judging from his height and development the age of this animal is 20 years. Its hands and feet are enormously large, while its body is twice the size of a big man and is covered with coarse red hair.

His Eyes Were Turned Wrong Side Out.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., Jan. 19.—R. T. Summers was born blind, but now can see. For a long time Summers, who is a white man, was a well-known character here and made a good living by selling soaps, mending chairs, etc. A month ago he married a respectable widow and went to Alabama. At Birmingham an oculist examined his eyes and finally cured him. Summers' eyes had always been reversed from what they ought to have been. The pupils were turned inward and back of the eye outward. A strange feature is that while Summers recovered his sight he has lost all knowledge of his trade, chair mending.

A Clinton Fire.

CLINTON, Jan. 20.—Last night a disastrous fire occurred in Whitehead's block, caused by the explosion of a lamp in J. C. Gilroy's drygoods store. The flames spread to the premises of J. B. Rumball, jeweler, and Cunningham, grocer. Mr. Gilroy's stock was almost entirely destroyed, the stocks of Rumball & Co. and J. Cunningham being saved. Mr. Gilroy was insured for $6000 and Rumball for $800. The Central Telephone Agency and the Canadian Express Co. each lose considerable.

Held up by Highwaymen.

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 20.—A son of Lieut.-Col. Dawson and Richard J. Williams reported last night that while they were riding along the side road north of the second concession, London township, they were stopped by a couple mounted highwaymen who relieved young Dawson of all the money he had in his pockets, about 50 cents, and fired revolvers after Williams as he rode away, one of the shots grazing his shoulder.

Oldest Unpaid Tailor's Bill on Record.

BERLIN, Jan. 20.—An unpaid tailor's bill of the Emperor Maximilian I. of Germany, who flourished just 400 years ago, has been discovered in the archives of the ancient Swiss city of Coire. The heirs of the tailor are now in possession of the relic, and it has been suggested that they present the bill to the present Emperor for payment.

The Remains to Be Sent to England.

OTTAWA, Jan. 20.—The remains of the late Dowager Countess of Cavan have been placed in a rolled steel casket and will be sent to England Thursday morning.

The remains of the late Mrs. Crawford, principal of Coligny College, will be interred in the winter vault here till spring and then sent to England.

Sleighing Party Annihilated.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 20.—A Wabash train ran into a sleighing party of 21 members of the Clover Leaf Fishing Club near Forest Park this evening. It is reported eight persons were killed.

The Tallest Man on Earth.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 20.—Col. Picket Nelson, colored, "the tallest man on earth," died of typhoid fever here yesterday, aged 31. He was 8 feet 1 inch tall and weighed 367 lbs.

A convict named Bishea, confined in the Penn Prison, killed a warder yesterday with an iron bar obtained from a bedstead, then donned the warder's clothing, took his keys and escaped.

Rudyard Kipling, the story writer, was married yesterday to Miss Balestier, sister of the young American novelist, Wolcott Balestier, who died recently at Dresden from typhoid fever.

NASAL BALM

NEVER FAILS

It is a certain and speedy cure for Cold in the Head and Catarrh in all its stages.

SOOTHING, CLEANSING, HEALING.

Instant Relief, Permanent Cure, Failure Impossible.

Many so-called diseases are simply symptoms of Catarrh, such as headache, partial deafness, ringing sense of smell, foul breath, hawking and spitting, nausea, general feeling of debility, etc. If you are troubled with any of these or kindred symptoms, you have Catarrh, and should lose no time in procuring a bottle of Nasal Balm. Be warned in time, neglected cold in head results in Catarrh, followed by consumption and death. Nasal Balm is sold by all druggists, or will be sent post paid, on receipt of price (50 cents and $1.00) by addressing

The Reconstruction.

The Tories in this part of the country display no enthusiasm over the promotion of Mr. John Haggart. The respectable men among them feel that it is a defiance to public morality, while the "workers," usually ready to swear by anything or everything Tory, are far from proud of him as the new Ontario leader, and make haste to add by way of minimizing Mr. Abbott's blunder, that Mr. Patterson of Essex is going to enter the Cabinet soon, and that Mr. Patterson is a decent man. The followers of Mr. Chapleau regard Mr. Haggart's elevation to the Railways as a gross insult to that gentleman. Mr. Chapleau has been kept back, ostensibly because of the scandal in the Printing Bureau, but he is an angel of light by comparison with Haggart, besides being a much abler man and a man who has rendered greater service to the party. To all those Tories, English and French, who expected that the reconstruction would be a bona-fide effort to get rid of the weak and useless Ministers, Mr. Abbott's decision to retain Mr. Haggart and honor him with a higher office is simply inexplicable. They can understand how it came that Mr. Meredith was dropped. Mr. Meredith is obnoxious to the Roman Catholic church and the Roman Catholic vote was wanted in the bye-elections. But why Haggart of all persons in the world should have been crammed down their throats, is a mystery which becomes the more mysterous the more it is thought about. Can he make a good speech? Has he served the party in the past? Is he personally popular? Has he any following? These queries all find a negative answer, while a feeling is abroad against the man and his ways and works of which Mr. Abbott could not have been entirely ignorant. Mr. Cockburn, the grand seigneur of Toryism in Toronto, is about as light a weight as is to be found on either side of politics; yet it is no exaggeration to say that his appointment as the new "chieftain" of Ontario would have given greater satisfaction than Haggart's, and been less injurious to the Administration. The Tories are only just beginning to realize what they lost when the Old Man died. A few more blunders like this and there will be a cry up this way for the retirement of Mr. Abbott and the installation of Mr. Meredith or Mr. McCarthy. Party discipline is strong, but not strong enough to resist such a corrosive as Haggart, or to brook the manifest disregard of Ontario interests displayed in the so-called reconstruction.

Other sufferers from cold in the head and catarrh have been promptly cured, why not you? Capt. D. H. Lyon, manager and proprietor of the C.P.R. and R. W. & Co. car ferry, Prescott, Ont., says: I used Nasal Balm for a prolonged case of cold in the head. Two applications effected a complete cure in less than 24 hours. I would not take $100 for my bottle of Nasal Balm if I could not replace it. dw

Good Deeds Done.

The good deeds done by that unequalled family medicine, Hagyard's Yellow Oil, during the thirty years it has been held in ever-increasing esteem by the public would fill volumes. We cannot here enumerate all its good qualities, but that it can be relied on as a cure for croup, sore throat and all pains, goes without saying. dw

Which Class Are You In?

I wish here to ask a question of all,
And an answer please do not refuse:
What class of men are they who to-day
Our temperance societies abuse?

Are they the men who are working, I ask,
To save fellow creatures from ruin?
Are they the men who try by their votes
To shut up the cursed saloon?

Are they church members or Sunday school teachers,
Superintendents, or what?
Are they the class who benefit our nation?
I think you will find THEY ARE NOT.

Are they the men you want to the front?
The men that we'll follow as an example?
No! far from it friends, we want no such men,
Thank God we have a far better sample.

Well, what class of men are they who to-day
The temperance societies oppose?
They are simply a class who like their woe
That's just the kind of all those. [glass

They will tell you a man who can't take a
Or leave it alone, is no man; [glass,
Well these are the men that I always find
Will take it every time that they can.

They say there is no use in taking a pledge,
That they are being broke every day,
But I say it's not true, for thousands are
By taking a pledge in this way. [saved

If a man makes a vow before God and men,
That vow he'll try never to break,
While a simple resolution is not binding at
So which is the better to make? [all;

The temperance societies are striving to-day
To save the young men of our land,
Then to think any one would dare say a
Against any such good noble band! [word

Is he a man who will try by base falsehoods
To break up an army of God?
If he be one, I say it is time
All such were laid under the sod.

He who will advocate the moderate use
Of intoxicating liquor at all,
Is a man you will find who likes it himself,
Though the glasses he takes may seem small.

The moderate drinker is sure to, some day,
Have a thirst that he cannot o'ercome;
Then should we see others go on the same way.
And not make an effort to save some?

Have we not read in God's holy word,
Which to us as a guide has been given,
These words which are plain, no drunkard shall ever
Enter the kingdom of Heaven!

Oh will you then say, it is nothing but right
That these precious souls should be lost,
I say it is not, and we should everyone try
And save them at most any cost.

You say that our meetings are petty affairs—
That we meet not for the good we can do;
But I say it is false, for our purpose is good,
And to our vow we will ever be true.

By opposing the good work of temperance
You are doing the thing that's not right;
You are working for Satan while working for man,
And many young lives you will blight.

The societies are working for God and our home—
Yes, that is the temperance class;
The other for Satan, poverty and sin,
Then which of the two should we pass?

But which is your class? is the question, my friend—
Yes, that is the question for you;
Will you just think of it, carry it home,
And ask yourself, which of the two?

Hymen received an ovation on Wednesday last, the event being the marriage of Miss Emma Smith to Mr. William Brown, of Pontypool. The ceremony took place at the residence of the bride's father before a limited number of the friends of the contracting parties. The Rev. W. Cook, of Cavanville, officiated. In the evening the young couple left for their home in Manvers, accompanied by a few friends. The best wishes of the villagers go with the young couple.

Mr. W. J. McLean, of Toronto, visited his old home a short time ago. He is now in Hamilton on business for the firm of Rice, Lewis & Son, of Toronto.

Miss Lilly Best, of Magnetawan, and Miss Ella Best, of Peterborough, have been visiting their aunt, Mrs. George Jameson.

Of the Lisbon Medical Company is now at Toronto, Canada, and may be consulted either in person or by letter on all chronic diseases peculiar to men. Men, young, old or middle-aged, who find themselves nervous, weak and exhausted, who are broken down from excess or overwork, resulting in many of the following symptoms: Mental depression, premature old age, loss of memory, bad dreams, dimness of sight, palpitation of the heart, emissions, lack of energy, pain in the kidneys, headache, pimples on the face or body, itching or peculiar sensations about the scrotum, wasting of the organs, dizziness, specks before the eyes, twitching of the muscles, eyelids and elsewhere, bashfulness, deposits in the urine, loss of will power, tenderness of the scalp and spine, weak and flabby muscles, desire to sleep, failure to be rested by sleep, constipation, dullness of hearing, loss of voice, desire for solitude, excitability of temper, sunken eyes surrounded with leaden circle, oily looking skin, etc., are all symptoms of nervous debility that lead to insanity and death unless cured. The spring or vital force having lost its tension, every function wanes in consequences. Those who through abuse committed in ignorance may be permanently cured. Send your address for book on all diseases peculiar to man. Books sent free sealed. Heart disease, the symptoms of which are faint spells, purple lips, numbness, palpitation, skip beats, hot flushes, rush of blood to the head, dull pain in the heart with beats strong, rapid and irregular, the second heart beat quicker than the first, pain about the breast bone, etc., can positively be cured. No cure, no pay. Send for book. Address M. V. LUBON, 24 Macdonell ave., Toronto, Canada.

Springville Carnival.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

DEAR SIR—I wish to contradict the incorrect reports which are being circulated by Mr. Joseph Tully in regard to the High Park Band being engaged to play at the opening of the Springville skating rink. The High Park Band had no engagement to play at the rink, and had no communication with Mr. Tully regarding such an engagement. The management did not even ask permission to put our name on the bills, and made no offer whatever to our band to play for the carnival. Hoping this will explain to the public our non-appearance.

The Grange Hall Matter.

Legal Steps.

On Monday evening the members of the Grange employed County Constable Cochrane to spend the evening with them at Rothen Grange Hall to act in an official capacity in case of the attack of the previous morning upon the garrison being being repeated. Mr. Cochrane counselled the Grange not to take the law into their own hands, and in consequence of this advice, the Grange passed a resolution to take legal steps to decide the ownership of the property.

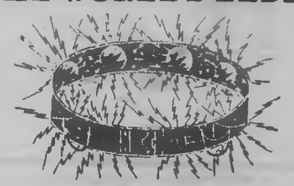
DORENWEND

ELECTRIC BELT

And Attachments.

HEAD OFFICE—103 Yonge St., Toronto

THE WORLD'S BEST.



ALL diseases curable by Electricity can be treated at home by the Dorenwend Appliance. The Dorenwend is the only legitimate Electric Belt made which fulfils the requirements of Electro-medical science. It is a complete BODY BATTERY. It has an independent Battery, which generates a mild, continuous current of Electricity (without shocks) and can be regulated to suit the strongest man or the weakest child. It is a CURRENT of QUANTITY, not merely a sensation current, and the quantity current is the greatest curative. It is a successful treatment for INDIGESTION, RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, LIVER AND KIDNEY TROUBLES, WEAK BACK, SPINAL DISEASE, HEART DISEASE, NERVOUS DEBILITY, PARALYSIS, VERTIGO, FEMALE COMPLAINTS, IMPOTENCE, SEXUAL DECLINE and all diseases of the Nervous and Muscular Systems.

Remember that the DORENWEND BELT is the very latest invention in this line, and was invented by a competent electrician, and ranks as the best in the world; we defy anyone to bring proof to the contrary.

Do not class this Belt with the humbug combinations of leather and metal with which the country is being flooded. If you wish to experiment with cheap articles buy THEM but if you want to procure a genuine Electric Belt and one that will be a benefit get a Dorenwend Belt.

A Fact

WORTH knowing is that blood diseases which all other remedies fail to cure, yield to Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Fresh confirmation of this statement comes to hand daily. Even such deep-seated and stubborn complaints as Rheumatism, Rheumatic Gout, and the like, are thoroughly eradicated by the use of this wonderful alterative.

Mrs. R. Irving Dodge, 110 West 126th street, New York, certifies:—

"About two years ago, after suffering for nearly two years from rheumatic gout, being able to walk only with great discomfort, and having tried various remedies, including mineral waters, without relief, I saw by an advertisement in a Chicago paper that a man had been relieved of this distressing complaint, after long suffering, by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I then decided to make a trial of this medicine, and took it regularly for eight months. I am pleased to say that it effected a complete cure, and that I have since had no return of the disease."

Mrs. L. A. Stark, Nashua, N. H., writes: "One year ago I was taken ill with rheumatism, being confined to my house six months. I came out of the sickness very much debilitated, with no appetite, and my system disordered in every way. I commenced to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla and began to improve at once, gaining in strength and soon recovering my usual health. I cannot say too much in praise of this well-known medicine."

"I have taken a great deal of medicine, but nothing has done me so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I felt its beneficial effects before I had quite finished one bottle, and I can freely testify that it is the best blood-medicine I know of."—L. W. Ward, Sr., Woodland, Texas.

Wedding Bells.

Mr. John Farley, of the Lock Works, and Miss Annie Wall were united in matrimony yesterday morning at St. Peter's Cathedral. The Rev. Father Scollard performed the ceremony. The bridegroom was assisted by Mr. David O'Connell and the bridesmaid was Miss Maggie McAuliffe. The bride was dressed in a handsome navy blue costume and had on a pretty cape trimmed with fur. The bridesmaid was dressed in a grey costume. At the conclusion of the ceremony the newly married couple left for Cleveland, Ohio, where the honeymoon will be spent. A large number of costly wedding presents were received by the happy couple.

Women's Auxiliary.

Attention is again called to the winter quarterly meeting of the Toronto Diocesan division of the Women's Auxiliary, which begins to-day. Several of the delegates arrived at noon to-day, and others will come this evening, and others, who are able to devote only one day to the meeting, will arrive to-morrow morning. Bishop Reeve, of the Mackenzie River diocese, will preach the sermon at the Holy Communion service at ten o'clock to-morrow, and will deliver an address at the public meeting in St. John's School house to-morrow evening. At the conclusion of the reception which will be tendered the delegates, at the South Ward Mission building this evening, carriages will convey the delegates to St. John's School House, where a meeting for women only will be addressed by prominent members of the Auxiliary. All ladies are cordially invited. Additional seating accommodation will be provided. A cordial welcome to all ladies at 8 o'clock this evening.

Personal.

The condition of Mrs. Mercer's health is improving.

Dr. Goldsmith, who has been confined to the house for some time with an attack of la grippe, is now almost quite well.

Mr. R. J. Colville, the General Secretary of the Y. M. C. A., is confined to the house with a severe cold.

The Rev. A. McWilliams was somewhat better this morning.

Mr. Bowman, who has been spending his holidays in town, leaves for his home, Rochester N.Y., to-morrow.

Noted Salvationists.

Great Meetings Expected.

Col. McKie, International Travelling Commissioner of the Salvation Army, and Staff-Capt. Plant, his A.D.C., will be in Peterborough on 23rd, 24th and 25th Jan. The former has had a remarkable career, and has travelled all round the globe in the interests of the Army. The latter is possessed of considerable musical ability and is an effective speaker. They will be accompanied by Staff Capt. Southall. Col. McKie is a fine, sonorous speaker, with a ready delivery and fruitful supply of capital stories and convincing arguments. He will tell many incidents of his extensive tour through the world, and of the enormous number of conversions he has seen.

Reform Candidate for Welland.

WELLAND, Jan. 20.—The Reformers to-day nominated James A. Lowell, Niagara Falls South, as their standard-bearer in the approaching election.

OBITUARY.

Death of C. A. Sadleir, the Oldest Barrister in Ontario.

HAMILTON, Jan. 20.—C. A. Sadleir, barrister, is dead aged 67 years. Mr. Sadleir was the oldest practising barrister in Ontario, having been admitted to the bar in 1847 at Kingston, where he was studying law at the same time as the late Sir John Macdonald. In the same year he settled in Hamilton. His son, C. A. Sadleir, was until recently clerk of the Legislative Assembly at Winnipeg, but resigned to enter the church, and is now studying at Wycliffe College, Toronto.

A Veteran Clergyman.

WELLAND, Jan. 20.—Rev. Alexander Kennedy, one of the oldest ministers of the Presbyterian Church, died at the residence of his brother-in-law, Mr. George C. Cowper, here yesterday, aged 88. Deceased was born in Ayrshire, Scotland, and was the first missionary to Trinidad. He came to Canada in 1850 and had charge of congregations at Enniskillen and Dunbarton, being at the latter place 30 years.

Benjamin Scott, London's Chamberlain.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—Benjamin Scott, Fellow of the Royal Astronomical Society and Chamberlain of London, died yesterday. Mr. Scott was born 78 years ago. He resigned the chief clerkship of the Chamberlain's office in 1853 and founded the Bank of London, of which he was secretary until the death of Sir John Key in 1858, when he was unanimously elected to the office of City Chamberlain. He took an active part in education and in 1851 founded the Workingmen's Educational Union.

A Former Perth Jailer.

STRATFORD, Jan. 20.—Robert Kay, for 25 years jailer of Perth, who removed to Steven's Point, Wisconsin, in 1881, died there the other day, aged 87 years.

A Jesuit General.

ROME, Jan. 20.—The Rev. Father Anderledy died yesterday. He was the successor, and sometime coadjutor, of the late Father Beckx, General of the Society of Jesus.

A Missionary Crazed by Loneliness.

RAT PORTAGE, Ont., Jan. 20.—A. S. Thompson, a student of Manitoba College, who has been acting as a Presbyterian missionary at Fort Frances, was brought to town and lodged in jail pending a medical examination. His mental faculties are sadly shattered. He was keeping bachelor's hall on the river, and the dreariness of his surroundings is supposed to have unbalanced his mind.

The Monaghan Grange Hall Matter.

Into the Police Court and Out of It—The Warrant Issued for the Arrest of J. J. Brealy Cancelled by the Police Magistrate.

At the police court this morning there were present several persons from North Monaghan, including Mr. Joseph L. Walton, at whose instance a warrant had been issued charging J. J. Brealy with threatening. The information charged,

"That James Brealy, at the township of North Monaghan, in the county of Peterborough, on the 18th day of January, 1892, did threaten Joseph H. Walton in the words, or to the effect following, that is to say, 'I will draw fire arms upon you,' having in his hand at the time a Winchester rifle."

The warrant called for J. Brealy's arrest. Constable Stewart went out to execute the warrant this morning and found Mr. Brealy suffering from the effects of the use of whips on his person on Monday last as mentioned in a paragraph in the EXAMINER, and he returned the warrant unexecuted, together with the following medical certificate:—

JANUARY 19th.

This certifies that J. J. Brealy is under medical and surgical treatment, and is unable to leave his home.

A. E YELLAND, M.D.

THE WARRANT CANCELLED.

The Magistrate addressing generally those present, who were, with the exception of the two constables, from North Monaghan, said that he was informed that Brealy had been beaten, and that he was now in bed from the consequences of such beating. He said that if he had known the circumstances he would not have issued the warrant. "It was just as legal," he said, "for you to beat Brealy as it was for him to use a gun." He (the magistrate) said it was very wrong for a body of men to act in such a manner. 'Chief, (Rossel), you take no further notice of this warrant—I would have taken no official notice of it if I had known the facts," and the magistrate endorsed the warrant directing that no further proceedings be taken under it. The magistrate then added:

"You can fight your legal rights in some other way than resorting to horsewhips and guns."

The magistrate left the bench and the chief declared the court adjourned, and thus the Ethen Grange Hall dispute stands at present.

Obituary.

The Late John Stirling.

Last night the remains of Mr. John Stirling were brought to town from Havelock, his death having taken place on the train, while he was on his way home from Vankleek Hill, where he was headmaster of the model school of the united counties of Prescott and Russel. The sudden and unexpected demise of Mr. Stirling was a sad surprise to his many friends in Peterborough. He was well known here, having occupied the responsible position of headmaster of the South Ward Public School. He had previously had charge of the public school at Beaufort, and before that he was at Oshawa, where he settled on his coming out from Scotland, of which he was a native, having been born in Galashiels. Mr. Stirling was home for the Christmas holidays, but since his return he has been suffering from the prevailing influenza, and the fatal issue to his illness came while he was on his way home.

Mr. Stirling was a capable teacher, and in the field of sports will be remembered as an enthusiastic cricketer, having for some time been secretary of the Peterborough Cricket club. A few years ago he was united in marriage to an adopted daughter of Mr. Jas. Wesson. She still survives him. The funeral takes place from the residence of Mr. Wesson, 617 Rubidge street, on Thursday next at 3 o'clock p.m.

MARRIED.

CARVER—McKNIGHT—On Wednesday, 13th of January, 1892, at Niagara Falls, by the Rev. John Crawford, B.A., Mr. S. D. Carver, of North Monaghan, to Miss Maggie McKnight of Bradford, Pa., eldest daughter of Wm. McKnight, Esq., formerly of Halibburton.

DIED.

STIRLING.—At Havelock, on Tuesday, Jan. 19th 1892, John Stirling, aged 57 years.

Funeral from the residence of Mr. James Wesson, 617 Rubidge street, on Thursday, Jan. 21st, at 3 o'clock p.m., to Little Lake Cemetery.

INGRAM.—At Ashburnham, on the 20th of January, 1892, Amelia Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Mr. Absolom Ingram, aged 39 years.

Funeral on Thursday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock from the family residence, Lake street, Ashburnham.

Purify the importance of keeping the blood in a pure condition is universally known, and yet there are very few people who have perfectly pure blood. The taint of scrofula, salt rheum, or other foul humor is heredited and transmitted for generations, causing untold suffering, and we also accumulate poison and germs of disease from the air we breathe, the food we eat, or the water we drink. There is nothing more conclusively proven than the positive power of Hood's Sarsaparilla over all diseases of the blood. This medicine, when fairly tried, does exel every trace of scrofula or salt rheum, removes the taint which causes catarrh, neutralizes the acidity and cures rheumatism, drives out the germs of malaria, blood poisoning, etc. It also vitalizes and enriches the blood, thus overcoming that tired feeling, and building up the whole system. Thousands testify to the superiority of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a blood purifier. Full information and statements of cures sent free.

A MONTE CRISTO'S CAVE!

Canadians Said to Have Made a Wonderful Discovery.

Millions of Money in It—Silver and Other Precious Metals Cover the Walls—The Confession of a Dying Convict, Long Since Dead, Pointed out the Way.

From the Chicago "Inter-Ocean" of Jan. 18th

"DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 18.—Special Telegram.—A remarkable story of the discovery in Eastern Ontario of a dazzlingly rich deposit of gold and silver, which was only discovered through the confession of a dying escaped convict, was told here to-day by Harry M. Pousette, a well-know and reliable Sarnia (Ontario) business man, who has just come from the scene of the discovery.

The tale, which is fully substantiated, goes back to the time when Frontenac and other French military pioneers ascended the St. Lawrence and founded the fort and settlement of Frontenac at its source. They found the wild and mountainous country lying back from the river swarming with Indians, and no Indian so poor that he could not show ornaments of gold and silver enough to make a white man's mouth water.

The Frenchmen were dazzled with the display and made every effort to ascertain the source of so much wealth, but beyond vague hints about a mammoth cave lined and roofed with precious metals, they were unable to learn anything.

The whites had forgotten even the tradition when, about thirty years ago, two half-breeds, Jno. Smith and C. P. Meyers, were arrested, charged with making counterfeit Canadian half-dollars. When the experts examined the money they were astonished to perceive that it was made of virgin silver.

When the trial came on the prisoners were committed to the Kingston prison for ten years. Smith soon sickened and died. One morning a guard was found with his head stove in, and five convicts were missing. Four of them were recaptured, but Meyers was lost. After wandering about for several years Meyers was finally fatally wounded by police officers in a fray. Dr. Charles Young attended the wounded man assiduously and was rewarded with a story of the told by the dying man, together with its exact location.

The doctor after Meyers' death, came to regard the story as the raving of a dying man, and although he had taken minute notes on the matter, he ceased to think of following it up. A year or two later, while on a visit to his brother, a law student named A. V. R. Young, of Peterborough, Ontario, the doctor repeated it as a kind of fairy tale. The brother was deeply impressed by it, looked the matter up, and found that the spot indicated was on John Perry's farm, in the township of Barry, in the wildest part of Frontenac county, and not many miles from Peterborough.

Then he confided the matter to Mr. A. P. Pousette, one of the best known barristers in the Midland counties. Mr. Pousette had heard the old tradition, became deeply interested, and as a result of his investigations the Bonanza Mining Company was organized among personal friends of Messrs. Pousette and Young, and operations were begun.

The first thing done was to secure possession of all property included in the convict's story of the cave. Then the men interested made a thorough search, but no cave could be found. A vein of silver was discovered among the rocks, however, which promised a good profit, and mining operations were begun. The vein was near the surface, and workmen were detailed to lay it bare so far as possible and discover its extent.

Early this week the miner ran the vein against a cleft in the side of a rocky hill, which was choked with brush and overgrown with raspberry bushes. Forcing his way through the opening the miner found himself in a narrow passage and descending at an angle of about forty-five degrees. The passage, which grew wider as it progressed, extended downward about 100 feet into the earth.

The safety lamps borne by the explorers scarcely served to illuminate the pitchy darkness and so it was found necessary to procure an electric lamp which was occasionally used at the smelting works. When the current was turned on an extraordinary sight met the eyes of the miners. They found themselves standing upon a floor of rock about forty feet square. Strewn upon the floor were several mining tools, a smelting pot and some worn out moulds for counterfeiting.

Around the walls rude holes were dug, and the remnants of pine torches in some of them showed that they had been used for lighting purposes.

But it was not until the lamp was turned upward that the riches of the cave became apparent. The light shone on myriads of small stalactites glistening with silver, while between them veins of gold and copper and patches of mica and iron pyrites threw back dazzling combinations of colour that rivalled the cave of Aladdin in their magnificence.

About fifty feet from the entrance was a subterranean lake extending as far as eye could reach. A dugout was found upon a shelf of rock and launched. At a distance of 300 feet they found another platform leading into a second chamber. The roof was about twenty feet high and studded with stalactites of pure silver, while springing from the floor were stalagmites of the same metal. Twelve pounds of ore contained $11 worth of silver.

Armed men are guarding the cave. The principal stockholders in the mine are: A. P. Pousette, Q.C.; A. V. R. Young, A. E. Dixon, Edward Brown and J. E. McIntyre, all of Peterborough.

There is enough ore in sight to make them many times millionaires."

Sad—Miserable Companions!

What miserable companions are dull feelings, depressed spirits, irritability, sleeplessness, headaches, pains in the loins and limbs, drowsiness, short breath, furred tongue, stomach troubles and dyspepsia. THE ROYAL SECRETARY.

GEN. SIR HENRY PONSONBY A FAITHFUL SERVANT TO THE QUEEN.

His Manifold Duties—Some of the Demands, Pleasant and Otherwise, Made Upon His Time and His Manner of Meeting Them.

Never in the way but yet never out of the way is the definition that has been applied to a good private secretary. Such men are few and far between. To fill properly the post of a private secretary, even to a private person, requires a great deal of tact and patience, coupled with a rare faculty of self-effacement. It can be imagined, then, how difficult it is to find a man who knows how to discharge the multifarious and important duties of confidential medium between a great sovereign and the world at large, without ever asserting his own personality at all. The difficulty is doubled when the sovereign happens to be a woman and a widow.

The Queen of England, however, has a knack of choosing efficient as well as faithful servants, and she has for her private secretary a man who seems to have been made for the position. The truth is he has had a training for it such as very few men could get.

His predecessor, Sir Theodore Martin, who was the first private secretary the Queen had, never raised the office to half its present importance. He was too much of a clerk and too much of a courtier, and the public always regarded him as a sort of superior flunkey or personal attendant on the Queen, not differing very much in status from the late lamented John Brown.

It was not considered much of an honor to receive a communication from the Queen through him, because he had a way of making it appear to have come from himself, or at all events, from the Queen on his suggestion: and he had not enough of social rank on his own account to make that pleasant.

SIR HENRY PONSONBY.

PONSONBY'S EARLY LIFE.

Sir Henry Ponsonby is very different. He is of noble blood on both sides, being a grandson of the Earl of Bessborough and of Lord Bathurst, and connected in various ways with half the great families of England. Then he is a distinguished soldier, a guardsman, a Crimean hero and lieutenant-general in the army. At one time he commanded a battalion of the Grenadiers and acquitted himself well indeed.

The military service in the corps d'elite gives him a peculiar kind of prestige which no civilian could acquire. Yet his chief experience has been in connection with courts. He entered the army when only seventeen, and when a little more than a boy was appointed aide-de-camp to the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, who, in those days, was more like a monarch than an official.

At the age of twenty-four he became private secretary to Lord Clarendon, one of the most distinguished of Irish viceroys, and he did so well that he kept his position under Lord St. Germaine and Lord Carlisle. He only left Dublin Castle, in fact, to join his regiment before Sebastopol.

On his return from the war his abilities were recognized by his being appointed equerry to the Prince Consort; not a very agreeable or dignified post, but one which was a sure stepping stone to the favor of the Queen, who has never once overlooked good service rendered to her husband.

On the Prince's death Colonel Ponsonby, as he then was, turned soldier again and went to Canada with the guards, but on the death of Sir Theodore Martin, in 1870, the Queen sent for him and offered him the private secretaryship. He was then forty-five, six years younger than the Queen, and a very handsome and attractive man. Court gossips would probably have had a good deal to say about the appointment had not all wagging tongues been silenced by his marrying one of the prettiest and nicest of the Queen's maids of honor.

From that time until now, twenty-one years, he has been her right hand man and one of the best known, though least seen, man in her dominions.

HIS GROWING INFLUENCE.

In former times the keeper of Her Majesty's privy purse, a court official with very responsible and delicate functions, had always held a distinct and separate office; but on the death of Sir Thomas Biddulph in 1873, the Queen conferred it on her private secretary, an arrangement which, while it doubled his work, raised him to a very influential position.

It gave him, in fact, the control of all the inner business of the court, and at the same time brought him into daily communication with the public in a very satisfactory way. Not only is he the paymaster of all those officials, male and female, who are not on the regular pay sheets of the nation, but he is also the sole channel of the Queen's benefactions, which amount to an immense sum in the year. You can hardly pick up a newspaper in England without dropping on some such paragraph as this:

"The Queen has forwarded, through General Sir H. F. Ponsonby, her annual subscription of £50 to the Army and Navy Pensioners' Employment Society, of which Her Majesty is patron."

In addition to those regular subscriptions there are innumerable miscellaneous gifts made in the same way. If a married woman in any part of the empire gives birth to triplets or any larger number of children all at once, and the fact is duly certified, the mother receives by first mail a letter from Sir Henry Ponsonby, enclosing a golden sovereign for each child, with the Queen's good wishes for her new subjects.

If an explosion takes place in a mine in the North of England, and a lot of men are killed, the next morning arrives a telegram or letter from Sir Henry Ponsonby, conveying the Queen's condolences to the widows and orphans and £100 toward a fund for their relief.

SHE KNEW WHAT WAS MEANT.

There is a ludicrous story told about a poor woman whose husband had lost his life at a fire under circumstances of special heroism. The news had not been sent very steadily to the man's home, and there was some doubt there as to the fact of his death. The neighbors were all pressing around the window making inquiries, when a letter ar-

A PET'S VENGEANCE.

Jealousy of Its Master's Bride Leads a Young Lion to Kill Her.

SILVER CITY, N.M., Jan. 19.—A most peculiar instance of jealousy in an animal is reported from a ranch up in the range northwest of this city. A Mexican named Juan Lohez some years ago caught a young mountain lion and raised it as a pet. He had the animal completely under subjugation, and it was as docile with him as a house cat.

Lohez was recently married, and the lion took a dislike to his wife. During the man's absence last week the animal attacked Mrs. Lohez, tore her to pieces, and then fled to the mountains. Lohez has become insane with grief.

More Boodle Charges.

QUEBEC, Jan. 19.—Rumors of further scandals connected with the late administration are circulating. It is stated that a payment of $13,000, which was represented to have been made to a bank in connection with a first loan of the late Government, was actually made to a member of the House of Commons belonging to Montreal, and some say that a great part of it went to the personal account of an ex-Minister. Another story is to the effect that a then member of the House was party to keeping for himself and friends $350 out of a claim of $450. Affidavits are promised in support of this and other charges.

THE BEST FAMILY PILL IN USE

Keep the Works in good order.

NORMAN, Ont., January 15, 1890.
W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville, Ont.
DEAR SIR,—Your "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills" are the best regulator for the system that humanity can use. Life is as the time-piece: frail and delicate are many of its works. A tiny particle of foreign substance adheres to the smallest wheel in the works, and what is the result?—at first, only a slight difference is perceptible in its time-keeping, but wait you; as the obstruction grows, the irregularity becomes greater, until at last, what could have been rectified with little trouble, in the beginning, will now require much care in thoroughly cleansing the entire works. So it is in human life—a slight derangement is neglected, it grows and increases, imperceptibly at first, then, rapidly, until what could, in the beginning, have been cured with little trouble, becomes almost fatal. To prevent this, I advise all to purify the system frequently, by the use of Morse's Pills, and so preserve vigor and vitality.
Yours faithfully,
H. F. ATWELL.

DEAR SIR,—For many years, I have been a firm believer in your "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills." Not with a blind faith, but a confidence wrought by an actual personal experience of their value and merit. My business is such that I spend much of my time away from home, and I would not consider my travelling outfit complete without a box of Morse's Pills. Yours, &c.,

"August Flower"

The Hon. J. W. Fennimore is the Sheriff of Kent Co., Del., and lives at Dover, the County Seat and Capital of the State. The sheriff is a gentleman fifty-nine years of age, and this is what he says: "I have "used your August Flower for sev- "eral years in my family and for my "own use, and found it does me "more good than any other remedy. "I have been troubled with what I "call Sick Headache. A pain comes "in the back part of my head first, "and then soon a general headache "until I become sick and vomit. "At times, too, I have a fullness "after eating, a pressure after eating "at the pit of the stomach, and "sourness, when food seemed to rise "up in my throat and mouth. When "I feel this coming on if I take a "little August Flower it relieves "me, and is the best remedy I have "ever taken for it. For this reason "I take it and recommend it to "others as a great remedy for Dys- "pepsia, &c." ①

Lakefield.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

More snow and splendid sleighing.

A. F. Wood, Esq., M.P.P., North Hastings, was in the village on Friday.

Jas. Saulter, Esq., Toronto, spent Sunday with his friends in the village.

Thos. Bolton, a former resident of the village and who now resides in North Smith near Burleigh, cut his knee with a draw knife a few days before Christmas. He neglected it and blood-poisoning set in. He was taken to the Nicholls Hospital last Saturday, and now lies in a critical condition, his case being considered hopeless.

One of our prominent sportsmen was up the lake shore hunting fox the other day, and while trying to head off the game, he took a short cut over the ice and although a good Presbyterian managed to change in a brief moment to a full fledged Baptist. The water was cold but the sudden immersion fortunately was not followed by any bad effects, a later on after a change of clothes he might have been heard humming to himself as he sat toasting his toes in his bachelor quarters:

"Once I went a hunting,
And had such wondrous luck,
I begged sly old Reynard,
And got a fine big duck!"

The annual meeting of the Smith, Lakefield and Ennismore Agricultural Society was held in the Town Hall, Lakefield, on Friday afternoon. About twenty-five members were present. The auditors' report was presented as follow:—

Seven hundred and thirty entries were received at the last exhibition in Lakefield.

The election of officers was then proceeded with, and resulted as follows:

PRESIDENT.—Mr. H. C. Garbutt.

VICE PRESIDENT.—Mr. R. H. Braden.

HON. DIRECTOR.—Mr. R. C. Strickland.

DIRECTORS.—Messrs. J. G. Galvin, Dr. J. R. Fraser, Chas. Quinn, G. W. Fitzgerald, John H. McWilliams, John Preston, G. W. Mann, Fred Davidson and Wm. Abbot.

AUDITORS—Messrs. A. Fairbairn and Wm. Graham.

THE VILLAGE COUNCIL MEET.

The first regular meeting of the village council for 1892 was held in the town hall on Monday evening, the 18th inst.

Present—W. H. Casement, reeve; Councillors Moore, Lillicrap and Bird, who, having taken the required declarations, were called to order by the reeve.

Minutes of last regular meeting read and adopted

Moved by Mr. Lillicrap, seconded by Mr. Bird.—That the accounts of John Richardson, $1.50, and John Cooper, $8 80, be paid, and that the reeve issue his order for the same.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Bird, seconded by Mr. Moore,—That Messrs. Moore and Lillicrap be a committee to purchase an efficient fire alarm and place the same on or in the town hall as soon as possible.—Carried.

A bylaw to appoint auditors received its several readings and was passed, Messrs. C. J. Blomfield and Dr. D Fraser being appointed.

Quite a long discussion took place on the advisibility of uniting the offices of assessor, collector, constable, health inspector and road master under one man, who would be engaged by the year, and would give his whole time to the incorporation. As each councillor seemed to have a different opinion on the subject nothing was done, and the matter stands until the next meeting, when the standing committees for the year will also be struck.

The council adjourned to meet at the call of the reeve

Cure for A Constipation and Headache

Dr. Silas Lane, while in the Rocky Mountains, discovered a root that, when combined with other herbs, makes an easy and certain cure for constipation. It is in the form of dry roots and leaves, and is known as Lane's Family Medicine. It will cure sick-headache in one night. For the blood, liver and kidneys, and for clearing up the complexion it does wonders. Druggists sell it at 50 cents a package. dw

OBITUARY.

A Relation of Oliver Cromwell Dies in Hamilton.

HAMILTON, Jan. 19.—Mrs. Gabriel Pocock, a relation of Oliver Cromwell, died yesterday. Her husband is also at the point of death.

"Blind Charlotte" Summoned.

HAMILTON, Jan. 19.—Death has removed a familiar and pathetic figure from the streets of this city—Mrs. Charlotte Mead, or "Blind Charlotte" as she was called. Thousands will remember the portly old blind woman who used to sit at the street corners singing hymns and sentimental songs in a quavering voice, and squeezing uncertain and wheezy accompaniments out of an old concertina. In early life Mrs. Mead was the wife of a respectable citizen of Hamilton, but eloped with another man. Her husband married again. She suddenly returned and succeeded in having her husband punished for bigamy. She herself committed bigamy afterwards by going through the form of marriage with Blind George, whose name she took and who also is a professional organ-grinder.

Scion of an Old Family.

NIAGARA FALLS, Jan. 19.—Dr. Robert Stevenson, a member of one of the oldest settled families in Canada, is dead. Dr. Stevenson was the last surviving grandson of Rev. Mr. Addison, the first rector of the ancient St. Mark's Church at Niagara, and also a grandson—on the paternal side—of Sir John Stevenson, the famous composer of the music of many of Moore's melodies. The deceased's brother, Judge Stevenson of Haldimand, died about 4 years ago.

A Hamilton Coal Merchant.

HAMILTON, Jan. 19.—Thomas Myles, the well-known coal merchant, died last evening aged 81. In 1855 Mr. Myles and his brother James went into business together as coal merchants. Two years later James Myles moved to Toronto and Thomas Myles carried on the Hamilton business alone and continued to conduct it down to the present time.

CONTINUATION OF THE PETITION TRIAL YESTERDAY.

A Witness Who Claimed to Have Been Robbed of $8000 by the Conservative Government—J. J. Hawkins to Run in West Huron — Liberal Candidate in Welland.

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 20.—When court opened yesterday John Reid, member of the colored band, gave evidence corroborative of what previous witnesses had stated in regard to various meetings held in the interests of the colored vote. At the second meeting Halpin and Durkin carried in a clothes basket containing about two dozen bottles of ale and passed within a few feet of Mr. Hyman while he was addressing the meeting. Witness said Mr. Hyman could not have failed to observe the beer, and before leaving the meeting he (Hyman) said he would leave them in good hands and hoped they would have a good time.

Peter Birtwistle, jeweler, took an active part in the Italian quarter, but was not an agent of Mr. Hyman's. Had been a Conservative all his life, but in the last election worked for "himself." Had supplied the beer consumed at the Italian meeting, for which he paid about $20. Witness gave C. W. Rudd, a tenant of his, about $40 to spend in getting votes, but no account was to be given of the details of the expenditure. After the nominations, Mr. Hyman canvassed witness, but was told to keep away, which ended the interview. Mr. Hyman had no knowledge of his intention. Witness said a few years ago the Conservative Government had robbed him of $8000. For a time he expected to have this loss made good, but when he found this was not to be he determined to strike back and do his best to defeat the Conservative candidate at the next election.

Mr. Osler desired to know what witness meant by saying that the Conservatives had robbed him.

Witness went on to explain certain money transactions in connection with the building of the military barracks here by which he considered he had been robbed.

John Cowan, hardware clerk, an agent of Mr. Hyman's, was quite intimate with several of the Italians in the colony and did some electioneering among them. Several of the meetings were described. On election day he escorted half a dozen of Italians to the polls, but treated no one on election day.

He Sang "Annie Rooney."

R. H. Dignam, solicitor, one of Mr. Hyman's scrutineers, was at the Italian party held the night prior to the election where he sang "Annie Rooney," and assisted in drinking to Mr. Hyman's health. Did not consider the meeting as political.

Domick Cusolito piloted John Cowan in the colony on the day of the election and saw nothing illegal done.

Charge 40 to 56 includes what is known as the "Irish group."

John McKenzie, a Conservative, told what he knew about a couple of meetings he attended, at which liquor was served by Ed Shea, an agent of Hyman's.

Charge 208 was that Eli S. Jarvis, clerk of the Ninth Divisional Court, lent Thomas Steele, a school teacher at Evelyn, $4 to enable him to drive into the city and vote for Mr. Hyman. This sum has not been repaid.

The Way He Crossed His T's.

A letter was produced dated March 4, which Mr. Jarvis recognized as his writing. This letter requested Mr. Steele to be sure and come to the city and vote; that he would not be the loser. The letter was signed "Mice" and the writing disguised, but the authorship was discovered by a peculiarity in the stroking of the letter "t."

The letter was written entirely on the witness' responsibility.

Mr. Blake submitted that agency was not proven.

Mr. Osler argued that Mr. Jarvis' presence on the platform the evening Mr. Hyman was nominated and at other meetings showed that he was reasonably an agent.

Their lordships decided to hear evidence bearing on Committeeman Niles' conversation with Eli S. Jarvis, and the charge was held open till to-morrow.

An Alleged 25 Cent Man.

Charges 68 to 72 relate to a charge of bribing A. McGinnis, laborer, by M. J. Morkin.

Archibald McGinnis declared he had borrowed 25 cents from some one in Mr. Morkin's barroom the evening before the election but had not been bribed.

Thomas Morkin, hotelkeeper, knew nothing material regarding McGinnis.

The charge will be finished in the morning.

Court adjourned at 6 p.m. until 10 a.m. to-morrow.

A Murderer's Fate.

HALIFAX, N.S., Jan. 20.—The body found some time last winter near Lorne, Pictou Co., is now believed to have been that of Thompson, the Brantree, Mass., murderer, who disappeared a year or two ago and could never be traced.

One Arbitrator Named.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Edward J. Phelps of Vermont, formerly minister to England, will be one of the representatives of the United States on the Behring Sea arbitration.

Electric Cars Burned.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Jan. 20.—The Robinson Electric Street Railway barn, with 35 electric motor cars, was burned yesterday. Loss $100,000.

EDMUND YATES' GOSSIP.

Gloom and Sorrow in the Royal Belgian Family.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—Edmund Yates' London cable letter to The Tribune says:

The two hotels, engaged for the Queen's occupation during her stay at Costebelle, are ready for Her Majesty on 15th of March. The Queen will occupy the first floor of the Hotel Costebelle. The drawing room, dining room and the large private sitting room, all look to the south, but the bedroom has a northern aspect

The Duke of Clarence's death will probably settle the question, which has been much debated of late, as to his brother remaining in the naval service. Under the altered circumstances it is not likely that Prince George will ever go to sea again as an officer on the active list, and, perhaps, its hardly to be expected that he should, but he will be a decided loss to the navy. Directly after the meeting of Parliament addresses of condolence to the Queen, on the death of the Duke of Clarence, will be moved in both houses, in the house of lords by Lord Salisbury and Lord Kimberly, and in the commons by Mr. Balfour and Mr. Gladstone.

The imperial train, which has just been completed for the German emperior and sent to Potsdam for approval, has cost the Prussian exchequer nearly four million marks and has occupied more than three years in construction. Its eleven carriages, connected by corridors, include a study, hung with real gobelin tapestry from Charlottenburg, a saloon, upholstered in white satin, a nursery, a reception room, adorned with marble statuary, an oak dining room, a kitchen and bedrooms for several guests. There is nothing like it in the world, and a great many of the details have been planned by the emperor himself.

The loss of royal favor to which Bishop Wilberforce several times referred in his diary was originally due to his conduct during a bitter controversy which arose out of Dr. Hampden's appointment to the see of Hereford. This, however, was a mere passing cloud for really the secession of the bishop's brother-in-law, Archbishop Manning, to the Roman Catholic Church and the passage-at-arms between Wilberforce and Prince Albert, which arose out of that event, was what sent the former into quasi-disgrace for a number of years and undoubtedly lost him the see of London when Bishop Bloomfield resigned in 1856. The secession of Manning took the court more by surprise, because during the period of Wilberforce's favor he had been untiring in his efforts to procure a bishopric for his brother-in-law. Shortly after that event had been formally announced Wilberforce went to a levee where Prince Albert took him aside and reproached him for having certified Manning to be a sound Anglican divine when he was so earnestly recommending him for a bishopric. The bishop retorted: "Sir, I can assure you if my brother-in-law had been made a bishop he never would have become a Roman Catholic." This reply gave great and lasting offence to Prince Albert, although some years afterward a quasi-reconciliation was brought about through the good offices of Lord Aberdeen and the Queen, who was anxious to make Wilberforce archbishop of York in 1862, and suggested his translation to London in 1868-69.

The first consignment of fresh salmon from British Columbia to Europe, which consisted of 30,000 lbs., from Fraser River, left New York the other day for Hamburg in a cold storage compartment of a German steamer. Frozen salmon from Canada have often been sent to England, but this is the first cargo from the Pacific coast, and if the experiment proves successful a very large trade will result. The rivers of British Columbia yielded nearly 11,000,000 lbs. of salmon during 1891, although it was reported as a bad year.

Harry Gilmore to Fight in Detroit.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 19.—All arrangements for the eight-round go between Harry Gilmore of Chicago and Toronto and Jack Collins of this city, which is to take place here next Thursday night, have been completed and the affair promises to draw a large house. The contest will be fought with five-ounce gloves.

Collins has a great local reputation as a boxer and has stood up before several good men, but has never gone against any prominent pugilist for money. He is undoubtedly the best man of his weight in Michigan.

A large delegation from Chicago will be present and will endeavor to arrange a fight between Ryan and Collins should the latter be successful in his go with Gilmore.

North Bergen Bookmakers Arrested.

GUTTENBURG, Jan. 20.—The constables of the Law and Order League of Hudson county again raided the Guttenburg race track to-day and arrested 10 of the bookmakers. The prisoners were taken to the office of the secretary of the racing association, where justices of the peace were in waiting, who immediately admitted the bookmakers to bail.

The Havana Chess Contest.

HAVANA, Jan. 20.—Tschigorin disappointed the Cubans on Saturday by sending word to the Centro Astariano that he was sick. It will be remembered that he also cancelled the resumption of play on Saturday, the 9th inst. He has thus forfeited his right of absenting himself from play twice. Each player may cancel play three times during the duration of the match. Steinitz opened yesterday the eighth game. Steinitz apparently felt over-confident after winning two straight games, and before the spectators could realise the fact the Russian had assumed an attack which proved fatal to the champion. The latter's play was very weak, and after about 18 moves he looked doomed. Five minutes later the end came, which made the score as follows: Steinitz 3, Tschigorin 2, drawn 3.

HIS FATHER'S GHOST.

Like That of Banquo It Will Not Down, But Pulls the Bedclothes Off a Penitent Son.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Jan 20.—William Coulter was arrested yesterday at the Michigan Sault charged with swearing false evidence when on trial charged with the murder of his father. His confession at the revivalist meeting was put in as evidence and he admitted the charge, stating that he swore falsely. After attending several of the revivalist meetings he could not control himself and had to confess, as it was his only salvation to get to Heaven.

Many people place little credence in the confession, as his confession does not agree with known facts in connection with the tragedy.

There seems to be no question but that the revival meetings have unbalanced Coulter's mind. His trial comes up at the assizes next month. In the meantime he has been remanded to jail.

Coulter says he has never been safe since he murdered his father, as the old man comes every night and pulls the clothes off his bed. His mother died in an insane asylum.

C. D. White Talks.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—C. D. White, president of the Eastern Association, returned from Chicago yesterday. He said that the scheme to place teams in New York and Philadelphia had not been dropped altogether, although the prospects for such clubs just now were not particularly bright. Reach of Philadelphia said that he hadn't decided about the proposed new club in his city, but that while he might give his consent it might not be fair to the League to allow the Eastern to come in there, after his colleagues had paid out $54,000 to get the Wagners out of the way.

Scratched 28 Years

A Scaly, Itching, Skin Disease With Endless Suffering Cured by Cuticura Remedies.

If I had known of the CUTICURA REMEDIES twenty-eight years ago, it would have saved me $200 00 and an immense amount of suffering. My disease (psoriasis) commenced on my head in a spot not larger than a cent. It spread rapidly all over my body, and was under my nails. The scales would drop off me all the time, and my suffering was endless and without relief. One thousand dollars would not tempt me to have it in disease over again. I am a poor man, but feel rich to be relieved of what some of the doctors said was leprosy, some ringworm, psoriasis, etc. I cannot praise the CUTICURA REMEDIES too much. They have made my skin as clear and free from scales as a baby's. All I used of them was $5 worth. If you had been here and said you would have cured me for $200 00, you would have had the money. I looked like the picture (No. 2, page 47) in your book, "How to Cure Skin Diseases," but now I am as clear as any person ever was. Through force of habit I rub my hands over my arms and legs to scratch once in a while, but to no purpose. I am all well. I scratched twenty eight years, and it got to be a kind of second nature to me. I thank you a thousand times.

THE ROYAL FUNERAL.

BURIAL OF THE DUKE OF CLARENCE YESTERDAY.

Wales and Fife Chief Mourners—An Imposing Spectacle With Thousands of Mourners—Short Service in Church—Sandringham Tenants Pall-Bearers.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The body of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale was removed from the parish church at Sandringham yesterday. The weather was fine and cold.

At 9.30 o'clock a detachment of artillery with a draped carriage drew up at the church gates. The gamekeepers and laborers employed on the Prince of Wales' estate, nearly all the villagers residing at Sandringham, with all of whom the dead Duke had been a favorite, stood grouped about the gates. The road around Sandringham Hall to the church was lined with school children.

At 10.15 the bell on the church began tolling, and as the solemn knell rang out upon the wintry air the Prince of Wales and his household, accompanied by his sister Victoria, who had nursed the Duke until his death, entered the church. The carriages in which this party had ridden were followed by three others conveying royal personages.

The Services at Sandringham.

When all had entered the church and taken seats set apart for them, the funeral services were commenced. These were brief, and upon their conclusion the coffin was lifted upon the shoulders of a number of the royal employes and borne from the church. It was placed upon the gun carriage, which was drawn by six horses, and a procession was then formed. The tenantry on the estate of the Prince of Wales and the members of his household acted as pall-bearers.

Following directly behind the coffin came the Prince of Wales and the Duke of Fife on foot. Then came the clergy and afterwards the gamekeepers marching six abreast. Following these came carriages with the Princess of Wales and other royal personages. The rear of the procession was brought up by the peasantry. The whole route from the church to the station of the Great Eastern Railway was lined with spectators, who, as the procession passed, joined in the rear. A guard of honor from the Norfolk volunteers met the cortege at the station. The scene was one of great solemnity.

Tokens of Respect.

All the Government and many private buildings in London had their blinds drawn and flags at half mast. A large number of factories, shops, etc., did no business after 12 o'clock. The shops which remained open displayed black shutters and mourning emblems. All the policemen wore mourning and the bus drivers had crape on their whips.

The Weather Cold and Dismal.

At Windsor the weather was cold and dismal. It snowed during the night and the streets were covered with slush. The shops in the town were closed and the shop fronts along the route followed by the funeral procession were draped with black. The route from Windsor Station to the Castle was lined with guards.

Behind the soldiers there was an immense crowd of people, who patiently waited the coming of the body and the royal mourners. Most all of the people comprising the crowd wore mourning to mark their sympathy with the Royal Family.

The Requiem of the Bells.

At noon the bells began tolling their requiem for the dead, and their solemn tones could be heard through the cold air for long distances up and down the river and in the surrounding country.

The railway station presented a beautiful appearance, willing hands having decorated it with a large number of floral wreaths and palms. The trappings of woe were conspicuous by their absence, not a single decoration of black being seen.

In St. George's Chapel, which is located in the lower ward in the western part of the castle, no alteration had been made except the addition of a few dark grey decorations that were chosen by the Princess of Wales.

The railway carriage in which the body was conveyed from Wolverton to Windsor was lined with purple velvet. In it was suspended a large wreath bearing the letters "A.C." in silver.

Not Transhipped at London.

In accordance with the wish that no public or military procession be held in London the railway officials made arrangements to convey the body to Windsor without transhipping it at London. This was done by means of a branch line connecting the Great Eastern and Southwestern Railways in the outskirts of the city, and consequently the people of London were afforded no opportunity, as they at first expected to have been, of showing their respect for the Royal Family and their sympathy in their bereavement by marching in procession behind the body of the Duke.

At Windsor Station.

The Duke of Edinburgh, the Duke of Connaught, Prince Christian, the Duke of Teck with two of his sons and many foreign representatives assembled at Windsor Station and were in waiting when the Royal train arrived.

At 3.30 the train bearing the remains came into the station. On it were the Prince and Princess of Wales.

Another train which followed immediately after the funeral train conveyed the members of the Prince of Wales' household at Sandringham.

The Prince of Wales wore the uniform of colonel of the 10th Hussars and Prince George was attired in his naval uniform.

The Lord Chamberlain received the members of the Royal Family as they alighted from the carriage and they stood talking together until the coffin was removed from the funeral car.

From His Sorrowing Grandmother.

The coffin was taken on the shoulders of men from the 10th Hussars. It was enwrapped in a silken Union Jack and on it was a single splendid wreath which had been sent by the Queen. A silken ribbon was attached to the wreath on which were the words:

A mark of the tenderest affection and love from your devoted, loving and sorrowing grandmother.

As the detachment of soldiers bearing the coffin walked slowly along the platform a signal was given to a party of the Life Guards on the round tower of the castle and immediately the boom of minute guns could be heard. At the same time the roll of the drum from the massed bands swelled out upon the air and the procession began to move.

The Life Guards had the right of the line and were followed by the bands, which played Chopin's and Beethoven's funeral marches alternately. A detachment of the 10th Hussars and of the Horse Artillery immediately preceded the gun carriage upon which the remains had been placed. On each side of the gun carriage walked guards of officers of the 10th Hussars.

The Duke's Charger.

The charger which had been ridden by the Duke of Clarence saddled and bridled and with the boots of his owner reversed in the stirrups, was led directly after the gun carriage.

The mourners came next. The Prince of Wales, Prince George of Wales and the Duke of Fife led the mourners. Next came the Duke of Connaught, Duke of Edinburgh, Prince Christian, Prince Henry of Battenberg and the Marquis of Lorne. Then followed the Grand Duke Alexis, representing the Czar of Russia; Prince Albert of Schleswig-Holstein, the Crown Prince of Denmark, the Duke of Oporto, brother of the King of Portugal; Prince Frederick Leopold of Prussia, the Duke of Teck between Prince Ernest of Leiningen and Prince Edward of Saxewarine.

Then followed the three Princes of Teck, sons of the Duke of Teck; the Duke of Wurtemburg and Prince Philip of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha.

The Princesses drove from the station by a private road to the chapel.

The procession moved slowly, amid the absolute silence of the spectators, many of whom shed tears as the procession passed.

Father and Brother.

The Prince of Wales and Prince George of Wales were the centre of interest. They bore themselves with manly gravity and neither looked to the right nor the left.

All heads were uncovered during the passage of the funeral procession amidst the serried ranks of thousands of mourners. The universal funeral aspect of the scene was heightened by the dreary weather and by the draperies of black on the houses along the route. In the procession the helmets of all the soldiers and the swords of the officers were draped with crepe.

The charger which walked behind the coffin was heavily caparisoned with crepe.

At St. George's Chapel.

It was nearly 4 o'clock, an hour after the time appointed for the services to begin, when the cortege reached St. George's Chapel.

The clergy and the choir were apprised of the coming of the procession, and they slowly marched down the aisle to the door of the chapel and ranged themselves on either side to receive the body of the Duke.

As the Earl of Latham, the Lord Chamberlain, swung back the crimson curtains at the door, the harsh command to the soldiers to halt and the music of the band of the Life Guards could be heard. As the heavily draped gun carriage arrived opposite the door of the chapel the music ceased and perfect silence reigned. Then there was a sharp command and the coffin-bearers from the Hussars stepped from the ranks and quickly lifted their burden to their shoulders. With bared and bowed heads they mounted the steps and passed within the sacred precincts of the chapel.

As the coffin was carried into the chapel the clergymen, headed by the Very Rev. Philip Frank Eliot, domestic chaplain to the Queen, Dean of Windsor and Registrar of the Order of the Garter, and the Right Rev. Randall Thomas Davidson, D.D., Bishop of Rochester, and the choristers preceded it down the main aisle, singing:

"I am the resurrection and the life."

They were followed by three equerries in scarlet uniform, bearing on cushions the coronet of the Duke and other insignia of his rank.

Then came a small detachment from the Hussars, and behind them was the coffin flanked by 10 officers of the Duke's regiment, the 10th Hussars.

Behind them came the Prince of Wales, Prince George of Wales and the Duke of Fife, who were in turn followed by the Royal personages who had walked behind the coffin from the station.

The coffin was placed by its bearers upon a bier before the altar, and the coronet and other insignia were placed upon it. At the same moment the window in the Queen's gallery, situated directly above the altar on the right, opened, and the Princess of Wales and her daughters, Princess Louise, Princess Victoria and Princess Maud and Princess Victoria May of Teck took seats in the gallery.

As the body was placed on the bier the Prince of Wales as chief mourner stood at the head of the coffin, Prince George of Wales stood on one side of it and the Duke of Fife on the other. Standing in a group near them were the other royal personages.

The Hymns Selected By the Queen.

The services were conducted by the Dean of Windsor, assisted by the Bishop of Rochester. A psalm was chanted by the choir and the dean then read the lesson.

The choir sang hymns which had been selected by the Queen.

After the reading of the lessons the Bishop of Rochester read the sentences beginning:

For as much as it hath pleased—

The Duke's tutor, Canon Dalton, stepped forward and cast a handful of earth upon the coffin. After this the choir sang:

I heard a voice from Heaven.

The Bishop of Rochester read the concluding prayer and the religious ceremony was closed by the singing of Sullivan's anthem:

Brother gone before us and the pronouncing of the benediction by the Bishop of Rochester. At the beginning of the service, which lasted for nearly an hour, a chair was brought for the Prince of Wales, who sat down. He looked greatly fatigued and his face gave evidence of his deep sorrow.

Wales Kneels in Prayer.

As the Bishop of Rochester pronounced the benediction the Prince knelt with his head buried in his hands. When the Bishop had finished the Prince remained kneeling for a short time, and a most impressive silence filled the chapel until he arose.

Then in consonance with the ancient custom Sir Albert Woods, C. B., K. C. M. G., F. S. A., Garter King of arms (the Duke was a Knight of the Most Noble Order of the Garter) in the full insignia and habit of his rank stepped forward and proclaimed the full list of titles of the Prince.

The Prince of Wales, followed by the other royal personages, then proceeded by the private way from the chapel to the castle.

The Princess of Wales could be seen looking mournfully from the Queen's gallery upon the coffin of her beloved son for some time after the services were concluded.

Few Women Present.

There were only a few women in the chapel and they were all seated in the nave.

All the space in the choir under the banners of the Knights was reserved for the distinguished guests, most all of whom were attired in brilliant uniforms and wore decorations that had been conferred upon them by different rulers.

On the altar there was displayed during the service the beautiful gold communion plate, one of the valuable treasures of the chapel.

No daylight was allowed to enter the chapel, which was illuminated entirely by light from numberless wax tapers.

The entire service was marked by a solemn impressiveness that made itself deeply felt by everyone in attendance. Every detail had been most carefully arranged, and there was not a single incident to mar the solemnity of the occasion.

Removed to Memorial Chapel.

During the evening the coffin containing the Duke's remains was removed from St. George's Chapel to Albert Memorial Chapel. Here it was placed between the cenotaph of the late Prince Consort and recumbent figure of the Duke of Albany. The coffin will remain in its present position till Saturday in order that the Queen may be enabled to place a wreath upon it.

After the coffin had been deposited in St. George's Chapel wreaths from the Duchess of Teck and Princess May were placed on it beside the wreath sent by Her Majesty.

Until late in the day floral tributes continued to pour into the castle from every part of the country. Some of them were of such size that it was a difficult task to get them through the doorway of the chapel.

In Westminster Abbey.

Memorial services were held in Westminster Abbey, at which Archdeacon Farrar officiated. An immense assemblage was present at the services, and many persons who were desirous of attending found it impossible to gain admission. Large numbers of men, prominent in public life, statesmen, authors and others, all attired in deep mourning, could be seen scattered here and there among the large congregation.

Services were also held in St. Paul's Cathedral. The Right Hon. and Right Rev. Frederick Temple, D.D., Bishop of London, preached the memorial sermon. There were present at these services 12,000 persons, including Lord Mayor Evans and the sheriffs of London.

The services were most solemn and affecting and many of those present were moved to tears by the eloquent eulogy pronounced by the bishop on the dead prince.

Memorial services were held to-day in all the capitals of Europe.

The Queen, accompanied by Princess Louise, Marchioness of Lorne, attended a special service in the chapel at Osborne House conducted by Canon Duckworth.

The Quebec Commission.

QUEBEC, Jan. 21.—The Royal Commission met at 10.20 yesterday. Mr. Lavoie, local manager of the Banque Jacques Cartier, produced, under protest, a number of checks representing an amount of $11,500, drawn on the bank by Mr. Langlois.

Mr. Philippe Valliere was next sworn. He had an interview with Mr. Mercier on the subject of supplying the Montreal Court House with the necessary furniture. He subsequently drew a contract with the Government.

Mr. Machien of the Treasury Department produced checks endorsed by J.C. Langelier and Mr. Mercier, also a warrant of $321.40, referring to the Temiscouata Railway, 1889, leaving a balance of $68.

Mr. Joseph Boivin, Assistant Provincial Secretary, was the next witness examined as to a check drawn by him for Mr. Demarais, who was not yet elected a member for St. Hyacinthe.

The commission adjourned until Thursday, the 28th, at 10 a.m., to meet in Montreal.

THAT DELAYED DUTY.

In a lengthy editorial article in last evening's impression, the Review comes to the defence of the Mayor and Council in the matter of their neglect to pass a resolution of condolence, and justifies, (so far as the discharge of a duty needs justification), the position the EXAMINER took in criticising the inaction of the Mayor and Town Council. Further justification is afforded by the courteous note of Mr. Dennistoun. We agree with Mr. Dennistoun that "it is to be regretted that a resolution of condolence was not introduced and passed in open council at the inaugural meeting," and "the oversight," he says, "has been rectified" by forwarding to the proper authorities the following letter, which was evidently written under the supervision of Mr. Dennistoun in the absence from town of Mayor Kendry:

To His Excellency the Right Honourable Sir Frederick Arthur Stanley, Baron Stanley of Preston, P C, G C B:

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY.—We have the honor to request that Your Lordship will convey to Her Majesty the Queen and to Their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales the assurance that they have the heartfelt sympathy of the people of the town of Peterborough in the Province of Ontario, in their recent bereavement, and that the death of the Duke of Clarence at a time when he was about to united in marriage with one so universally esteemed, has created the profoundest sorrow in our midst.

We have the honor to be,
Your Excellency's humble and obedient servants,

JOHN R. COBB, Town Clerk. JAMES KENDRY, Mayor.

These facts show that the EXAMINER discharged a public duty in calling attention to a neglect, which was repaired the moment the EXAMINER'S remarks upon the matter became public. Reference would have been made on Monday to the neglect of the Mayor to refer to the event in question in his inaugural address, but for the hope that so glaring a neglect would have been remedied at the evening meeting. The Review refers to the Mayor of Toronto being equally negligent, evidently forgetful that the Mayor had the acknowledgment from the Prince of Wales of the receipt in London of a message of condolence before the inaugural address of the new mayor was given. In connection with this matter we only discharged the legitimate functions of a public journal; we dealt with the facts provided by the Mayor and town council, and have nothing to recall.

Climatic Eccentricities Favorable to Disease.

A Warning to our People—Canada's Health Shield.

Climatic eccentricities in Canada have, to a very great extent, contributed to the spread of disease in our principal cities and towns; and, as a consequence, the death rate is steadily increasing. It is worth of note, that the majority of the young and middle-aged who fell by the hand of death, were predisposed to disease.

Typhoid fever, malarial fever, grippe, neuralgia, rheumatism, prepared up by peculiar climatic changeable weather, and further developed by unsanitary surroundings, have claimed thousands in Canada during the past years.

This is certainly a warning—a sermon of truths for young and old, rich and poor. The duty of all at this time is to see that perfect health is maintained, so that prevailing sickness cannot with impunity choose its victims. The nervous system should be in such a condition as to enable the body to successfully resist all attacks. We should carefully guard against feelings of depression and headache, nervous debility, sleeplessness and irritation. These symptoms are sure forerunners of disease and suffering, and should be driven off without delay.

All may succeed in their endeavours to keep healthy and robust, and at the same time ward off sickness, if Paine's Celery Compound is used. It should be in every home in Canada at the present time, where any ailments or troubles exist. No other remedy can safely protect and shield our people from prevailing dangers. Paine's Celery Compound is truly a noble friend to the weak and all who are predisposed to disease; and can, under all circumstances, be thoroughly relied on. When it is faithfully used, people have no need of a physician's services, as they have in Celery Compound a power and an agency which regular medical prescriptions can never compete with.

THE WEST PETERBOROUGH

Agricultural Society's Annual Meeting.

Annual Reports Read—Election of Directors and Officers.

The annual meeting of the above society was opened on Wednesday in the council chamber. President Geo. E. Elliott occupied the chair. There was a very small attendance, although the society is such an important one to the farming community.

The secretary read the notice convening the meeting, after which the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

REPORTS FROM OTHER SOCIETIES.

Reports were read from the South Monaghan Agricultural Society, showing a balance in hand of $74.60. Their president is Mr. Wm. Rutherford and the secretary Mr. George L. Fair. Also from the Smith, Ennismore and Lakefield Society, showing a deficit of $58.93. Their officers are: President, Mr. H. C. Garbutt, and secretary, Mr. M. S. Dean.

The reports were received, after which the directors' report was read by the secretary.

DIRECTORS' REPORT.

To the Members of the West Peterborough Agricultural Society:

GENTLEMEN,—Your directors again beg leave to submit to you a report of the progress of the society during the past year.

The annual exhibition was held on the 21st, 22nd and 23rd of September, and was a greater success than any we have had for the past three years, in the number of entries, quality of the exhibits and also financially, having this year a small surplus.

We had the good fortune to have Prof. H. H. Dean, of the Ontario Agricultural College, with his travelling dairy and cream separator, to give practical instructions in butter making, and it proved to be one of the features of the fair. The thanks of the society are due to James Stevenson, M.P., through whose influence we were favoured with a visit from Prof. Jas. W. Robertson, Dominion Dairy Commissioner, of the Experimental Farm, Ottawa, who is acknowledged to be one of the best authorities on all portions of the dairy or dairying on the continent. The Professor gave a short address to the people in the open air, which was listened to by a large number. The Professor also judged the dairy breeds of cattle, and it is needless to say to the entire satisfaction of all concerned.

Your directors still find a great difficulty in offering a liberal prize list and providing the attractions (for which the people seem to crave more than anything else) with the limited amount of money at our disposal after the Horticultural and Township Societies have drawn their $140 each from the $700 Government grant received by them. Another drawback we find is the distance of the grounds from the town with no easy or cheap way of getting to and from the fair. This prevents a great many visitors from going down, thereby causing a loss in gate receipts, but we hope that by the time our next exhibition is held the last named trouble will have disappeared, as there is every prospect of the electric street railway being built and in operation, which will be a boon to the citizens and to the general public, and we expect to profit largely by it by increased gate receipts, as we think then we might have the main buildings and grounds lighted up and have a night exhibition, which would be visited by large numbers who cannot get down in the day time.

The thanks of the members are due to the Town Council for a grant of $100, and to the citizens of the town for the liberal subscriptions donated by them to the funds of the society, which shows that the people of the town appreciate the efforts being put forward in behalf of the exhibition by your directors.

Appended you will find the Treasurer's financial statement, the auditors' report and the list of members for 1891.

WM. COLLINS, Secretary.

January 20th, 1892.

An Omemee Bridal Happily Celebrated.

On Wednesday afternoon the 6th of Jan. at 4 p.m. a wedding was quietly celebrated at the residence of Mr. McQuade. Miss Maggie McQuade was united in marriage to Mr. Joseph Hall, son of Mr. Hall, of the township of Ops. The marriage ceremony was performed in the presence of a large number of the immediate friends by Rev. Mr. Thompson of Omemee. The groom was supported by Mr. Joseph A. Porter, of Baltieboro, while the duties of bridesmaid were performed by Miss Annie McQuade, sister of the bride. The bride was the recipient of a large number of handsome and valuable presents. At the conclusion of the ceremony an elaborate wedding supper was discussed by a large number of guests who were present. The newly wedded couple received the hearty congratulations of their friends, and later started for their future home in Ops. Miss McQuade during her brief residence near Omemee, made a large number of friends, whose congratulations and best wishes follow her and her husband for a happy life.

Of the Lisbon Medical Company is now at Toronto, Canada, and may be consulted either in person or by letter on all chronic diseases peculiar to men. Men, young, old or middle-aged, who find themselves nervous, weak and exhausted, who are broken down from excess or overwork, resulting in many of the following symptoms: Mental depression, premature old age, loss of memory, bad dreams, dimness of sight, palpitation of the heart, emissions, lack of energy, pain in the kidneys, headache, pimples on the face or body, itching or peculiar sensations about the scrotum, wasting of the organs, dimness, specks before the eyes, twitching of the muscles, eyelids and elsewhere, bashfulness, deposits in the urine, loss of will power, tenderness of the scalp and spine, weak and flabby muscles, desire to sleep, failure to be rested by sleep, constipation, dullness of hearing, loss of voice, desire for solitude, excitability of temper, sunken eyes surrounded with leaden circle, oily looking skin, etc., are all symptoms of nervous debility that lead to insanity and death unless cured. The spring or vital force having lost its tension, every function wanes in consequences. Those who through abuse committed in ignorance may be permanently cured. Send your address for book on all diseases peculiar to man. Books sent free sealed. Heart disease, the symptoms of which are faint spells, purple lips, numbness, palpitation, skip beats, hot flashes, rush of blood to the head, dull pain in the heart with beats strong, rapid and irregular, the second heart beat quicker than the first, pain about the breast bone, etc., can positively be cured. No cure, no pay. Send for book. Address M. V. LUDON, 24 Macdonell ave., Toronto, Canada.

Makes Flesh and Blood.

When the system is all run down and there seems to be no hope of obtaining nourishment for the body by the ordinary process of food supply and digestion, when the body is sinking fast, then is the time to use Miller's Emulsion of pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil. It always works wonders, because it is a flesh and blood maker, and contains all the constituents for nourishment found in wheat, in fact Miller's Emulsion is a perfect "staff of life" and has saved and cured thousands. In big bottles, 50c. and $1, at Peterborough Druggstores. dw

A Fact

WORTH knowing is that blood diseases which all other remedies fail to cure, yield to Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Fresh confirmation of this statement comes to hand daily. Even such deep-seated and stubborn complaints as Rheumatism, Rheumatic Gout, and the like, are thoroughly eradicated by the use of this wonderful alterative.

Mrs. B. Irving Dodge, 110 West 125th street, New York, certifies:—

"About two years ago, after suffering for nearly two years from rheumatic gout, being able to walk only with great discomfort, and having tried various remedies, including mineral waters, without relief, I saw by an advertisement in a Chicago paper that a man had been relieved of this distressing complaint, after long suffering, by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I then decided to make a trial of this medicine, and took it regularly for eight months. I am pleased to say that it effected a complete cure, and that I have since had no return of the disease."

Mrs. L. A. Stark, Nashua, N. H., writes: "One year ago I was taken ill with rheumatism, being confined to my house six months. I came out of the sickness very much debilitated, with no appetite, and my system disordered in every way. I commenced to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla and began to improve at once, gaining in strength and soon recovering my usual health. I cannot say too much in praise of this well-known medicine."

"I have taken a great deal of medicine, but nothing has done me so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I felt its beneficial effects before I had quite finished one bottle, and I can freely testify that it is the best blood-medicine I know of."—L. W. Ward, Sr., Woodland, Texas.

The Great Singer Manufacturing Company.

Convention and Conference of District Agents—Meeting for the Exchange of Ideas—Taking a Leaf from the Farmers' Institute Book—A Very Successful Conference.

Yesterday, the concluding meeting of a two days' convention, the first of its kind, of sewing machine agents of the Singer Manufacturing Company, was held at the Snowden House Hotel. The Kingston district extends from the Limestone City to Bowmanville on the west, and as far north as Haliburton. This meeting of agents was called by Mr. J. Laishley, of Kingston, the manager of the Kingston district, and at his mandate there assembled a large number of the hustlers who keep the needle threaded in thousands of homes in this district. Besides the agents there were present, Mr. R. H. Morton, General Manager for Canada; Mr. J. McLeod, Inspector for Canada, Mr. G. Clyne, Superintendent of the Canadian Manufacturing Department, and branch managers L. C. Laishley, Barrie; H. Laishley, Stratford; and J. Laishley, Kingston.

The following agents were present at the convention:

D. W. Little, agent at Kingston; J. Fraser, Napanee; G. H. Rankin, Picton; W. E. Vandervort, C. W. Vandervort, G. W. Mabee, Belleville; W. Milne, Brenton; J. Gillard, Cobourg; J. Kroill, Bowmanville; J. Porter, Ballyduff; J. McQuade, Omemee; J. Hoe, H. Wellington, Lindsay; R. Baker, Ingoldsby; L. Hill, Bobcaygeon; M. Moore, Bancroft; J. Vandervort, St. Ola; J. Chambers, Madoc; J. Joiner, Flinton; W. Mitchell, Campbellford; W. Laishley, checker, E. Harkin, checker, Kingston; J. Galbraith, agent, J. W. McCreary, E. A. English, Peterborough; R. Huggins, Lang; W. Russell, Peterborough; W. Quinn, Lakefield.

WHAT THEY DISCUSSED.

At the meetings Mr. Laishley, the district manager, occupied the chair, and he presided over a meeting of shrewd sharp energetic hustlers. There were spirited discussions and free interchanges of ideas and experiences between the agents, as to the best modes of canvassing, selling, collecting and other matters of special interest to the agents as a body, on the same lines that farmers conduct their institute meetings, and the results of the conferences will be the acquirement of a large amount of practical knowledge that will better fit him for his work, by every agent who attended the convention. During the convention delegates paid a visit to the office of Mr. J. N. McCreary, general agent for the Peterborough district, to inspect and admire his mode of managing the business of the agency which he conducts with the help of his assistants, with such success.

The Singer Manufacturing Company is an immense concern. It has five large factories, four in the United States and one in Canada, at Montreal. The factory at Elizabethport, New Jersey, is capable of turning out five complete machines each minute of the working day, and the Montreal factory turns out 150 per day or 900 per week The wood-work of the machines for the Montreal factory are made at Woodstock, there being a contract of $50,000 per year.

On Tuesday evening the assembled agents had a banquet at the Snowden House, which was a very enjoyable affair.

Evangelistic Services.

The bitter cold of Tuesday evening did not prevent the Baptist church from being filled at the service. Mr. Meikle gave a short preparatory address upon certain things which often preceded a true revival. He dwelt particularly upon Providence and prayer. He referred to a revival which took place in Winnipeg some years ago, at the time of the financial panic which followed the boom. He stated that the epidemic in our town was a startling providence, which we might hope would be followed by a true revival. The sermon was upon Noah preparing the ark. An analogy was drawn between the case of the antediluvians and our own case. Then God declared that He would destroy the world by a flood; now He declares that He will destroy it by fire. In the one case as in the other it is unbelief that leads men to neglect to avail themselves of the provision made for their salvation. The meeting last evening was in the Baptist church at 7.45 o'clock.

The Baptist church was filled with an attentive congregation at the service last evening. Mr. Meikle's address was directed especially to church members, with the view of leading them to consider their spiritual state. He showed that in the case of those who became the disciples of Christ when He was on earth, certain things were renounced, certain sacrifices were made. So now true Christians must place Christ first, renouncing the world, the flesh and the devil. He pointed out the importance of exercising church discipline and the good results which followed from this, both to the one disciplined and to the other members of the church. A number of enquirers remained to the after meeting.

The meeting this evening will be in the Baptist church at 7.45 o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to all to be present.

Ashburnham School Board

Held their First Meeting of the Year—New Members Elected—Accounts Presented.

The first meeting of the new Ashburnham School Board was held last evening. There were present—Messrs. E. A Peck, Frank Adams, J. T. Wright, P. Glover, R. Sheridan and A. D. Russell.

Messrs. R. Sheridan and A. D. Russell made the usual declaration of office.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS

Mr. E. A. Peck was then elected chairman for the ensuing year; Mr. A. Ingram, secretary treasurer; Mr. J. Dupe, caretaker.

ACCOUNTS.

The account of E Courtney for repairing desks, amounting to $37, was passed, together with a number of smaller accounts for supplies, etc.

NIGHT OF MEETING.

The Board then decided to hold their meetings on the first Tuesday in each month, commencing with March.

The Board adjourned.

Police Court,

THURSDAY, 21st Jan., 1892.

Wm. Ralph was arraigned for being drunk. He asked for leniency on the ground that he had been to see a friend and had one glass, which took effect on him. He was discharged after being cautioned by the court and thanked his worship with a salaam as Oriental might have envied.

"Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria"

The Whitney Mockridge Company.

Doubtless the severe weather, the prevalence of bad colds and the uncomfortable condition of the opera house combined to bring out a too small audience to listen to an excellent concert by the Whitney Mockridge Concert Company. The first number was a duo, Hemobel's "Gondoliers," which was well sung but the concerted numbers of the programme fell short in pleasing effect of some of the solo numbers. The after concerted selections were "In the Woods" by Miss Varona and Mr. Mockridge, and trio from Verdi's "I Lombardi," by the vocal members of the company which closed the programme. Miss Belle Botteford, the violinists, made her first appearance in De Beriot's "Fantasie de Ballet" and created a very favourable impression, being warmly recalled; though in this selection she omitted to evoke the feeling and expression the selection demanded, she played with great delicacy and sweetness. She possesses a remarkably fine fiddle and in her subsequent selections—Sarasate's "Spanish Dance," and Wieniawski's "Mazurka," she used it to excellent effect. Her bowing is graceful and delicate, her stopping correct, and her tone very limpid and pure. Her harmonics were unusually clean. She is a very pleasing performer, and was well received, all her numbers being encored. Her recall selections were brief, but were played very daintily and very sweetly. Miss Alida Varena, the soprano of the company, sang in a voice that showed the result of training, "My Lady's Bower," and in the second part a double number Tosti's "Venetian Song," and Yradier's "La Paloma." These were sung much better than her first essay, and she was recalled, singing in very fair style "Jamie Dear." Mr. Whitney Mockridge made his first number, 'O Vision Entrancing," which he sang magnificently. His fine tenor voice was in good fettle and sounded resonant and clear in every part of the register, the smooth evenness of his sostenuto and the clearness of his falsetto being admirable. He sings with great refinement of taste. He made his triumph in the singing of "Come into the Garden, Maud," and showed great sympathy and dramatic power in the interpretation of Balfe's superb setting of Tennyson's sweet and graceful little poem. He was enthusiastically recalled and responded on both occasions of his appearance, his last encore song being another of Balfe's, from the "Bohemian Girl," "Then You'll Remember Me," in even better style, if possible, than the principal number. Mr. Beresford, the grand basso of the company, sang twice and his singing created great enthusiasm. His first number, "The Creole Lovers' Song," by Buck, won him the high favor of the audience, which he more than justified in his second song, Jude's "Deep in the Mine." His bass is magnificently resonant and smooth and musical, and his methods, expression and enunciation make listening to his grand singing a delightful treat. He was recalled both numbers. Altogether the singing of the leading vocalists, Mockridge and Beresford, gave the greatest delight and satisfaction, and the concert as a whole was a delightful evening of enjoyment.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

The annual meeting of the Association will be held in their hall to-morrow night. The secretary's and directors' reports will be presented and the officers for the ensuing year elected.

Makes the Weak Strong

The marked benefit which people in run down or weakened state of health derive from Hood's Sarsaparilla, conclusively proves the claim that this medicine "makes the weak strong." It does not act like a stimulant, imparting fictitious strength from which there must follow a reaction of greater weakness than before, but in the most natural way Hood's Sarsaparilla overcomes creates an appetite, purifies the blood, and, in short, gives great bodily, nerve, mental and digestive strength.

That Tired Feeling

"I derived very much benefit from Hood's Sarsaparilla, which I took for general debility. It built me right up, and gave me an excellent appetite." ED. JENKINS, Mt. Savage, Md.

Fagged Out

"Last spring I was completely fagged out. My strength left me and I felt sick and miserable all the time, so that I could hardly attend to my business. I took one bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it cured me. There is nothing like it." R. G. BEGOLE, Editor Enterprise, Belleville, Mich.

Worn Out

"Hood's Sarsaparilla restored me to good health. Indeed, I might say truthfully it saved my life. To one feeling tired and worn out I would earnestly recommend a trial of Hood's Sarsaparilla." MRS. PHEBE MORRELL, 80 Brooks Street, East Boston, Mass.

THE AUDITORS' SALARY QUESTION.

At the meeting of the council on Monday evening a discussion took place with regard to the amount paid the auditors for the years 1890 and 1891. Mayor Kendry stated that last year $75 was paid the auditors, and also the year previous, though the bylaws appointing the auditors stipulated $50 for their services, thus reflecting upon the integrity and watchfulness of the late Mayor, Finance Minister Davidson and Treasurer McGill. The remarks of several of the councillors seemed to be made with a view to letting themselves down and throwing the blame of carelessness and neglect of duty on the above named three gentlemen. The new members are to be excused from their lack of personal knowledge of the facts, but not for their haste in making insinuations which, had they known the circumstances, they could not have done. Not so with Mayor Kendry, whose lack of knowledge of the business of the council was lamentably betrayed by his remarks on the subject. The facts are these: In 1888 Mayor Stevenson nominated Mr. J. J. Hall as one of the auditors, and it was moved by Mr. James Kendry, seconded by Mr. Thomas Kelly, that James Stratton, Esq., be the other auditor, and the salary fixed at $75.00 each. This resolution was adopted and embodied in the bylaw appointing these gentlemen as auditors. In 1889, the resolution stated that the salary be the same as last year, namely $75, and this amount appeared in the bylaw. Resolutions to the same effect, fixing the salary of the auditors the same as the previous year, namely, $75 were adopted in 1890 and in 1891. But for some reason best known to himself, the late town clerk filled in the bylaw with $50. The Mayor, Mr. Davidson and the Treasurer having the resolution of the council fixing the salary of the auditors "the same as last year," namely $75, and the auditors having accepted the office on the understanding that the salary was to be of the same amount as that of the previous year, the sum of $75 for each auditor was paid, and no member of the council who had even the most perfunctory knowledge of the affairs of the town, and of the acts of the council in which he assisted, should be for a moment at a loss how to explain how $75 instead of $50 was paid the auditors of '91. Very few outside the mayor and Messrs. Davidson and McGill are aware of the difficulties that the auditors had in 1888 in completing their audit, and if it had cost the town that year a considerable larger sum than $75.00 the town could not have made a better investment, as irregularities were at that audit put a stop to, which, if they had continued as they had been found, would have resulted in no inconsiderable loss to the town. A town auditor is the last official who should be underpaid, and none but the most competent and reliable should be selected, and councillors who are equally responsible for the amount paid the auditors, should not attempt to crawl out of a responsibility that their own acts created.

Quarterly Meeting of Toronto Diocesan Board.

What is believed to be a very successful beginning was made yesterday to the quarterly meeting of the Toronto Diocesan Board of the W. A. The proceedings were what may be termed a purely local enterprise, that is to say, an addition, by special invitation of the Peterborough branch to the usual proceeding of such gatherings. The visiting delegates were met at the various trains by the Reception Committee, which was composed of the following ladies: Mrs. Geo. Rubidge, Mrs Kadina Smith, Mrs. Pope and Miss Barber, after which the South Ward division of the W. A. gave a most successful and pleasant reception and bountiful tea, which was enjoyed by about one hundred ladies and several gentlemen. 'Busses then conveyed those present to St. John's for evening prayer, after which a large company of women assembled in the school house for evensong and a conference.

THE CONFERENCE.

After singing, Bible reading and prayer, the President of the Peterborough branch, Mrs. E. A. Smith, gave a short address, stating the object of the meeting—the increasing of activity and devotion of all in their work in spreading the knowledge of the Gospel, and the deepening of their spiritual life.

Mr. Broughall, of Toronto, then read an earnest and comprehensive paper on Bible reading, and a short discussion on the subject followed.

Miss Willgress, of Cobourg, read a paper, short and to the point, on "A Woman's Work in the Parish," which she divided into two heads—what to do, and how to do it." After singing a hymn a discussion followed on this paper.

A paper entitled "Heartiness in Action," was now read by Miss Stewart, of Orillia, and much appreciated by all. The two grand motives for heartiness in action she held before her hearers were: their Christian calling first; next, the speedy coming of our Lord.

The last paper for the evening was read by Mrs. Cummings, of Toronto, on "Personal Influence," which, she pointed out, was an universal gift, exercised not only by speech, but in life, and many ways were pointed out in which her hearers made their influence felt for good or evil.

After a short discussion and the announcement of next day's programme, the meeting was closed by singing a hymn and prayer conducted by Mrs. Broughall.

LIST OF DELEGATES.

The delegates present were the following: FROM TORONTO — Mrs. Howard, Mrs. Baker, Mrs. Cummings, Miss Baldwin, Mrs. Playter, Mrs. Broughall, Mrs. Edgar M. Clarke, Miss Tilley, Mr. Skae, Mrs. Mitchell, Mrs. T. D. Barnett.

SPRINGFIELD ON THE CREDIT —Miss Schreiver.

NEWCASTLE —Miss Wilmot.

THURSDAY'S SESSION.

This morning at 10 o'clock the delegates and members assembled in St. John's church where Holy Communion was celebrated. The service was conducted by the Lord Bishop of Mackenzie River, who preached an excellent sermon which was listened to with rapt attention by the congregation.

TO DAY'S SERVICES.

This afternoon the business meeting is for women only, and held in the Sons of England Hall. This evening a public missionary meeting is to be held in St. John's church, commencing at 8 p.m. The chair will be taken by the Rector, Rev. J. C. Davidson, and the Lord Bishop will give an address.

MORE ARRIVALS.

The following lady delegates have arrived in town to-day, in addition to the list printed above:—

TORONTO—Miss Osler.

MILLBROOK—Mrs. Needler.

LAKEFIELD — Mrs. P. Strickland, Mrs. Warren, Mrs. Lillicrap, Mrs. Tate, Mrs. Dinwoodie, Mrs. Amos, Mrs. Burdee, Miss Attwood, Miss Trail, Miss J. Strickland.

ST. JOHN'S, CAVAN—Miss Seney, Mrs. Jackson.

Peterborough's Loyalty.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

DEAR SIR.—I would be glad to know whence the questionable taste that prompted the full masting of the flag on the St. John's church yesterday, whilst the poor Duke of Clarence lay yet unburied, and contrary to the expressed wish of the Royal authorities that all flags should remain at half mast until sundown on Wednesday, 20th inst. This action is on par with that of our town council. Truly we are a loyal town.

Yours truly,
A SON OF ENGLAND.

Proposal to Send Soldiers' Over the C.P.R.

MONTREAL, Jan. 21.—It is believed that the War Office in England is contemplating a new departure in utilizing the route of the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. This time it is expected that a trial will be made of the suitability of the route for soldiers, and it is not unlikely that one of the regiments at present on foreign service in Hong Kong or elsewhere will, at the expiration of their term, be returned via Canada.

Belonged to Sydenham.

OWEN SOUND, Jan. 21.—Donald McArthur, the Canadian stabbed to death at Corinne, near the Michigan Sault recently, was a son of Mr. Peter McArthur of the Lake Shore road, near Annan. He was spending the winter in the lumber woods. The body arrived home yesterday.

Killed by a Tree.

EXETER, Ont., Jan. 21.—This morning Fred Penwarden, aged 21 years, son of Thomas Penwarden of Usborne, was killed while felling trees in the woods.

Found Dead.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 21.—Joseph Sharkey of this city, boiler inspector of the C.P.R., was found dead at Moosejaw last night. Heart disease supposed cause.

To Oppose Ouimet.

OTTAWA, Jan. 21.—The Minister of Public Works, Hon. J. A. Ouimet, will be opposed in Laval by J. O. Pelland, a barrister.

The Peel Election.

BRAMPTON, Jan. 21.—The writ for the Peel election was received yesterday. Nominations are fixed for Feb. 4 and election Feb. 11—not Feb. 4 as previously announced.

FRIGHTFUL STORM.

Terrible Loss of Life and Property in Hong Kong Due to Storm.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 21.—Advices by steamer state that the most destructive storm experienced at Hong Kong in years occurred the night of Dec. 3.

Chinese crafts suffered severely. It is believed 300 vessels, including a Chinese junk with a large number of people and the Norwegian bark Aaron foundered or were driven ashore and wrecked.

A number of large vessels were damaged by colliding. The loss of life and the money value of the wrecked vessels has not been determined.

MULDOON CAUGHT.

James John Failed to Elude the Posse in Search of Him.

BUFFALO, Jan. 21.—James J. Muldoon, the Toronto "steerer" of Chinamen to this country, who escaped from a United States marshal at Spraker's Station Monday night, was recaptured by a posse and taken to Albany, where he will have to stand trial at the United States district court now sitting there.

Scrip and Medals for Mounted Police.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 21.—In the Northwest Assembly yesterday a resolution was adopted that a memorial be presented to the Governor-General in Council praying that medals be issued and scrip be granted to all officers, non-commissioned officers and men of Northwest Mounted Police Force who were members of that force at the date of the outbreak of the rebellion of 1885, and to all volunteers who were enrolled under and attached to said Northwest Mounted Police Force on same basis as that on which medals and scrip had been granted to the militia of Canada.

Several Wholesale Houses Badly Damaged —The Loss Over $150,000.

MONTREAL, Jan. 21.—At 9 o'clock last night fire broke out in the stone building at the corner of Victoria-square and Craig-streets, occupied by Mills & McDougall, wholesale woolens; A. M. Fisher & Sons, importers, and Evans, Sons & Mason, coal and wood merchants. The fire burned till midnight, and damage amounting to $150,000 was occasioned.

Still Another Blaze.

At an early hour yesterday a fire broke out in the stone building at the corner of Foundling and Port-streets, occupied by McLean & Campbell, George McBean & Co., J. E. Hunsicker and Leonard Bros. The loss will reach $60,000.

COLONEL McKIE, THE INTERNATIONAL TRAVELLING COMMISSIONER.

The International Travelling Commissioner

Of the Salvation Army Will Arrive Here Saturday—He Will Hold Three Days Meetings—Short Sketch of His Life—His Foreign Travels.

Colonel McKie, the International Travelling Commissioner is due to arrive here on Saturday, and expects to hold meetings on Saturday, Sunday and Monday. He will be accompanied by his A. D. C. Staff-Captain Plant, who was formerly known in the ranks of the "Army" as "the musical wonder," being quite a genius in the way of playing upon different musical instruments.

The following sketch of the career of Colonel McKie is taken from the War Cry, and may perhaps be interesting to the readers of this paper:

HIS CONVERSION.

Thomas McKie was saved at Gateshead, and from the first of his soldier-days, his words were of fire and his influence great.

After five months' soldiership, Capt. Edmonds (now Colonel), suggested the work. This resulted in a visit to the General at London. The General was afraid that he was too much of a swell, but turning and facing him abruptly, said, "You ought to do something for God with those eyes of yours." He was accepted and sent out as Lieutenant; this was in 1880.

HE COMMENCED WORK.

When stationed at the far-famed Bristol Circus two thousand people used to attend the Sunday morning knee-drill, and tidal waves of salvation swept over the place for months, and hundreds of the lowest of the city of Bristol were led to the Lamb of Calvary.

At Sunderland he announced that he would talk to fifteen thousand people on the town moor. The papers took it up, and asked who he was to draw fifteen thousand people. But it came to pass, and some wonderful conversions were recorded. The Victoria Hall, Sunderland, holds four thousand people. One night, when he talked from "He came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance," over forty people got saved. This sort of thing happened continually. During his last three nights there the largest buildings were packed, thousands crowded the streets, blocking the traffic, and over one hundred and twenty souls sought salvation.

The world-famed Icehouse, Hull, came next. Here he stayed ten months; hundreds were converted. When he farewelled, there were a thousand soldiers in the march. His stay at the Grecian theatre, London, was an unparalleled success. On some Sundays as many as ninety and one hundred souls would be crying to God for mercy at once.

HE WAS PROMOTED.

In 1884 he was appointed A.D.C. to the London district, and soon afterwards promoted to major and secretary to Colonel Nicol for the London division.

In 1885 he was appointed vice-principal of the training homes, under the commandant. He was promoted to colonel in 1889, and subsequently to the charge of the important Scottish division, which position he held with credit until broken down by the malarial fever.

He has in his career seen untold thousands over twenty thousand souls crying to God.

His work in Africa, Australia, New Zealand and California speaks for itself.

HIS COLONIAL TRAVELS.

With reference to his work in the other colonies we here quote extracts from his own account, published in All the World, and entitled "Travels and Triumphs under the Southern Cross." Speaking of New South Wales he says:

Our work in this Colony is under the command of Brigadier Rothwell, an officer of long standing in the English field, transferred to Australia some twelve months ago. There are 117 corps, 300 field officers, 12 staff officers, 5,000 soldiers, Rescue Homes, Prison Gate Homes to accommodate 126 inmates respectively, with prospects as bright as any field of labour I know of in this great Salvation Army. One month in a territory like this is not much when you want to do a big stroke on the lines of soul-saving; still, it was all the time allotted to us, and we made the best of it. During the month we travelled 3 000 miles, held 80 meetings, and saw 773 souls at the penitent form seeking salvation.

HIS RECEPTION AT SYDNEY

is thus graphically described:—

After bandying banjos, baggage and so forth out of the car I to the arms of the affectionate Colony War Office staff, we were seen parading merrily down the principal street of the city, a mighty throng with banners and bands innumerable. A wall of human beings stood on either side taking us in all the way round. I have not at my command a sufficient flow of language to adequately describe that procession; however, we shall try to give you a faint idea. First of all, a band of mounted cavalry pranced gaily along followed by a host of soldiers. The Postal Reform Wing came up in the shape of a dray piled with Prison Gate Brigade men, another swing of soldiers, while a printing press in operation made the inhabitants stare open mouthed! The Commanderess, Colonel Perry and your humble servant, occupied a War Chariot, while the New South Wales Brigadier rode a piebald pacer. Far back as the eye could reach stretched a line of uniformed soldiery moving steadily along with cheery song, joyous shouts and timbrels. The turn out of the Rescue lasses was superb. A huge life-boat, set upon wheels, drawn by four horses, was filled with Rescue lasses. Suitable texts were emblazoned upon its sides, and Adjutant Cartner stood in the bow with a life preserver in her hand, typical of the work they are engaged in.

A SUMMARY OF HIS WORK in Australia is given as follows:

Summing up our five months' work, we have travelled in the Colonies alone six thousand miles, visited eighty places where the Blood-and-fire flag waves, held two hundred and sixty indoor meetings, two hundred and sixty open-air meetings, and had three thousand two hundred people at the penitent form for salvation and purity of heart, making an average of twelve people at the mercy-seat for every meeting held for five months. To God be all the glory.

It is Well Known.

Doctors Recommend it with Pleasure.

Thousands of our Canadian families are ready to sound the praises of Harvard Bronchial Syrup, and extol its many virtues. Where used it has proved swift, sure and efficacious in removing all affections of the throat arising from sudden colds. Its action is almost instantaneous; it is soothing in its effects, healing soreness and irritation; and its gives a strength and elasticity to the throat and bronchial tubes that no other remedy can give. Harvard Bronchial Syrup never fails in giving prompt and satisfactory results. Our doctors take pleasure in prescribing it, and speak favourably of it.

The L.A.W.'s Annual Meet.

WASHINGTON Jan. 20.—The local division of the League of American Wheelmen, through its finance committee, is making every effort toward raising a guarantee fund of $2500 in order that the next annual meeting of the League may be held in this city. The meeting of the General Assembly, composed of the state officers of the organization, will be held at Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 13, and the question as to where the next meet will be held will be decided then.

Sport in General.

A meeting of the clubs that will form the Low Western Association has been called for Thursday at the Wellington, Chicago. There will be no Central Association after all.

Patsy Doody is dead. Over 50 carriages, says The New York News, filled with relatives, mourners and admirers followed his remains to Calvary Cemetery, and the sporting element was well represented.

Cure for Constipation and Headache

Dr. Silas Lane, while in the Rocky Mountains, discovered a root that, when combined with other herbs, makes an easy and certain cure for constipation. It is in the form of dry roots and leaves, and is known as Lane's Family Medicine. It will cure sick-headache in one night. For the blood, liver and kidneys, and for clearing up the complexion it does wonders. Druggists sell it at 50 cents a package. dw

Keep the Works in good order.

NORMAN, Ont., January 15, 1890.
W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville, Ont.
DEAR SIR,—Your "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills" are the best regulator for the system that humanity can use. Life is as the time-piece: frail and delicate are many of its works. A tiny particle of foreign substance adheres to the smallest wheel in the works, and what is the result?—at first, only a slight difference is perceptible in its time-keeping, but wait you; as the obstruction grows, the irregularity becomes greater, until at last, what could have been rectified with little trouble, in the beginning, will now require much care in thoroughly cleansing the entire works. So it is in human life—a slight derangement is neglected, it grows and increases, imperceptibly at first, then rapidly, until what could, in the beginning, have been cured with little trouble, becomes almost fatal. To prevent this, I advise all to purify the system frequently, by the use of Morse's Pills, and so preserve vigor and vitality.
Yours faithfully,
H. F. ATWELL.

DEAR SIR,—For many years, I have been a firm believer in your "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills." Not with a blind faith, but a confidence wrought by an actual personal experience of their value and merit. My business is such that I spend much of my time away from home, and I would not consider my travelling outfit complete without a box of Morse's Pills. Yours, &c.,

"German Syrup"

A Cough and Croup Medicine.

For children a medicine should be absolutely reliable. A mother must be able to pin her faith to it as to her Bible. It must contain nothing violent, uncertain, or dangerous. It must be standard in material and manufacture. It must be plain and simple to administer; easy and pleasant to take. The child must like it. It must be prompt in action, giving immediate relief, as childrens' troubles come quick, grow fast, and end fatally or otherwise in a very short time. It must not only relieve quick but bring them around quick, as children chafe and fret and spoil their constitutions under long confinement. It must do its work in moderate doses. A large quantity of medicine in a child is not desirable. It must not interfere with the child's spirits, appetite or general health. These things suit old as well as young folks, and make Boschee's German Syrup the favorite family medicine.

The Royal Secretary.

rived bearing the royal arms. The woman tore it open, glanced at its contents, and exclaimed: "Oh, yes, poor Jim, poor Jim. It must be true, because Sir 'Enry Ponsonby's wrote to say 'Er Majesty congratulates me and sends me five pound!" She meant "condoles with me," but she was too agitated to read the words, though she understood them well enough.

If these instances are multiplied by many hundreds of infinite variety some idea may be gained of the way in which Sir Henry Ponsonby is known to the people as the distributor of the Queen's bounty.

CARE IN CHARITY.

But for that very reason it is all the more necessary for him to be prompt and searching in his inquiries. The Queen has set a wise and truly humane example in positively refusing to give anything to promiscuous charity, which simply means encouraging fraud and bringing discredit on real benevolence, and the keeper of the privy purse shows his ability quite as much in what is refused or ignored as in what is granted.

When the riots occurred in the west end of London some years ago, and numbers of foolish people hastened to subscribe great sums for the so-called "unemployed," the Queen would not give a shilling. Sir Henry Ponsonby made careful inquiries, with the result that the usual letter and enclosure never appeared. The radical papers howled and blustered, but the Queen does not care a straw for that sort of unpopularity. Attacks were made on the royal family and the court officials; but it all made no difference.

Her Majesty's royal purse remained tightly clasped, and all the rich people taking their cue from her, the "unemployed" fund was a failure, to the greatest satisfaction of every one who had sense enough to see that it was only a premium on violence and pauperism.

HER ONLY ADVISER IN THIS.

In all such matters as these Sir Henry Ponsonby is the Queen's direct and only adviser. He has to get his information how and where he can, but he must get it somehow, without any delay, and be ready to advise decisively, yes or no, and to give a reason for his advice. The Queen has a temper of her own and is very stiff in her opinions, and sometimes Sir Henry's views on money matters do not please her at all. She would give where he would withhold and she would withhold where he would give. But he never gives in and she is sensible enough to see that he is much more likely to know what is right than she is.

The very few mistakes she has made in her benevolence has been when she has acted against Sir Henry's advice or allowed herself to be got at by some weak minded woman with no knowledge of the world.

GILDED SLAVERY.

The post of private secretary to the Queen is, after all, little better than gilded slavery. He has a snug house allotted to him within the precincts of St. James' Palace, where his wife and family live, and he also has a separate establishment at Windsor Castle. But wherever the Queen is, whether in London, or at Osborne, or at Balmoral, or on the Continent, he has to be, and from early morning until late at night, he is at her beck and call. The Queen is a hard worker, with very methodical habits, and she never spares any of her employes.

She is an early riser, and often before breakfast Sir Henry Ponsonby is sent for to go through the letters that have arrived by the first mail or by special messenger, and by ten o'clock the regular business of the day is in full swing, the Queen looking into everything herself, asking innumerable questions, requiring minute explanations of every subject, often having the leading newspapers read aloud to her, and discussing each item of her huge correspondence in a sharp, peremptory way.

The whole morning is thus occupied, with the result that, while the Queen goes for a drive or attends some public function in the afternoon, Sir Henry Ponsonby is hard at work in his office, with a bevy of trained clerks despatching letters or other communications, preparing replies to addresses and getting rid of the load of business piled up in the morning. Every single communication from the Queen to anybody else, except such as are strictly official or strictly domestic, goes through his hands.

He also conducts all the confidential relations between the Queen and the Ministers or other great officers of state, up to the point where they can be taken over by departmental officials, and he is largely employed, especially of late years, in the Queen's family affairs.

DELICATE DUTIES.

It is no secret that the members of the royal family, male and female, young and old, British and foreign, do not always get on very well together. There are jealousies and dislikes and unpleasantness of many kinds, sometimes dramatic in their character. It is Sir Henry Ponsonby's duty to know all about these, to acquaint the Queen with them, according to his discretion, and himself to act on behalf of the Queen in numberless instances, a mediator, peacemaker or censor. Many a time, therefore, when he has had a hard day's work and a hurried dinner, and would gladly spend a quiet evening with his children or at his club, he is summoned to the Queen's private apartments to receive instructions about some domestic mission, which keeps him busy in the most unpleasant way until midnight.

The truth is, he has become a sort of indispensable, what the Germans call a "providenz," in the royal circle, and has shown so much tact and good feeling and unvarying honesty of purpose that the most conflicting royalties look on him as their guide, philosopher and friend, well knowing that whatever he says is pretty sure to be approved sooner or later by the Queen.

THE SECRETARY'S PAY AND PREROGATIVES.

Sir Henry Ponsonby is a smart, well-preserved, military looking man of sixty-six always dressed with exquisite taste, though with a good deal of style, and possessed of such polished manners and such a suave and dignified bearing that nobody can help being strongly attracted to him. Like all the people most closely attached to the Queen, he is very poorly paid for the work he does. He receives altogether about $10,000 a year, with a house rent free at St. James' Palace, and, of course, free quarters wherever the Queen is. But he has a considerable income of his own and his wife has means, and their position at court has advantages altogether apart from pecuniary ones.

They are in the very inner circles of the best society without any of the burdens of grandeur, and their children have excellent prospects in life open before them. Their eldest daughter, Alberta Victoria, the Queen's godchild, made a brilliant marriage quite recently, and the presents that poured in from all quarters, even from several European sovereigns, were almost equal in splendor to those at a royal wedding.

The Queen herself made a special journey to London to attend the ceremony—a thing she has seldom ever done—and the first name witnessing the marriage of the private secretary's daughter in the register of the Guards' chapel is the bold, stiff signature of "Victoria R. and I."—New York Tribune.

ALLEGED CONFESSION OF JACK THE RIPPER.

Said to Have Made Known His Crimes to a Priest in the Confessional—A Duel Over the Scene in the French Chamber of Deputies.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—A royal commission is to investigate the now almost forgotten Whitechapel murders. A correspondent is informed that the death of a Catholic priest in the east end of London has placed some important revelations in the hands of the police. There can be no doubt that the priest, under the seal of confession, died possessed of information that might have led to the arrest of the murderer or murderers of the wretched women known as "Jack the Ripper's" victims. That the priest had qualms of conscience regarding the sanctity of confession, even in connection with such atrocities, is evinced by the sealed packet he left behind him addressed to Sir Edwin Bradford, chief of London's police department. On the package was inscribed, in the dead priest's handwriting: "This is to be opened after my death—my lips must never reveal it."

GRIP'S RAVAGES.

The Extent of the Epidemic in England—Statistics of Mortality.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The returns of the Registrar-General tell a story of the ravages of grip more eloquent than any amount of sensational newspaper description of the epidemic. The statistics cover 33 of the principal towns of the Kingdom, containing a population of 10,185,736. The...ow that the mortality for the week just ...d was 33 per 1000, compared with 28.... in 1000 during the previous week. The increase in some towns seems incredible. In Brighton the death rate increased from 37.2 to 51.5; in Liverpool, from 36.3 to 42; in London, from 32.8 to 40; in Norwich, from 31 to 40.1; in Portsmouth, from 36 to 57; and in Wolverhampton, from 35 to 48.1. There were 186 fewer births and 1193 more deaths in London than the average. The number of deaths in London due primarily to influenza rose from 95 to 271, besides 63 due secondarily to that cause. The deaths in the metropolis from primary diseases of the respiratory organs rose to 1248. There were only 1.3 hours of bright sunshine registered in London during the week.

Abbas Holds a Reception.

CAIRO, Jan. 21.—The Khedive, Prince Abbas, held a reception at the Abdin palace. There were a great number of visitors, whom Prince Abbas, who wore a black dolman with gold facings, received affably and simply. Every one was struck with the resemblance of the young Khedive to the late Tewfik Pasha. He is small of stature, has regular features and a kind and noble expression.

Fight With Swords.

PARIS, Jan. 21.—M. Dolpech, a Republican, who boxed the ears of M. Castelin, a Boulangist, during the scrimmage in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday, was instantly challenged. The fight came off with swords this morning. M. Dolpech was wounded in the arm. M. Castelin was not hurt.

Henri Rochefort, the Boulangist leader, in reply to an inquiry telegraphed him by M. Lauer as to whether he should challenge M. Constans, Minister of the Interior, for striking him yesterday, or whether he should resort to prosecution, has telegraphed as follows:

Men of honor do not fight with thieves or pimps; nor do they sue them in courts where there is no justice and the magistrates are only valets.

TUPPER ILL.

The High Commissioner Down With Grip—The New Assistant Adjutant-General.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—Sir Charles Tupper, the Canadian High Commissioner, is ill with influenza.

Colonel A. North has been appointed Assistant Adjutant-General of Canada, in succession to Col. Goldie.

MOULDERS STRIKE.

They Declined to Accept the Terms of the Stove Founders.

HAMILTON, Jan. 21.—The Moulders' Union has decided to take decisive action on the proposition of the foundrymen to reduce wages 10 per cent. on piece work, and 25 cents per day on day work. They have resolved to resist the proposition. This decision was come to last night at a meeting of the union.

The six stove-founding firms interested are the Gurney Company, Bowes, Jamieson & Co., Copp Bros., Burrow, Stewart & Milne, the Laidlaw Manufacturing Company, and the D. Moore Manufacturing Company. When the shops are opened they will be run independent of the union. About 170 moulders are affected.

No Local Option in Harwich.

BLENHEIM, Ont., Jan. 21.—The local option liquor bylaw was not voted on in township of Harwich yesterday, on account of the township council being served with an injunction preventing the vote on legal flaws in the framing of the bylaw. The council will withdraw the vote rather than fight it in court.

Defeated in Blenheim.

BLENHEIM, Ont., Jan. 21.—The local option liquor bylaw was voted on yesterday in the town of Blenheim and defeated by 23 majority.

SOUTH AMERICAN SPORT.

FURTHER UNPLEASANTNESS IN THE LAND OF THE DICTATOR.

Prisoners Escape From a Fort, Capture Several Companies and Soldiers and Their Forts and are only Dislodged After Gunboats are Brought into Play.

RIO JANEIRO, Jan. 21.—Yesterday evening 160 prisoners confined for various offences in Fort Santa Cruz, situated on the east side of the entrance to the harbor of Rio Janeiro and two miles south of the city mutinied and succeeded in overpowering and disarming the guards and soldiers stationed at that place. Armed with weapons taken from their former guards the insurgents, who were all sympathizers with the deposed dictator, De Fonseca, advanced upon Forts Pico and Lage, overcame the soldiers on duty and took possession of the two forts and all munitions of war which they contained.

The Government officials hurried all their available forces to the scene of the uprising. The troops were so placed as to surround, on the land side, the forts held by the rebels, while the Brazilian warships which were in the vicinity were stationed so as to guard the side of the forts which faced on the harbor.

A concentrated attack was then made upon the forts, which were re-captured. The leader of the insurgents blew out his brains when he saw capture inevitable.

OBITUARY.

Death of S. B. Burdett, M.P. For East Hastings, at Belleville

BELLEVILLE, Jan. 21.—Mr. S. B. Burdett, M.P., died yesterday.

[Samuel Barton Burdett, Q.C., LL. D., was born in Hastings county, Sept. 20, 1843. He was educated at Albert College, where he completed his classical and preliminary law studies and was articled at Michaelmas term, 1863. He began the practice of law at Belleville in 1867. He has since then been known as one of the foremost jurists in Eastern Ontario. The deceased was a member of several Parliaments and had always been a Liberal in politics. For some years Mr. Burdett has suffered from consumption, and his life has been the despair of the doctors for a long time past.]

Dorn, the Master of Music, Dead.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—Heinrich Ludwig Egmont Dorn, the great German composer, is dead, aged 87 years. He was a German by birth and went to Berlin when a young man to study music. At that time Rahel, Heine, Mendelssohn, Klingemann, Marx, Spontini, Devrient, Moscheles and Reisiger were there, and Dorn had ample chance to learn. He was for many years editor of musical papers.

Deaths in the Queen City.

TORONTO, Jan. 21.—Death is busy in the city. Mrs. Maughan, the wife of Assessment Commissioner Maughan, succumbed to a severe attack of la grippe last evening. She was in the 60th year of her age and had looked forward to celebrating her golden wedding next week. The deceased lady, who was most highly esteemed, was granddaughter of Colonel Drummond and niece of Captain George Drummond, who was killed at the storming of Windmill Point in 1837. Mrs. Maughan's death is the more distressing to her family and friends owing to the fact that her husband and daughter remain in a critical condition.

Mr. Henry Pierce Harrison, manager of China Hall, died yesterday at his residence, 150 Indian-road, of typhoid fever. He had been sick for not more than a fortnight, and the tidings of his death came to his business friends most unexpectedly. The deceased was one of the heirs of his late uncle, Mr. Glover Harrison, the founder of China Hall, and has carried on the business since the death of his uncle, at the old stand. He was married and leaves a widow and children to mourn his untimely decease.

The deaths are announced suddenly, at Galt, of Mr. James Hogg Dalgleish and his wife, Margaret Hogg. Mr. Dalgleish hailed from Yarrow, at which historic place in his early days he was personally acquainted with such notables as Hogg, the sweet singer of Ettrick; Laidlaw, Sir Walter Scott and others whose names are world-renowned. He had the honor of joining with Hogg in the famous Poet's Games and was perhaps the last survivor of the mourners who attended the funeral of Sir Walter Scott. Mrs. Dalgleish was a niece of the Ettrick Shepherd. Her father, David Hogg, the poet's brother, was flockmaster at Abbottsford, on which estate Mrs. Dalgleish was born and brought up. She frequently saw Sir Walter Scott. She witnessed his funeral and saw his daughter Ann leave Abbottsford, all alone and in tears, never to return.

One of the oldest residents in the city died at his late residence at 198 University-street. Robert Yorston came to Muddy York in 1836, and for some years occupied a position in the old Bank of Upper Canada. Being obliged to give up his situation on account of ill-health he went to New York and afterwards re-crossed the Atlantic to his native land. After remaining there for some years he came again to this country in 1851 and took up his residence in St. John's Ward, where he continued to live until his death. For 24 years he filled the position of looker in the Custom House. He was in politics always a staunch Reformer, and voted for the Hincks-Morin Government. He was born in 1812 in Rousay, Orkney, and was therefore 80 years of age. The funeral takes place to-day.

A Tuscola Fire.

STRATHROY, Ont., Jan. 19.—About 11.30 last evening fire broke out in the brick store owned by O. H. Fall, and occupied in lower flat by J.C. Watson, grocer, and upper flat by Dr. Fetton, dentist. Mr. Watson's goods are a total loss, insured in British American for $300. Dr. Fetton's office furniture total loss; insurance light. Building entirely burned inside, but the walls were not much injured. Insured in Norwich Union for $4000.

HIS WHISKERS MAD.

Restaurant Waiters Kick at a New York Innovation.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Waiters in restaurants and hotels are up in arms because they have been asked to shave off their mustaches and whiskers. "We are already obliged," said one disgusted waiter, "to give our tips to the head waiter and spend half our wages at the bar to keep on the good side of the proprietor, and now they demand our whiskers. That is too much and we must rebel." A meeting of waiters was held to discuss the matter.

East York Agricultural Society.

MARKHAM, Jan. 21.—East Riding of York Agricultural Society met yesterday and elected these officers: President, Alfred Mason; vice-president, James Lawrie, jr., William Clark. Directors—S. Rennie, Frank Mason, W. H. Hall, Hugh McGill, R. G. Armstrong, W. D. Reesor, John Miller, William Milliken, William McDonald. Treasurer, W. H. Hall; secretary, James J. Barker

Should Have Remained in Canada.

CHICAGO, Jan. 21.—Andy Anderson returned to Laporte, Ind., from Sarnia, Ont., to visit his mother. He had been absent three years. His arrival was followed by his arrest for stealing $2000 worth of goods from freight cars on the Nickel-Plate line.

A Broken Leg and Death.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Jan. 21.—Alexander McLeod, aged 28, broke his leg and was taken to the hospital, where he died. The remains were shipped to Ripley, Ont.

Other sufferers from cold in the head and catarrh have been promptly cured, why not you? Capt. D. H. Lyon, manager and proprietor of the C.P.R. and R. W. & Co. car ferry, Prescott, Ont., says: I used Nasal Balm for a prolonged case of cold in the head. Two applications effected a complete cure in less than 24 hours. I would not take $100 for my bottle of Nasal Balm if I could not replace it. 1w

PETROLEUM TRAINS COLLIDE WITH TERRIBLE LOSS OF LIFE.

Death of a Well-Known Astronomer—The Birmingham Bombmakers Reported to Have Confessed That Their Appliances Were Intended for Use in Russia.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 22.—Two trains loaded with petroleum collided on the Trans-Caucasian Railway at Tiflis yesterday. A number of persons were killed. The petroleum ignited after the collision and everything was consumed. Six charred bodies have already been found.

The Striking Cabmen of Paris Receive Plenty of Material Sympathy.

PARIS, Jan. 21.—The strike of the Urbaine cabdrivers which has been going on since Jan. 1 has taken an odd turn. Eighteen hundred Johns have stopped work in consequence of the exactions of the company, which requires them to turn in 23f. 75c. every night for the hire of its cabs.

The men hope to bankrupt the company, which has a capital of 25,000,000f. and can hold out for two months longer. Meanwhile, however, it is losing 25,000f. a day by the strike.

It seems impossible for the company to accept the offer of the drivers to pay 15f. a day for the cabs, as the first cost of the vehicles and horses is 17f.

The strikers are enabled to continue their fight by means of subsidies received from the Johns in the employ of the rival companies. Each of these drivers contributes 1f. a day to the fund, an easy matter, as the earnings of the non-Urbaine men are much increased by the strike.

The Paris Municipal Council has voted a sum of 10,000f. for the strikers, who have now 80,000f. at their disposal. The fight may be a long one, though it is a case of sous against francs.

Constans Would Not Fight.

PARIS, Jan. 22.—M. Laur, the Boulangist deputy, who was struck by M. Constans, Minister of the Interior, during the stormy scene in the Chambers yesterday, determined to seek revenge for the blow inflicted upon him and yesterday sent him a challenge to fight a duel with pistols at 20 paces. Constans refused to receive the seconds, saying he did not intend to place all his lifetime at the disposal of Laur. Laur immediately wrote a letter to Constans repeating the insulting language he had used in the Chamber of Deputies.

Bomb-Throwers Confess.

BIRMINGHAM, Eng., Jan. 22.—The Anarchists who were arrested at Walsall on Jan. 7 and the others who have since been taken into custody were again in the Walsall police court yesterday.

The chief constable retold the story of their capture and announced that he had a statement made by Deakin, the man arrested in London, which incriminated all the prisoners. This statement, he said, would be produced later.

It was reported that the document in question was a confession that the bombs found at the residences of the prisoners were intended to be used in Russia.

The further hearing in the case was adjourned until Friday.

Surgical Institute of Indianapolis on Fire—Hundreds of Cripples Endangered.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 22.—The Surgical Institute of this city, where hundreds of cripples are under treatment, is burning. The inmates are screaming for help and great loss of life is feared.

The feet of one boy who was forgotten were so badly burned that the flesh fell from the bones.

A lady physician, Mrs. Dr. Barton, is one of the victims.

Fire at Meaford.

MEAFORD, Ont., Jan. 2.—Yesterday fire destroyed the bakeshop occupied by J. G. Grant and the buildings occupied by R. Pelstrop, furniture dealer. Little was saved. Seven hundred dollars insurance on Grant's contents and $1000 on building, and $2300 on Pelstrop's shop and contents.

Bradford High School Burned.

BRADFORD, Ont., Jan. 22.—Last night the High School building in this village was destroyed by fire. The cause of the fire is unknown. Loss about $5000.

THE U.S. BARLEY TARIFF.

BUFFALO MALSTERS RESOLVE TO PETITION CONGRESS.

To Reduce the Duty On Canadian Barley from 30 to 10 Per Cent. Per Bushel—Strong Speeches in Support of the Change.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Jan. 22.—The maltsters of this city say they have been nearly ruined by the McKinley duty of 30 cents a bushel on Canadian barley.

The Merchants' Exchange adopted resolutions asking Congress to reduce the tax to 10 cents per bushel and let the maltsters make a living.

Mr. John B. Manning, one of the largest maltsters in the country, was the first speaker. He said that it was a mistaken idea that the value of Canadian barley has any influence at all on the value of barleys in United States markets.

Mr. John Otto read an article from The New York Press, headed "Canadian Annexation Must Come," supporting the theory on that subject of Prof. Goldwin Smith. "Gentlemen," he said "declaim against this high duty on Canadian barley. They want a reduction. The way to accomplish that, in my judgment, is to ask Congress to advance it, and then it will not be very long before barley will come to this country free."

"If we are to wait," said Mr. Kennedy, "until the United States annexes Canada, we will have a long time to wait. Barley dealers in this state are actually suffering because Canada barley is prohibited."

W. W. Sloan, one of the most prominent maltsters here, and a Republican, says his business is ruined, and every maltster is in the same fix. "The McKinley bill," he said, "cut off the Canada barley. We ought to have 3,000,000 bushels of it here now, but I don't suppose there is a bushel. When we went to Washington to oppose the 30-cent tariff in the McKinley bill we found no sympathy."

At Chicago, June 21.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The Democratic National Committee will call the National Convention to meet on June 21, just two weeks later than the Republican convention on June 7.

The convention will be held at Chicago, the Windy City securing the choice on the 15th ballot.

Rev. Joseph Cook for President.

BOSTON, Jan. 22.—The announcement from the west that the Prohibitionists of that section are in favor of the nomination of Rev. Joseph Cook as the cold water candidate for President has created considerable interest here.

KISSES FOR A QUARTER.

How Money Was Raised for the Church and the Gossips Were Horrified.

DURAND, Mich., Jan. 22.—There is a split among the members of the Lutheran Church in the town of Burns, near here, over a mode of raising money which was introduced at a social last night. The affair was given by the young ladies, and it was announced that the girls had a great surprise in store for the good people.

The social was given in the church parlors, and they were thronged when the time came. Across one end of the room was a curtain. For an hour the guests chattered after the old-fashioned church sociable style. Then the curtain was suddenly withdrawn. There in a row stood six of the prettiest girls in the congregation, blushing and giggling, each bearing upon her bosom a placard, on which were the words: "You may kiss me for 25 cents."

It was 15 minutes before the device began to work, but when it did the silver quarters fairly showered into the aprons of the young ladies' circle. Old men and young eagerly rushed to the front to exchange coins for kisses.

The show lasted only a short time when the curtain was again drawn. Then the storm burst. Somebody thought it was not quite proper; somebody else insisted that it was decidedly improper.

The critics were largely of the feminine gender and did not include any of the pretty girls. The social finally dispersed with several members in a huff.

CORSET WAR.

Accordingly Dr. Porter Didn't Measure the Normal School Young Ladies.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 22.—The Superintendent of the Normal High School of this city issued orders to several hundred young lady pupils to come to school this morning without corsets. The order was followed with an explanation that Dr. William Townsend Porter, director of the physiological laboratory of Washington University, would be on hand to-day to take their measures in their stocking feet and without stays.

Dr. Porter proposed to secure statistics such as are kept in Germany and other European countries for the purpose of obtaining the normal measurements and chest expansion for the different ages, so that an individual on being measured may be physically criticised according as she or he approaches the normal, and the tasks thus be regulated by the condition of the pupil.

The young ladies had no objection to the system, but they were determined not to take off their corsets or submit in school to the embrace of the yellow tape. Accordingly when Dr. Porter arrived at the Normal to-day he found that the young ladies were not prepared to be measured.

President Barthold of the School Board sustained the young ladies, and said that if Dr. Porter wanted those statistics he could have them later by a lady physician.

The Dual Language Question.

REGINA, Jan. 22.—There was a hot fight in the Legislative Assembly over the dual language question, and Mr. Haultain, the Premier, moved that it is desirable that hereafter special proceedings be recorded and published in English only.

Mr. Prince of St. Albert moved a carefully prepared amendment, dwelling on the great services rendered this country by French-Canadians and stating that their rights should not be interfered with.

The vote was taken and the amendment to it was defeated by 24 to 4. The main motion was carried on the same division.

No Discrimination.

OTTAWA, Jan. 21.—The Government has received assurances from the Imperial Government that the new reciprocity treaties between the United States and the West Indies involve no discrimination against Canada. The imperial policy admits of no treaty which allows discrimination against British or colonial goods in British or colonial markets.

THE CARDINAL AT REST.

IMPOSING FUNERAL SERVICES IN BROMPTON ORATORY.

Vast Crowds of People in Attendance to Pay a Last Token of Respect—"He Was Good to the Poor"—The Bishop of Newport Makes a Prediction.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—The funeral services over the remains of Cardinal Manning were held in the Brompton Oratory yesterday. Admission to the oratory was by ticket only, for it would have been utterly impossible for the structure to contain a hundredth part of the vast crowd who were desirous of paying a last token of respect to the dead prelate.

Notwithstanding the miserable weather conditions prevailing, the city being shrouded by fog, the crowd began to gather in the vicinity of the oratory at an early hour. It was composed largely of workingmen and their families.

"He was good to the poor," people in the crowd were heard to exclaim. Hundreds of times was this repeated through the vast crowds.

At 5 o'clock this morning matins and other services for the dead were said in the oratory, where the body had been lying in state. When the solemn Mass of Requiem was commenced, the oratory was filled with notable personages representing the church, the state and all political parties.

The Queen and Prince and Princess of Wales were represented by high members of their households. All the ambassadors of foreign powers were present. The coffin reposed in front of the altar. It was enveloped in a black pall ornamented with a gold cross, crimson cords and a fringe of bullion. Surmounting the coffin was the hat of the cardinal. The altar was draped with black, the only ornament visible being a solitary gold cross.

The Right Rev. John Cuthbert Hedley, Bishop of Newport and Menevia, preached the funeral sermon.

FUNERAL AFTERMATH.

Weariness of the Prince of Wales—The Queen at Osborne.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—After the funeral the Prince of Wales, in parting with the three Ministers, admitted that he was intensely oppressed and weary. He had a hard day. Guests who had the last glimpse of him before he retired concur in saying that he appeared to be worn and ill and that the overstrain was telling upon him. He had been on his feet from early in the morning personally overseeing details of the preparations at Sandringham.

Memorial services were held in every important city in England and the colonies. In Bristol there was such a crush of people in the cathedral that many fainted and had to be removed, while outside many women had their dresses nearly torn off and dozens of persons were injured in trying to secure admission. At the Portsmouth and other royal dockyards, in the garrisons at Gibraltar and in Malta, wherever the British flag floats, signs of mourning were displayed, special services were held, governors, officers and troops paraded and minute guns were fired. The corporations of all cities attended the church services in their robes of office.

The Czar and Czarina sent to Windsor a splendid floral offering. It is a magnificent wreath, 15 feet in diameter, composed of lilies, lilacs, rare orchids and other choice flowers. It is inscribed, "To our beloved nephew."

A cushion of Angar violets, a piece 50 inches long, set off with long tassels made of rare white orchids, is the offering received from the King and Queen of Portugal.

A wreath, 22 feet in diameter, composed of choice white flowers, with waving masses of pale pink and green orchids, was sent from the British Legation in Berlin. All the floral offerings were adorned with devises of crowns and similar figures, generally formed in lilies. Similar tokens of sympathy came from most of the European courts and embassies and from most of the aristocratic families of England.

TELEGRAPHIC CONTRACTS.

A Canadian Court Declares Them to be Contrary to Public Policy.

MONTREAL, Jan. 22.—The Court of Appeals has given its opinion declaring illegal the contract which the Northwestern Telegraph Company prints on the blanks which it furnishes. Lionel Laurence received a despatch from an employe which, by an error in transmission, made him take an unnecessary trip from New York to Montreal. He sued the telegraph company for $200 damages.

The court awarded $30. The company appealed and set up the plea that the despatches were sent under a contract which declared that it would not be liable for damages resulting from errors unless the despatch was repeated, and then only to the amount of fifty times the price paid for the message.

Such a contract the court declared to be contrary to public policy, and any contract by which a party sought to fix the punishment for his faults was illegal. The judgment was confirmed.

A Bad Trade Policy.

The London Economist, an exceedingly high authority, of the 29th ult. devoted a long article to the census, in which it said: "What has been the reason, or what have been the reasons, for this disappointing result? It is, at any rate, a curious coincidence, if nothing more, that just before the 1881 census the Canadian Parliament, with the view of fostering local industries and increasing the quantity of work within the Dominion, adopted a far more protectionist tariff than had hitherto been in force. Canadians were no longer merely to grow grain and cut timber, but they were to make their own clothing materials, their own iron and machinery; and the advantages of all this, together with a large extension of the railways and stimulated settlement upon the vast unpeopled territories belonging to the Government, were to inaugurate a new era of progress. So the high tariff was introduced, and protection against both the British and the United States manufacturer became the order of the day. Well, one portion of the programme has been realised in that large manufacturing cities like Toronto have grown rapidly, Toronto itself more than doubling its population in ten years. But the question arises. Has this abstraction of the working classes from the country to the towns—for that is what it amounts to—benefited the Dominion as a whole? In countries where cheap land is the great advantage which settlers obtain by leaving the densely populated old world, we have always held it to be an absolute squandering of resources to induce people to quit that great advantage to produce goods which can be produced better and cheaper in Europe. In a country like Canada, where the agriculturists should be attracted by the contrast between them and their far more numerous southern neighbors, a contrast which should render their cost of living less, a policy of rigid protection is a great mistake. A vast mass of people and a wide difference of climatic conditions such as we find in the United States are far better conditions under which to establish exclusiveness than those of Canada are, and there can be no longer any doubt that much of the productive labor in the Dominion has gone southward, so as to take advantage of the wider market which it finds there—an advantage not compensated in the colony as it would be under a free trade policy."

Other sufferers from cold in the head and catarrh have been promptly cured, why not you? Capt. D. H. Lyon, manager and proprietor of the C.P.R. and R. W. & Co. car ferry, Prescott, Ont., says: I used Nasal Balm for a prolonged case of cold in the head. Two applications effected a complete cure in less than 24 hours. I would not take $100 for my bottle of Nasal Balm if I could not replace it. dw

Fires and Electric Lights.

Like every new invention, the system of lighting by electricity is bound to undergo the ordeal of a period of prejudice. Gradually, however, the advantages it possesses in point of safety, as well as convenience, are coming to be appreciated, and if, with all its increased use, we find it less and less frequently referred to as the suppositious cause of mysterious fires, we must infer that the reason lies in the fact that the prejudice against it is being gradually overcome. To the great care exercised by electric companies in making circuits continuous, is attributable the comparative immunity from liability to incipient fires which the use of this modern method of lighting secures. The chief source of danger lies in carelessly made connections, for unless the contact is solid and substantial, resistance ensues, and practically the same conditions are created as constitute electric light. Even the use of the safety plug, which is fusible at a very low degree of heat caused by resistance, and designed to disconnect the current on this principle, is not depended on to counteract defective connections. And the local electric companies insist on quite as thorough a system of wiring as if this safety appliance were not in use. As a result, cases are extremely rare in Ottawa were incipient fires can reasonably be supposed to have been caused by electric wires. On the other hand there are instances, and the post office conflagration on Sunday morning is one of them, where the electric lights have been turned on to illumine the smoke obscured recesses of burning building, and thus materially assist the firemen in saving valuable property.—Ottawa Citizen.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of Mrs. Wm. Isaac, who died at her late residence in Peterborough, January 14th, 1892. Sudden death to her was sudden glory.

Published by Request.

When thinking of dear wife and mother,
Oh, do not always weep, dear husband,
And her name speak out so sadly,
Gone no more to dwell with you.
Think not of the dreary graveyard,
When comes on the winter even,
Think how beautiful the place is
She called Home and we call Heaven.

Little did we think two weeks since,
As we bade here her kind farewell,
That the sad news so soon would reach us,
That she so suddenly would be called home.
The dearest form that ever bound
A husband's or children's love,
One sharp blast of death's chilling breath
That loved one will remove.

True centre of your family joys,
Kind hearted, cheerful, bright;
Her pleasing smile, her gentle ways,
Her children's chief delight.
Now in the home her place is vacant;
She is missed by all around,
But her name in yonder city
In the book of Life is found.

In the church no more we'll see her,
Nor her voice no more we'll hear,
For our sister's gone before us
To that land so free from pain.
Good-bye, good-bye, husband dear,
Do not fret when I am gone;
God will help you to care for,
My darling Mabel, and Edgar, too.

Ah children dear I think of you,
How soon you'll be without a mother;
Did I think so soon to leave you,
In this wide, wide world alone?
May God who doeth all things wisely,
Guide, sustain and comfort you,
And in your sad and lonely hours,
Think of Heaven and our reunion.

I hear her say, my Saviour calling,
He calls me up, I cannot stay,
With beckoning hand she seems to say—
Dear husband, children come this way.
Though dear friend here left to sorrow
O'er the loss you have sustained,
You've the cheering consolation.
She eternal life has gained.

May her dear children she loved so well;
And husband so kind and true,
Meet mother and wife in the better land,
Where our Lord makes all things new.

Orangeville.

Harvey.

Council Meeting.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The reeve and councillors elect for the Township of Harvey, met at the town hall, on Monday the 18th January, 1892, having made and filed their several declarations of qualification and office, took their seats at the council board, viz., Robert Shaw, reeve, and Thomas Flynn, Charles McIlmoyl, James McLean Oliver and And. G. Shearer, councillors for the current year. Minutes of the last meeting read and confirmed, communications read from Gilmour & Co., requesting right of way for new roads; W. H. Robertson, re-tender for printing etc., not accepted; Samuel Purser, for goods furnished for Mr. Abbott; James Richmond, tender for assessorship, accepted; Peter Hamilton for one road scraper for Tate; G. W. Davey for goods furnished for John Lancefield; Mrs. Reynard's account for nursing Mrs. Flanigan. A by-law was passed confirming the appointment of John Elliott and W. F. Chase as auditors for 1892. A by-law was passed re-appointing Jas. Richmond assessor for 1892 and re-appointing the clerk and treasurer for the current year. A by-law was passed appointing health officers for Harvey for the current year—Robert Shaw, reeve, and James S. Cairnduff, clerk, ex officio, and Charles McIlmoyle, Thomas Flynn, Robert Renwick and James Ingram. Orders drawn for payment of accounts, amount $78 57. The clerk was instructed to notify the trustees of school sections numbers 5, 6 and 7 to call a meeting of the ratepayers in each of their sections to decide upon dividing section number 7 at the side line between lots 15 and 16, in concessions 5, 6, 7, 8 9 and 10, and attaching the portions of said section 7 to the adjoining sections numbers 5 and 6 respectively. On motion the council adjourned to meet at Thomas Flynn's 14th February, 1892.

JUMPED FROM THE TRAIN.

Daring Escape of a Well-Known Chinese Smuggler.

BUFFALO, Jan. 20.—"Jimmy" Muldoon of Toronto is pretty slick, and no mistake. Mr. Muldoon was once a prisoner in this state, but owing to the precarious condition of his health obtained a pardon. He had been accused of smuggling Chinamen into United States territory. The lesson of that imprisonment was lost on James. He returned to Toronto, again became connected with the pilotage business and again he fell into the hands of United States minions, and for several months past he has been confined here. Yesterday the United States marshals took Jimmy from his Buffalo quarters to convey him to Albany, where he was to stand trial in the United States District Court. Last night at Sprakers' station, on the New York Central, while in charge of Deputy Colt, Muldoon succeeded in getting his custodian's attention disengaged for a moment and made a break for liberty, jumping from the train, and has probably got to Canada by this time.

By the Same Dodge.

OTTAWA, Jan. 20.—Prof. Baldwin, charged with practising medicine without the necessary qualifications, was arrested in Chesterville and placed on the train by the constable in whose charge he was to be conveyed back to Kemptville. The train had got to a speed of 30 miles an hour, when the constable left his man for a few minutes. During this time the prisoner made a jump for the door and leaped from the train and escaped.

INFANT DAMNATION.

The General Assembly Committee Eliminates This Doctrine.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—The General Assembly Committee on the Revision of Faith made good progress yesterday in revising confession of faith in accordance with the recommendations of the various Presbyteries.

The doctrine of infant damnation was eliminated by the adoption of the following substitute for chapter XII., section 3, which now reads:

Infants dying in infancy, and all other persons who are not guilty of actual transgression, are included in the election of grace and are saved and regenerated by Christ, through the Spirit who worketh when and where and how he pleaseth. So also are all other elect persons who are not outwardly called by the ministry of the word.

WALT WHITMAN'S TOMB.

Where the Remains of the Good Gray Poet Will Rest.

In the summer and autumn months, before Walt Whitman was compelled to confine himself to his room, one of his pleasures was to drive out to "Harleigh" and superintend the erection of a vault, which would, in the natural course of events, be his last resting place.

Two miles from the Philadelphia ferries and easy of access by road or rail lays Harleigh Cemetery, beautifully situated on one of the few picturesque spots around Camden. The main road to Haddonfield is directly past its gates and the first impression on entering these is of a splendidly appointed park, laid out on a landscape lawn principle. Beautiful oval lawns of soft velvety grass, shafts, columns and monuments of granite and marble in perfect uniformity are scattered about, here and there are lovely beds of flowers artistically arranged with exquisite taste, while in the valley lies a beautiful lake fed from the hill, in which has been erected the vault of the "Good Gray Poet."

It is here among a plantation of beech and magnolia trees, at the head of the lake, that Walt Whitman has selected the spot for his last resting place. The vault is built into the hill on the west side of the grounds and is composed of enormous boulders of granite. The stone door itself, although hung on massive brass hinges, requires the united effort of three strong men to close its portals. The two front stones, standing there like immovable sentries, are very imposing. A solid piece is laid across these on the top and a heavy handsome triangular stone is placed again on these, with the simple inscription. "Walt Whitman," carved out of this solid cap-stone. The whole structure, in its retiring unostentatious situation, is in entire keeping with the man to whose memory it will stand as a living remembrance.—New York World.

WALT WHITMAN'S TOMB.

"Like Magic,"

THE effect produced by Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Colds, Coughs, Croup, and Sore Throat are, in most cases, immediately relieved by the use of this wonderful remedy. It strengthens the vocal organs, allays irritation, and prevents the inroads of Consumption; in every stage of that dread disease, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral relieves coughing and induces refreshing rest.

"I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my family for thirty years and have always found it the best remedy for croup, to which complaint my children have been subject."—Capt. U. Carley, Brooklyn, N. Y.

"From an experience of over thirty years in the sale of proprietary medicines, I feel justified in recommending Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. One of the best recommendations of the Pectoral is the enduring quality of its popularity, it being more salable now than it was twenty-five years ago, when its great success was considered marvelous."—R. S. Drake, M. D., Beliot, Kans.

"My little sister, four years of age, was so ill from bronchitis that we had almost given up hope of her recovery. Our family physician, a skilful man and of large experience, pronounced it useless to give her any more medicine; saying that he had done all it was possible to do, and we must prepare for the worst. As a last resort, we determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and I can truly say, with the most happy results. After taking a few doses she seemed to breathe easier, and, within a week, was out of danger. We continued giving the Pectoral until satisfied she was entirely well. This has given me unbounded faith in the preparation, and I recommend it confidently to my customers."—C. O. Lepper, Druggist, Fort Wayne, Ind.

SUN LIFE

ASSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA.

The attention of our Policy-Holders is directed to the following summary of the leading items of the present report, which speaks for itself as to the progress and prosperity of the Company:—

Life Assurances in force, 1st January, 1891	$16,759,355.99
Increase over previous year	3,421,272.84
New Applications received in 1890	6,371,599.15
Increase over 1889	2,265,585.60
Cash income for year ending 31st December, 1890	889,073.87
Increase over 1889	235,938.35
Assets at 31st December, 1890	2,473,514.19
Increase over 1889	687,691.47
Reserve for Security for Policy-Holders	2,100,232.65
Increase over 1889	567,732.71
Surplus over all Liabilities and Capital Stock	232,175.69
Increase over 1889	75,649.85
Death claims fallen in during 1890	143,961.65

The progress made by the SUN LIFE during 1890 was remarkable. The new business was the largest in the Company's history, and was equalled by but one other Canadian Life Company. The income for the year exceeds $2,000 for each day in the year, Sundays included. The Assets are large and rapidly increasing. They are, moreover, of the highest character, yielding an average interest of 6.04 per cent. The overdue interest is small, and the Real Estate owned under foreclosure is only four per cent. of the amount of mortgages. This is a remarkable showing. The SURPLUS accumulated during the FOUR years of the current quinquennium is nearly THREE TIMES as much as the amount earned during any previous FIVE years, and the profits to Policy-holders cannot fail thus to be highly satisfactory. The following are the figures:—

Net Surplus, 31st Dec.,	1881, (five years)	$64,824 07
" " " "	1886, "	89,452 97
" " " "	1890, (four years)	232,175 69

The meeting then adjourned.—Norwood Register.

Slavery in Canada.

The following copy of a receipt for a sum of money paid for a negro woman in Canada, eighty years ago will be read with interest. The transaction took place were Colborne now is:

"This may certify that I have this day sold for the consideration of forty pounds to me in hand, paid by William H. Wallbridge, my negro woman Bett, of about twenty-five years of age, and her infant child, to have and to hold from me or any other person whatever, as witness my hand, this 14th day of March, 1812.

"JOSEPH KEELER.

"Witness present:
"ELIAS WALLBRIDGE,
"ASA SMITH."

The above is an item of local interest, as the Joseph Keeler referred to was the father of the late Joseph Keeler, M.P. for East Northumberland. Wm. H. Wallbridge was the father of the late Hon. Lewis Wallbridge, formerly of Belleville, Chief Justice of Manitoba. Elias Wallbridge, the first witness, was the father of the late Shelby Wallbridge and of Asa Wallbridge of Amelisburg, half brothers of Wm Kerr, Q.C., and J. W. Kerr of this town. Slavery whether illegal or not seemed to have existed in Upper Canada at a much more recent date than is generally supposed.—Cobourg World.

Capitular Orangism.

Session of the Grand Chapter.

The Royal Scarlet Chapter, (Orange) for the county of West Peterborough, was brought to a close last night, it having been opened on the 14th inst. During the session five candidates were admitted to the Royal Scarlet degree.

The following companions were elected officers for the year 1892:—Worshipful Companion in command, the County Master; Excellent Companion in command, J. A. McWilliams; Chaplain, Companion J. Agnew; Scribe, Companion W. J. Green; Sir Herald Knight at Arms, Companion G. W. Hall; Inward Herald, Companion Jno. Bradfield; Outward Herald, Companion Thos. Brown.

The Chapter will meet again on the 14th of May next.

Mr. C. Young disposed of a quantity of his lumber by auction on Monday to the amount of about $2,000. The sale was largely attended.

A troupe of Jubilee Singers gave a concert in the Methodist church here on Tuesday Those who were present spoke favourably of their singing.

Mr. J. A. Connolly, of Campbellford, has succeeded Mr. A. Smith as teacher in Young's Point school.

Masonic Funeral.

The funeral of the late S. B. Burdett, M. P., Belleville, will take place at that place Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. It will be under the auspices of the Masonic fraternity, of which he was a member.

Is this a Case of Suicide?

For some days past there has been notice lying on a piece of ice under the centre pier of the Ashburnham bridge, some portions of a man's clothing. There are several articles of wearing apparel but they are almost covered with snow, and it is difficult to ascertain whether or not it is a full suit. The position and appearance of the articles would suggest that either some one had taken a cold plunge into the river, previously divesting himself of his clothing, or some one had thrown them over the bridge for mischief. It might be well for the matter to be investigated. Quite a number of bystanders gathered on the bridge at noon to-day, and many were the different opinions expressed as to how the clothes got into that place.

The fill a volition of a single organ, the liver for instance, may bring on the gravest disorders, which would surely have been obviated by the use of Dr. Say's Remedy.

Evangelistic Services.

The service at the Baptist church last night was very solemn and impressive. Mr. Meikle based his remarks upon the words in Psalm xl, 2, "He brought me up also out of an horrible pit." He pictured the sinner as in a pit full of noise, loathsome, dangerous, bottomless—a pit from which he must be rescued by Divine power. He remarked that if the Christian people of Peterborough really believed that this was the condition of every unconverted sinner they were taking things very easily. Every seat was filled at the service, and almost the whole of the congregation remained to the after meeting. The service will be in the Baptist church at 7.45 o'clock this evening. A hearty invitation is extended to all.

Police Court.

FRIDAY, 22nd Jan., 1892.

This morning at the Police Court Wm. Wallace was arraigned for vagrancy. He was given one month in gaol.

Wm. Scott had only been released from Cattle Nesbitt this morning and liked the treatment he received so much he again appeared at the police court on a search for more. He was given a ticket for six months lumbering and skilly.

Mr. Shaw was arraigned under the by-law relating to auctioneers and transient traders for selling books without a license. Mr. E B Edwards appeared for the town and Mr. R. E. Wood for the defendants. It was admitted that Shaw had sold the books, but it was contended that he had a right, as he was only acting for Mr. Stapleton, who was regularly licensed, and who had charge of the books and money. On referring to the by-law of the town on this point, dated 1880, it was found that the same had been annulled, owing to the law having since been amended. The case therefore discharged.

Makes the Weak Strong

The marked benefit which people in run down or weakened state of health derive from Hood's Sarsaparilla, conclusively proves the claim that this medicine "makes the weak strong." It does not act like a stimulant, imparting fictitious strength from which there must follow a reaction of greater weakness than before, but in the most natural way Hood's Sarsaparilla overcomes creates an appetite, purifies the blood, and, in short, gives great bodily, nerve, mental and digestive strength.

That Tired Feeling

"I derived very much benefit from Hood's Sarsaparilla, which I took for general debility. It built me right up, and gave me an excellent appetite." ED. JENKINS, Mt. Savage, Md.

Fagged Out

"Last spring I was completely fagged out. My strength left me and I felt sick and miserable all the time, so that I could hardly attend to my business. I took one bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it cured me. There is nothing like it." R. C. BEGOLE, Editor Enterprise, Belleville, Mich.

Worn Out

"Hood's Sarsaparilla restored me to good health. Indeed, I might say truthfully it saved my life. To one feeling tired and worn out I would earnestly recommend a trial of Hood's Sarsaparilla." MRS. PHEBE MOSHER, 90 Brooks Street, East Boston, Mass.

Col. Williams' Residence.

The Port Hope Times says:—Pearhyn Park, the residence and grounds of the late Col. Williams, was sold by Mr. Jas. Kerr, auctioneer, on Monday, for the sum of $8,000. The purchaser was Mr. J. B. Boustead, a wealthy and enterprising citizen of Toronto, whom we hope will permanently take up his residence here. The property comprises a brick residence and eighty acres of land, which a few years ago was estimated to be worth $30,000.

Another Narrow Escape.

Another level crossing narrow escape is reported to the EXAMINER. A night or two ago a sleigh containing seven or eight persons from North Monaghan and Smith, was passing along Charlotte street, and had nearly crossed the track when a train came backing down southward. The driver had no warning by whistle or otherwise of the approach of the train, till it was upon him. To avoid it he turned his team sharply, with the result that the car struck one of the horses and the sleigh in a slanting direction, but fortunately without any serious results. The escape was a narrow one. Had the train struck the sleigh squarely (and there were only a few seconds to spare) there would have been several deaths to record. When will the town authorities wake up to the necessity of providing gates or some equivalent protection for the dangerous level crossings on both railways?

WAS DETERMINED TO DIE.

Method in The Madness of W. F. Johnston.

Determined and Deliberate Suicide—A Well-Known Pensioner Puts Four Bullet Holes in His Head—And Lives Several Hours.

This morning about 10 o'clock, Mr. Harry Cavanagh, son of T. Cavanagh, of the Balmoral Hotel, went to a box stall in the yard of the hotel to take out a cutter that was kept there. He found the door fastened on the inside and gave it a jerk, which broke the fastening. On opening the door a horrible sight presented itself. Stretched on the ground with his head towards the door, lay W. F. Johnston, apparently lifeless. His head was turned a little to the right side lying in a pool of blood. The police were at once notified and Dr. Brennan sent for. When the chief arrived he found that the man had shot himself. Blood was clotted on his head, showing that he must have lain there some hours. By his side lay a small revolver of only 22 calibre, containing seven chambers, two of which were loaded, one empty and four had been discharged. On the arrival of Dr. Brennan, he found on examination that life was not extinct but the body was from exposure to the icy air of the draughty stall in which the suicide had lain so long. He had the unfortunate man—for he was still a man, though life was at the lowest ebb—removed to the nearest convenient room in the Balmoral Hotel, the billiard room, where a couch had been hastily improvised by Mr. Cavanagh. The poor man presented a horrible appearance the head, face and neck being covered with clotted blood that had oozed from the four ghastly bullet holes in his head. One of the bullets had struck the middle of the forehead, but in such a manner that it had passed under the skin and out at some distance from the point of entrance. There were besides two bullet holes in the right temple. While the desperately determined man was firing the fourth shot it seems that his hand fell nerveless from the effects of the previous shots for the point of the revolver's muzzle dropped and the bullet entered the right cheek. It shows that the poor man possessed unusual vitality to keep his hold on life with four bullet holes in his head, and hours of exposure to the cold night air, cold as the outside of a building.

There are evidences that the attempt at suicide were of a most deliberate and determined character. He was always distinguished for a certain military smartness and neatness in dress. When he was he was neatly and fully attired. He had on a light tweed suit and blue cloth overcoat, underneath which he wore, as was his custom, a knitted guernsey vest. His hat had been carefully placed upon a rude seat at one side of the stall. He still wore his gloves. On examining the door of the stall, it was found that it had been securely fastened from the inside, the poor man evidently retaining his military instincts to the last, by making his retreat secure. A piece of wire had been used to fasten the door. It was stretched across the opening of the door and fastened to the jambs by means of screws. Another evidence of the coolly premeditated nature of the suicide was the fact that he had protected the shoulders and breast of his clothing from being soiled with the blood he intended in a moment more to shed, by placing around his neck an old piece of sacking. The annals of self slaughter show few instances of a more deliberately determined attempt at suicide—one with more of method in the suicides madness.

Further particulars obtained from the surgeon who first saw the unfortunate man, show that the nature of his wounds is even more severe than stated above. One bullet was fired directly in the middle of the forehead, about an inch above the level of the eyes, and evidently penetrated the brain. One of the bullets that entered the right temple passed upwards through the brain, out through the skull, and lodged in the door of the stall. The other bullet that entered the temple is doubtless lodged somewhere in the brain.

The man living under the circumstances, is explained by the fact that the portion of the brain injured—the upper portion—does not give nerve supply to the

GREAT CENTRE OF LIFE

—the heart. At noon the man was utterly unconscious, and life was very low, the pulse only beating thirty times a minute.

At half past one the quadruply wounded man was removed from the Balmoral Hotel to the Nicholls Hospital.

The unfortunate man Johnson has been a well known resident of the town for over a score of years. He was a quiet, inoffensive man, and was no person's enemy but his own — fondness for strong drink being his greatest vice. He was a pensioner on the British Army list. He served in the Crimean war and had medals in reward for services in the actions of that war. He was for many years, and before his habits became irregular, sexton of St. John's church, and porter for the Ontario Bank, and in this position was indulgently treated till at last the manager was compelled to dispense with his services. Since he lost that situation he has lived alternately at Bobcaygeon with a sister and in Peterborough. Recently he was staying at the Balmoral hotel, and the familiarity with the premises, gained during his stay there accounts for his having selected a stall in the stables of this hotel as scene of the tragedy he enacted last night or very early this morning, for from the condition of the wounds, Dr. Brennan was of opinion that the shooting had been committed several hours previous to 10.30, when he first saw the patient. The stall he selected was by a singular coincidence the same that Matthew Wynn occupied on the night when Walter Kerr was stabbed last September.

For the past ten days Johnson has been lodging at Callanan's hotel, opposite the post office, on Hunter street. The proprietor says that Johnston has been drinking but little during the past few days and that last evening, when he was last seen he appeared to be perfectly sober. At that time the man was greatly depressed in spirits and in conversation with a friend was deploring the unequal division of the worlds goods and deploring his own hard lot. The friend jocularly remarked: "If I felt like that I should go and shoot myself,"—little thinking that his advice would be taken in such literal and horrible a manner. From all that can be gathered at present, this was the last that was seen in life of W. F. Johnston, whose tall, slender and soldier-like figure has been familiar on the streets of Peterborough for years,—in life—for though the man is not yet dead at this writing, it seems an impossibility that he should live any length with four bullet holes in his head. He was not seen by any of the people about Cavanagh's Hotel during the day preceding the shooting.

A 'phone received from Dr. King at the hospital at 3.45 states that Johnston is still living, though there is no hope of his recovery.

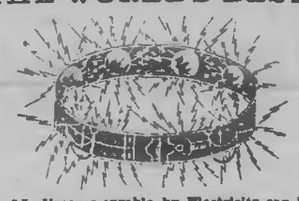
Self Application of Electricity

FOR MEDICAL PURPOSES
BY THE

DORENWEND
ELECTRIC BELT
And Attachments.

HEAD OFFICE—103 Yonge St., Toronto

THE WORLD'S BEST.



ALL diseases curable by Electricity can be treated at home by the Dorenwend Appliance. The Dorenwend is the only legitimate Electric Belt made which fulfils the requirements of Electro-medical science. It is a complete BODY BATTERY. It has an independent Battery, which generates a mild, continuous current of Electricity (without shocks) and can be regulated to suit the strongest man or the weakest child. It is a CURRENT of QUANTITY, not merely a sensation current, and the quantity current is the greatest curative. It is a successful treatment for INDIGESTION, RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, LIVER AND KIDNEY TROUBLES, WEAK BACK, SPINAL DISEASE, HEART DISEASE, NERVOUS DEBILITY, PARALYSIS, VERTIGO, FEMALE COMPLAINTS, IMPOTENCY, SEXUAL DECLINE and all diseases of the Nervous and Muscular Systems.

Remember that the DORENWEND BELT is the very latest invention in this line, and was invented by a competent electrician, and ranks as the best in the world; we defy anyone to bring proof to the contrary.

Do not class this Belt with the humbug combinations of leather and metal with which the country is being flooded. If you wish to experiment with cheap articles, buy THEM but, if you want to procure a genuine Electric Belt and one that will be a benefit get a Dorenwend Belt.

Send name and address for Illustrated Book on Home Electro-medical treatment and mention this paper. J. D. TULLY, Agent, Peterborough. sod w

WORK IN THE FAR NORTH

Among the Indians and Esquimaux

Graphically Described—The Bishop of Mackenzie River Gives an Address in St. John's School—Concluding Day of the Quarterly Meeting of the Women's Auxiliary—Well Attended Meetings—Interesting Addresses—The Convention a Great Success—Addresses of Welcome to the Visitors.

At 10 a.m. the Lord Bishop Reeve of Mackenzie River celebrated Holy Communion in St. John's Church and preached an eloquent sermon based on the text taken from Acts i, 8: "Ye shall be witnesses unto Me * * * * unto the uttermost parts of the earth." A very large congregation attended and were much edified by the utterances of the Bishop.

THE AFTERNOON SESSION

was held in the Sons of England hall, Hunter street, which had been nicely decorated for the occasion. A large number of members of the local branches attended this meeting, together with additional delegates who had arrived during the day, and whose names were published in the EXAMINER of yesterday. The meeting was called to order at 2.30 p.m. After prayer had been offered the hymn, "Almighty God Whose Only Son," was sung by all those assembled. Following this came the roll-call, which was conducted by the secretary.

VISITORS MADE WELCOME.

The President of the Peterborough branch then addressed those present, and welcomed the diocesan officers and delegates.

Mrs. Broughal of Toronto, Second Vice President of the Diocesan Board, briefly replied on behalf of the officers, and thanked the Peterborough friends for their warm and generous reception.

Mrs. Baldwin, of Springfield-on-the-Credit, also acknowledged the president's welcome to the delegates in a few well chosen remarks.

Very instructive and encouraging reports were then read by the diocesan officers present, and also letters of regret from many who were unable to be present at the meeting. The secretaries of the various branches represented followed with short verbal accounts of the state of the work in their respective districts.

EXCELLENT PAPERS READ.

Miss Tilley, of Toronto, read an excellent paper on "God's chosen people," which was so well composed and presented the truths so clearly that the members present by a standing vote resolved that it be printed and circulated amongst the churches.

The hymn "Lord her watch thy church is keeping," was sung after which Mrs. Williamson of Toronto, read a carefully prepared paper on "Be not weary in well doing."

Votes of thanks were passed to those who had taken part in the meeting, and resolutions regretting the absence of so many members through sickness. A short discussion ensued as to the various methods of work, and Mrs. Broughall, of Toronto, spoke a few earnest and encouraging words to her fellow-workers.

At the close of this meeting, the visitors and members were entertained to a splendid supper in the S.O.E. dining hall, which had been provided by the local branch.

THE EVENING SERVICE.

At 8 o'clock a public missionary service was held in St. John's school house, which was well filled, the fairer sex predominating. The chair was occupied by the Rector of St. John's, Rev. J. C. Davidson, who conducted the devotional exercises. On the platform was also noticed the Rev. J. McCleary, of St. Luke's, Ashburnham, and Rev. Jno. Gibson, of Norwood.

In a few brief remarks the chairman welcomed those present, and congratulated the Women's Auxiliary upon the good work they had already accomplished. He also spoke of the good that usually resulted from such conventions as this one.

The Rev. W. LOUCKS then read a short summary of the history of the Society, and stated the objects of it to be "to infuse missionary zeal, and to pray and work for missions." He urged on all present to join in the spirit of the diocesan motto:—"Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might."

THE BISHOP'S ADDRESS.

Rt. Rev. Mr. REEVE, Lord Bishop of Mackenie River, was then called upon to give a missionary address. The Bishop is a man of good bodily appearance, tall, well-built, and of commanding presence. He is possessed of a clear sonorous voice, which at times assumes a tone of earnest entreaty. He is a vivacious speaker and appears to be thoroughly in sympathy with his work amongst the heathen of our own land. In fact he might be spoken of as the very man for this special work. He commenced his address by thanking the members and friends for their hearty welcome, and spoke of the encouragement he received in his great work from the sympathy he received at such gatherings. They also had a very good moral effect.

AMONGST THE ESQUIMAUX.

He then gave a description of his own diocese away in the far Northwest amongst the Indians and Esquimaux. He had been a missionary for 22 years. The church in Canada was not doing as much as it might to aid in this great work. With the exception of two stations of the Canadian Missionary society on the Hudson Bay, there was no means provided for evangelising the Esquimaux or spreading the gospel from Hudson Bay to Alaska. One missionary had to give up the work owing to means failing him and he is now working in Alaska.

THE HEATHEN IN CANADA.

The claims of the Esquimaux were here very forcibly laid before the meeting by the speaker. They were treated very badly by the white man, and were very degraded, and thievish class of people. There were men ready to go and labor amongst them but the funds were wanting. In many respects they were a most interesting people and were often very kind and hospitable. Those near the mouth of the Mackenzie river were very fine men and not so small as has been commonly reported.

The speaker gave a description of the dress and manner of these interesting people and described some of their peculiarities.

WORK WITH THE INDIANS.

He then spoke of his work amongst the Indians. His diocese was the most northerly in America, and the largest in the world. The country was too poor to admit of Indians living together in settlements; sufficient crops could not be raised. They therefore had a very precarious existence. The trading posts are from one to three hundred miles apart. At some of these missionaries were situated, there were seven nations of Indians in the diocese and only four ordained missionaries. The Indians therefore can only see them when they come to the posts or when the missionaries visit them. The work is dependant largely on the Indians teaching each other.

SOME OF HIS HARDSHIPS.

The Bishop here fully described the method of travelling in winter and also their camps. Bread was only supplied once a week and rice once a month. Flour now costs about $40 per barrel. Often on arriving at a camp the visitors would find the Indians actually starving. Some very touching and powerful incidents were here cited, of the hardships endured by the missionaries and their families. The speaker explained the method of teaching the language to Indians. It was by means of a syllabic system invented by a missionary fifty years ago and had proved very useful. An explanation of the sign language was also given. He then described a visit he had paid to a tribe, which he had enjoyed very much.

MORE FUNDS NEEDS.

The reverend gentleman concluded a very touching and eloquent address by relating some beautiful incidents about the effect of the Gospel on some Indians, and pleaded for more funds to carry on the work.

The address, which was listened to with great attention, was a most interesting and instructive one, and cannot fail to be productive of some further effort by the Auxiliary in aid of Canadian missions.

THE CONVENTION CLOSED.

The close of this meeting was the close of the convention. After singing the missionary hymn "From Greenland's Icy Mountains," the chairman, Rev. J. C. Davidson, conducted brief thanksgiving prayers for the great success of the convention, after which the benediction was pronounced by Bishop Reeve. This concluded one of the most instructive and successful conventions ever held in town.

Mr. Waldie's Retirement in Halton.

MILTON, Jan. 20.—At the convention of the Halton Liberals the following resolution was passed: "That whereas Mr. John Waldie has declined the unanimous nomination of this convention to contest this county in the interests of the Liberal party and inasmuch as the Patrons of Industry have nominated a candidate to contest the county for the representation of Halton in the Commons, this convention deems it inexpedient to put a candidate in the field."

J.J. Hawkins for West Huron.

BRANTFORD, Jan. 20.—Mr. John Joseph Hawkins of Brantford has been chosen to contest the western division of Huron against Mr. M. C. Cameron, unseated. There is no doubt he will accept the nomination and fight the seat.

Does Protection Protect?

Certainly, in one instance, it does. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the great protection against the dangers of impure blood, and it will cure or prevent all diseases of this class. It has well won its name of the best blood purifier by its remarkable cures.

The highest praise has been won by Hood's Pills for their easy yet efficient action. Sold by all druggists. Price 25 cents per box.

NORMAN, Ont., January 15, 1890.
W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville, Ont.
DEAR SIR,—Your "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills" are the best regulator for the system that humanity can use. Life is as the time-piece: frail and delicate are many of its works. A tiny particle of foreign substance adheres to the smallest wheel in the works, and what is the result?—at first, only a slight difference is perceptible in its time-keeping, but wait you; as the obstruction grows, the irregularity becomes greater, until at last, what could have been rectified with little trouble, in the beginning, will now require much care in thoroughly cleansing the entire works. So it is in human life—a slight derangement is neglected, it grows and increases, imperceptibly at first, then rapidly, until what could, in the beginning, have been cured with little trouble, becomes almost fatal. To prevent this, I advise all to purify the system frequently, by the use of Morse's Pills, and so preserve vigor and vitality.
Yours faithfully,
H. F. ATWELL.

"August Flower"

Mrs. Sarah M. Black of Seneca, Mo., during the past two years has been affected with Neuralgia of the Head, Stomach and Womb, and writes: "My food did not seem to strengthen me at all and my appetite was very variable. My face was yellow, my head dull, and I had such pains in my left side. In the morning when I got up I would have a flow of mucus in the mouth, and a bad, bitter taste. Sometimes my breath became short, and I had such queer, tumbling, palpitating sensations around the heart. I ached all day under the shoulder blades, in the left side, and down the back of my limbs. It seemed to be worse in the wet, cold weather of Winter and Spring; and whenever the spells came on, my feet and hands would turn cold, and I could get no sleep at all. I tried everywhere, and got no relief before using August Flower Then the change came. It has done me a wonderful deal of good during the time I have taken it and is working a complete cure." ④

U. S. POSTAL SERVICE.

JULIAN HAWTHORNE SEES MR. WANAMAKER IN HIS OFFICE.

The Growth of the Department—What a Business Man Has Accomplished—The Handling of the Postal Business—New Reforms That are Proposed.

There is a moral to Mr. Wanamaker's Washington career; it may be formulated as business v. politics. He has been for fifty years identified with business, and has risen to be the greatest retail merchant in the world. President Harrison, despite some expressions of doubt and warning, put him in his Cabinet as chief of the postoffice; and now Mr.

MR. WANAMAKER AT WORK.

Wanamaker bids fair to gain the title of the best Postmaster-General we have ever had. This is an age of "records." Mr. Wanamaker's double record will not soon be broken, either in Philadelphia or in Washington.

To give an idea of what the post office growth has been since it was started under old Samuel Osgood a hundred and odd years ago, it is enough to say that in 1789 2,000 letters were posted in a day, whereas, now 3,000 are posted every minute of the twenty-four hours. Nevertheless, the greater part of this growth has taken place since 1860, and since the present Administration assumed power some of the most useful improvements and striking reforms have been made. Still greater ones are in prospect. But before entering upon their consideration let us take a look at the Postmaster-General himself and see how he looks and how he occupies himself.

MR. WANAMAKER AT HOME.

The mansion in I street is quiet, but rich. Nothing is expended in fancy, but everything is solid and valuable, and appears better at the second glance than at the first. Mrs. Whitney's famous ballroom is now a picture gallery with several hundred thousand dollars' worth of the best pictures in it. The dining room is soberly magnificent—ebony wood work, gilded ceiling, dark red silk walls, silver and crystal Gobelin tapestry, hammered brass. The library is more sober still, but in excellent taste.

Here Mr. Wanamaker appeared to the present writer, clad in a light gray lounging sack and dark trousers. He is a man about middle height, rather lightly built. His face is fresh colored, smooth shaven and young looking. His eyes are dark grey, very bright and observant; forehead large, lower face slender in proportion; a good-sized, business-like nose.

There is a certain quiet energy and enthusiasm in the expression of his countenance; you see that the man is a man of genius, of judgment, of resources. His conversation is thoughtful, terse and low-voiced. Activity and alertness are in him combined with composure.

I am bound to say that Mr. Wanamaker did not take very ardently to the idea of being exploited in the newspapers. He is a man of deeds, not words. "I just try to do the work; that's about all there is of it," was his remark. He listens attentively and keeps his own counsel. However, I made an appointment for next morning at the department, and so took my leave.

The office is a large, light, pleasant room, which anyone apparently may enter and tell his business to the Postmaster-General, who hears it all, and gives his answer briefly and frankly, though courteously.

"Everybody thinks he can run the post office," says Mr. Wanamaker. "I have plenty of suggestions; many of them are unavailable, now and then I get a good one, and such are worth waiting for." He is in his office by 8 o'clock, an hour before the clerks appear. That hour he is at liberty to spend over his private correspondence. Then come the subordinate officers to consult with him. He gives to everyone the responsibility of his position, his theory being that the more you trust a man the more trustworthy he becomes. But he first selects the man in question with great care, and his instinct in this important matter is very seldom at fault.

Among the good things that Mr. Wanamaker has accomplished are the establishment of a regular system of promotion for good work throughout the service; greater quickness in the transmission of mails by land and sea, by the development of the railway and steamboat post offices; abolition of lottery business and the dispersion of indecent literature; more accurate methods of accounting and a great saving of expenditure in several directions.

Among the good things he intends to accomplish are efficient and constant inspection of post offices, a foreign postal card with stamped coupon attached for prepaid reply; duplex house letter boxes in one side of which the postman can deliver his mail, while the householder can put his letters in the other; an extended and ultimately universal free delivery; a reform in the present abuse of the penalty frank, whereby more than $8,000,000 worth of the most laborious mail carrying is done for nothing; an alteration in the law which now permits paper-covered "serial" novels to be sent at one-eighth the legitimate rate; based upon these two reforms, a reduction of letter postage to 1 cent an ounce, and a resulting change, in a few years, of the present annual deficit of $5,000,000 into a surplus of $14,000,000; the creation of a postal banking system, the deposits, estimated at $500,000,000, to be redeposited in national local banks, as preferred liabilities, and to be employed in Government, real estate, and similar solid investments, and the postal telegraph system.

This, which is perhaps the favorite project of the Postmaster General, is opposed by all the influence and power of the Western Union monopoly; it is a battle of giants, but Mr. Wanamaker will probably win, for he is backed by popular sentiment all over the country. Time will be saved, not by hours, but by days; rates will be lowered more than 50 per cent.; new telegraph patents will be welcome, instead of being suppressed, as they now are; the abuse of the telegraph for speculative purposes will be stopped, and business everywhere will be stimulated. Altogether, the prospect is exhilarating.—Julian Hawthorne, in Philadelphia Press.

Nominations in Several Constituencies for the Bye-Elections

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Jan. 22.—The nomination of the candidates in connection with the county of Lincoln by-election took place yesterday. Mr. M. Wallace filed the necessary papers for Mr. S. Neelon, Conservative, and Mr. W. B. Gilleland did the same service for William Gibson, Reformer. They were accepted in both cases.

KINGSTON, Jan. 22.—J. H. Metcalfe, Conservative, and A. Gunn, Reform, were nominated for the Commons yesterday.

MILTON, Jan. 22.—Halton nominations took place yesterday. D. Henderson was the nominee of the Conservative party and John D. McGregor the nominee of the Patrons of Industry.

RICHMOND ELECTION.

The Conservative Candidate Elected By More Than 300 Majority.

HALIFAX, N.S., Jan. 22.—The bye-election in Richmond, Nova Scotia, to fill the seat rendered vacant by the unseating of J. A. Gillies (Conservative) took place yesterday, Mr. Gillies being elected by 343 majority.

At the general election last March the contest was a triangular one, the candidates and their votes being: E. P. Flynn (Liberal) 670, J. A. Gillies (Conservative) 887, H. N. Paint (Conservative) 755.

Father and Son in One Day.

CAMPBELLVILLE, Ont., Jan. 22.—A day or two ago Mr. John Logie and his son, George W. Logie, were laid to rest together side by side. Mr. George Logie was a young man 33 years of age. He was, at the time of his death, a student in Knox College in the second year theology. Two weeks ago he preached at Lindsay, apparently in his usual health. On Friday, the 15th, his father also passed away, also from an attack of grip. He was one of the pioneer settlers of Nassagaweya and reached the great age of 93 years. Last summer George Logie labored in Toronto in a mission connected with West Church (Presbyterian). The double funeral was a very solemn event. Six of his fellow-students came from college to act as pallbearers.

Husband and Wife in One Grave.

SARNIA, Jan. 22.—Mrs. William Gough of the McGregor settlement died in the 76th year of her age. Next day her husband died and one funeral and one grave sufficed.

Still Another Double Funeral.

GALT, Jan. 22.—The double funeral of James Dalgleish and his wife, who was a niece of James Hogg, the "Ettrick Shepherd," took place yesterday to Mount View Cemetery.

Born and Died Together.

GUELPH, Ont., Jan. 22.—John B. Bruce, son of Alexander Bruce, died yesterday from grip, contracted on Monday. His twin brother, prostrated by the shock, took to bed and died to-night.

Brothers Drowned.

HALIFAX, N.S., Jan. 22.—A special from Laproile, Nfld., says three boys, aged 7, 9 and 11 years, sons of Charles Collins, telegraph lineman, were playing on the ice to-day at Man-of-War Pond when they broke through. The two youngest were drowned.

Suffocated in a Folding-Bed.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 22.—A playful act by his 7-year-old brother cost little Goldie Davis, the 7-months-old son of Mrs. Davis of 240 North Tenth-street, this city, his life. Mrs. Davis had gone out early yesterday afternoon and left the two children at home together. The baby was asleep in the folding-bed. While the elder child was playing about the bedstead the looks became unfastened and the bed closed up with the infant inside. When the mother returned home and opened the bed she found her little one suffocated.

A Locomotive's Novel Mishap.

ORILLIA, Jan. 22.—A decidedly novel mishap occurred on the railroad. A light engine running from Gravenhurst to Allandale stopped at Orillia for orders, and here it was found that the front pair of trucks were missing from under the tender. The four missing wheels were located down an embankment two miles north of Severn Bridge. How the wheels became detached or whirled from under the tender without the hind trucks cracking them is hard to understand. The engineer felt no jar and was a most surprised man on seeing how matters stood.

Foster Recovering

OTTAWA, Jan. 22.—For the first time this week Hon. G. E. Foster, Minister of Finance, was able to be in his office all forenoon and dispose of a pile of correspondence and other business. He is suffering yet from his recent attack, but rapidly recovering.

"Woman's Bank" Swindler.

BOSTON, Jan. 22.—Mrs. Sarah E. Howe, notorious as the founder of "The Woman's Bank," died yesterday, friendless and penniless, at a boarding house in Tremont-street of paralysis, aged 65. Nobody ever came to see her except on business.

She received $8 a month from the Government as a soldier's widow. This was not sufficient to support her, and she told fortunes for 25 cents a sitting. Of late she had been taking in from $1.50 to $2.50 per day in this way, and thus kept herself in food and with a roof over her head. She talked sometimes, but not often, about the Woman's Bank swindle

"It was not I," she said always. "I did no swindling. It was my husband's brother's wife."

TORONTO TOPICS.

Board of Trade Elections—Sunday Observance—Prominent Dead.

TORONTO, Jan. 22.—Opponents of Sunday cars do not intend to let the matter rest. At a meeting last night they elected these officers:

President, Hon. Senator Allan.

Vice-Presidents, Rev. D.J. Macdonell, Mr. P.H. Burton, Dr. J.J. Maclaren, Dr. A. G. Watson, Bishop Campbell, and Rev. O.C.S. Wallace.

Secretary, Mr. A. G. O'Meara.

Treasurer, Mr. M. Nasmith.

Committee—Rev. Messrs. Frizzell, Patterson, Sutherland, Langtry, Thomas, Turnbull, Philp, Baldwin and Cavan, Messrs. Gelkie, Withrow, Ashdown, Heakes, S. H. Blake, J.K. Macdonald, Ferguson, Blackly, Hoyles, Sir Daniel Wilson, O'Donoghue, Christie, Elias Rogers, Beverley Jones, W. H. Parr, Thomas Bengough, S. Caldecott, W.J. Gage, R. Kilgour, Commissioner Rees, J. Coleman, ex-Ald. Moses.

With this the meeting broke up, and the first act of the aggressive campaign was over

Board of Trade Elections.

The annual meeting of the Board of Trade was held yesterday afternoon. In importance it was scarcely second to the municipal elections. To a majority of the membership it was even of greater interest. The morning and noon trains brought in a large contingent of outside members, and when the hour of 3 o'clock arrived the spacious marble corridors of the building were thronged with members. The elevators could not carry the members to the rotunda fast enough, notwithstanding that they took up, members and others included, about 1000 persons from 3 to 4 o'clock, and a number trod the marble stairway to the sixth story.

The interest was centered around the three-cornered fight for the second vice-presidency, the president and first vice-president having been elected by acclamation. The aspirants for this coveted office were Messrs. D. W. Alexander, wholesale leather merchant; S. F. McKinnon, wholesale milliner; Elias Rogers, coal merchant.

These are the officers for the ensuing year:

President—H. N. Baird.

First Vice—Hugh Blain.

Second Vice—S. F. McKinnon.

Treasurer—G. M. Rose.

Council—W. Christie, D. R. Wilkie, W. R. Brock, W. D. Mathews, Warring Kennedy, A. A. Allan, George H. Bertram, G. M. Bosworth, A. B. Lee, B. Cumberland, John Donogh, W. B. Hamilton, R. W. Elliot, S. Caldecott, John Earls.

Fraudulent Grain Transaction.

Messrs. Norris & Carruthers, the well-known grain merchants, have a grievance, which in a moral sense is shared by grain men in general. They recently bought 5000 bushels of Canadian red winter from a miller at a point on the Grand Trunk west. It was for export and yesterday Norris & Carruthers were advised that the wheat had been forwarded and accompanying the notification was a sample of the same. The sample was produced on 'Change for the edification of the members. It contained red winter, but what was more a large percentage of it was Manitoban frosted, and pretty badly frozen it was. The remarks of disapproval of the assembled grain men were, to put it mild, strong, and action against the fraudulent seller was suggested. The difference between the price of red winter and frosted is about 30 cents a bushel.

Damages For Libel.

In the Assize Court yesterday afternoon, the case of Scott against the Kemp Manufacturing Company was withdrawn from the jury by Judge Falconbridge, who announced that he had arbitrated between the parties and that settlement had been satisfactorily made.

The next case was that of J. C. Raham of Uxbridge against The Evening News and Edward Trout, publisher of The Monetary Times, both of this city. Raham said that certain publications in these papers had so injured his credit that he had not been able to procure stock for his business, and that the Dominion Bank had refused to give him credit and to discount a note for him. He claimed $10,000 damages.

The defence stated that the publications were not made with any intention of injuring Raham.

The judge consented with the counsel that each of the papers give the plaintiff $30.

The Dead.

The death of Mr. Samuel Marshall of 12 Denison-avenue removes another old and well-known citizen of Toronto. He was a native of Glasgow and was born at Newton Stewart in 1809. He enlisted in the 93rd Highlanders in 1827 and served with that regiment for 20 years, part of the time in Barbadoes and a number of years in Canada.

The death is announced of Rev. Dr. Milligan, who had many friends in Toronto. He died at Houghton-le-Spring, Durham, Eng.

Escaped Convict Caught.

MONTREAL, Jan. 22.—Philip Lienburg, alias Morgan, while in Chicago jail on a charge of burglary and assault with intent to kill, escaped. He was arrested here yesterday.

A Cut in Coal.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 22.—It was learned to-day that the Lehigh and Milwaukee Coal Company made an average cut of 50c. per ton in coal prices. Other companies will meet the cut.

Teachers Scarce in the Northwest.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 22.—There is such great scarcity of public school teachers in Manitoba that the Government has decided to greatly reduce the session of the teachers' training school.

Freddie Gebhard's Jab of Gold.

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y., Jan. 21.—Fred Gebhard, the rich society swell of New York City, took his first jab of bichlorate of gold to-day. He longs to conquer his rum habit by the Keeley treatment.

A PHANTOM CREW HAD SHE.

A Canadian Flying Dutchman With All Sails Set.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—The Italian bark Colombo D., which arrived yesterday from the Mediterranean, brought in a story which is a mystery of the sea. When she was about 150 miles west of the Bermudas a vessel was sighted drifting about aimlessly, with all her sails set. The Colombo D. ran near enough to her to read the name on her stern. She proved to be the bark Hutchings Brothers of Halifax.

Not a soul was on her decks and the calls from the Colombo elicited no response. The vessel had been abondoned, though she was in good condition. Why she was abandoned is the mystery. She was a new vessel and was on her second trip.

The Colombo's crew did not board the vessel, as night came on soon after she had been sighted, and the Italian vessel stood on its course.

It is possible that all the crew of the Hutchings Brothers may have died of yellow fellow and that the bodies of those who died last are still aboard of her. She is a bark of 497 tons and is owned by Hutchings Brothers.

Ship on Fire.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—The British steamer City of Dundee, which has arrived at Liverpool from Norfolk, reports that on Jan. 11, in latitude 44 degrees north, longitude 43 degrees west, she sighted what was apparently a large steamer burning fiercely. At the time the City of Dundee saw the fire the vessel had been burned almost to the water's edge. The City of Dundee searched in the vicinity in the hope of finding some of the boats from the burning vessel, but she found nothing. The City of Dundee saw a sailing vessel in the vicinity, and concluding that the people from the burning vessel were aboard of her she proceeded.

Billiard Match.

The Wizard of the Cue Easily Defeats Slosson in the New York Billiard Match.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—The Lenox Lyceum Theatre never had a thousand more enthusiastic people than it did last night, when George Slosson of New York met Jacob Schaefer, Chicago to compete for the 14-inch balk-line billiards championship of the world.

The match was for $1000 a side, the net box office receipts and the Brunswick-Balke-Callender silver emblem.

The betting men seemed to favor Slosson at first, offering 5 to 4, but there were Schaefer men present who asked no odds.

Pincas Levy of Philadelphia acted as referee.

It was 8.25 when Slosson made his first play, scoring two points. Schaefer, confident and smiling, failed to score and made a second similar failure, but on the third inning he rolled out 27 points, mostly by round-the-table shots.

Then Slosson wiped his hands and made 32.

In the fifth inning Schaefer made 33 points, which Slosson followed up with a run of 37, leaving the score 94 to 63 in favor of the New Yorker.

The succeeding innings were uneventful until the ninth when Schaefer made 28 only to be followed by a splendid spurt by Slosson who made 65 giving him a lead of 67 points.

In the 11th inning, however, the Chicagoan ground out 73, which Slosson followed up by 18.

In the 15th Slosson made a run of 43 by careful rail play, which, on even innings, left the score 234 to 192 in favor of Slosson.

In the next inning Schaefer, on his 40th point, made so brilliant a masse shot that the spectators stood up in their seats and fairly went wild with enthusiasm. On his 54th point he repeated this performance. When he passed the previous best score of the match—73—he was generously applauded. The little Napoleon of billiards had piled up 155 points before he flunked, leaving the score 347 to 234. On the 104th shot he made one of the most brilliant shots ever seen on the green cloth a long draw from a kiss. Slosson in this inning made 22 points, the score on even innings thus being 247 to 256 in favor of Schaefer.

In the 16th inning Slosson by careful play managed to make 38 and Schaefer followed with 51. Slosson then made 24 points, fully half of which were round the table shots.

Slosson for several innings seemed somewhat nervous, falling down after making 10 in the 20th inning on a simple cushion draw. The Wizard, however, showed nerve and skill in equal quantities, and on his 21st inning made 101 points.

Until the 24th inning the game was uninteresting, but then the New Yorker was able to gather them and together with a number of brilliant 4-cushion shots managed to make 68, leaving the score 600 to 407 in favor of Schaefer. But then the latter made 56. Slosson failed to score and the Wizard made 68 more.

Slosson's adherent and backers began to lose courage and as they were in preponderdence it was something of a millancholy crowd in the little lyceum. But in the 26th inning Slosson picked up, and by as fine exhibition of billiards as has ever been seen in America including draws, carons, streigth cushions and twice arounds made 119 points. The ironic of it was that he fell down on a simple shot that any man among the cohort of spectators might have made a simple carom from the white.

On the 31st he made 21 giving him a total of 551 but in the next inning Schaefer was 784, or within 16 points of running out the game.

Slosson then played good billiards and made in his next two innings a total of 42. In his next inning he made 20 but on the 34th Schaefer gathered the balls and ran out the game easily by a score of 800 to 562. Schaefer's average was 23 9-17, while Slosson's was 17 31-33. Highest run, Schaefer 151, Slosson 199.

A New Mexico Collision.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Jan. 23.—Shortly after midnight a Raymond and Whitcombe special train going west and an Atlantic and Pacific train coming east loaded with passengers collided at Blue Water, 10 miles west of Albuquerque. Four employes were killed, Engineer Taylor and Fireman William Heaggy of the passenger train, Engineer Moore of the special and extra Conductor Moran. The fireman of the special had a leg cut off. No serious injury to passengers.

Mortuary Statistics.

OTTAWA, Jan. 23.—The mortality returns for Canadian cities for last month show a large increase over the corresponding period for last year. In Montreal the deaths were 484 or 2.83 per 1000; Toronto, 1.39 per 1000 Quebec, 2.88; Hamilton, 1.34; Ottawa, 1.78; Winnipeg, 1.94; Victoria, B.C., 1.66.

CRIPPLES CREMATED.

INDIANA SURGICAL INSTITUTE WAS A VERITABLE FIRE TRAP.

A Horrible Spectacle—Sixteen Bodies Burned Beyond Recognition Already Taken From the Ruins—Screaming Women Call in Vain for Aid—List of the Injured.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 23.—The fire at the Indiana Surgical Institute last night was more serious than heretofore reported.

The flames broke out just before midnight in the old annex, a block separated from the main building by just a narrow bridge. Before the fire was discovered the whole interior was ablaze. The building was a veritable firetrap.

The institute had about 250 inmates, most of whom were helpless cripples.

When the fire department arrived, the windows were full of screaming, moaning cripples and the scene was one of horror beyond description.

Where Death Ran Riot.

On the third and fourth floors the horrible work was done. The buildings were a network of narrow halls, entrances and stairways. The fire could not have chosen a better place for its destructiveness. In the small rooms throughout the building were from one to four beds, all occupied by patients, many of whom were perfectly helpless. When they became aware of their peril their fright was awful. They became frantic in their efforts to reach places of safety.

Where the dining room and kitchen were the building was gutted. Above these two departments on the third and fourth floors were the sleeping apartments of the patients. When the fire was discovered every means of escape was cut off and many perished.

Rooms on the third and fourth floors of the main building and nearest the alley were the scenes of the greatest fatalities. In one room were two women, both of whom perished.

The entire rear half of the inside of the Georgia-street portion of the building fell in. The debris completely filled the first story, and when the firemen began their search for the dead bodies they were obliged to commence work on a level with the second floor. It will be several days before they can hope to reach the bottom.

Twenty Killed.

Seventeen bodies were found in the wreck, and three victims died yesterday, making a total of 20.

The injured number 21, of whom four will die.

Five bodies were taken out this morning. They were roasted alive, the skin having peeled off from the bodies. In some instances their faces were turned off. They were in their night clothes, and there is absolutely nothing by which they could be identified.

This afternoon the ashes and cinders were washed from the dead, and hundreds viewed the blackened remains.

Awful Scenes.

The scenes attending the conflagration beggar description. Just as the department arrived on the scene a woman appeared at a third story window. The flames within made a frightful background and her form stood out in bold relief. She wrung her hands and screamed for help while the smoke rolled up in angry black wreaths about her.

Chief Webster at once realized her critical condition and shouted at the top of his voice:

"Hold on; hold on; don't jump. For God's sake don't jump. We'll get you out in a moment."

A savage roar of the flames and a creaking, crashing sound was the only reply that came back to him, and scarcely had the words of appeal left his lips when the woman with a shriek of agony leaped into space. With dishevled hair her form descended rapidly, the bursts of flames displaying the deathly pallor which overspread her face. The body struck the stone flagging but a few feet from where the chief stood and was picked up in the pangs of death and removed across the way.

Mother and Child.

At a window on the upper floor a panic-stricken mother was seen struggling in an effort to throw open the window. In one arm she clasped her child, which was a mere infant. She clutched at the windowcasing and finally succeeded after frantic efforts in reaching the air and received relief from the stifling smoke and death-dealing flames within.

No ladders were at hand and her pitiful appeal went unheeded. Her face was deathly pale and her form partially nude. The flames were closing in about her and she looked back into the furnace of death, then down to the pavement below, as if choosing between two things, either of which seemed certain death.

Realizing finally that the end was at hand, she clasped the babe to her breast, tossed the precious load out of the window and gave her life to the flames within.

Fireman O'Brien had watched the heart-rending scene from below, and as the child left the arms of its mother he planted himself firmly with outstretched arms underneath the window. The baby tumbled into O'Brien's arms unhurt by the fall.

A Fireman's Heroism.

The heroism of Fireman J. Loucks of chemical company No. 2 will be long remembered. While the flames were shooting in forked tongues from the windows facing Illinois-street he ascended the extension ladders to the upper floor. As he reached the window sill he was met by Firemen Webber Robinson, who had pushed his way through the smothering smoke with a child in his arms.

"Take this baby, for God's sake, Loucks, and let me breathe," said Robinson, as he pushed his head into the open air. Loucks grasped the child and started downward. He had descended but a few feet when the brave fellow missed his footing and fell headforemost, his legs catching in the rungs of the ladder, doubtless saving his life. He clung to the child pluckily, although his injury was a painful one, his limb being broken.

As he hung there the dense mass of people below turned away from the awful scene, thinking that Loucks would perhaps be obliged to loosen his grasp from weakness. Not so, however. He called for assistance and in a twinkling he was reached by two other firemen, who carried the child safely to the ground and tenderly helped Loucks to an ambulance.

Fireman Sim Hoyle of headquarters entered the burning building to help rescue the inmates. He found two women who were crying for help. He seized both and started for a window. When he reached it a ladder was near him but a few feet to one side. The flames and smoke were rapidly enveloping the brave fireman and his burdens. Quickly he pushed one woman out of the window and held her with his teeth by her night-clothes. He held the other woman inside the room, hung himself out and drew the women to him with his foot and descended safely with the women. Hoyle himself was frightfully burned.

A Fireman's Story.

Said Fireman Jim Madden of headquarters: "I will never forget those bricks! My God, it was awful! Those poor caged people, who could not help themselves, screamed until you could scarcely stand to listen any longer. I took a little child out of a Georgia-street window. It was with its mother. I told the lady to stay, I would return for her. When I got part of the way down the ladder I dropped the child into Gid Thomson's arms and started back for the mother, but before I could reach the window she jumped to the sidewalk. I don't know what became of her. In a few minutes I heard a scream, and looking up saw three faces at the fourth story window. They cried for a ladder and we tried to go to them, but before we could reach the window all of them fell back into the flames and were burned up. Those three people had hopes of escaping even up to the time they perished, for at every move of the boys they acted as though they were sure that efforts were being made to rescue them, but it was impossible."

Kneeling in Prayer.

Fireman Morris Donnelly and John Higgins were among those who did many acts of valor. As soon as the hallways had been sufficiently cleared of the smoke to permit an investigation, some of the most horrible scenes were developed.

In one room on the third floor four victims were found dead, kneeling in the attitude of prayer. The windows in the room were up, but their occupants had apparently made no effort to escape. The stifling smoke had overtaken them and seeing no avenue of escape they had become resigned to their fate and as a last hope muttered a prayer to heaven begging the interference of Providence in their behalf.

In a room on the second floor a man was found in bed, dead. The smoke had found its way into the room slowly and he was gradually overcome, expiring without a struggle.

Further along the hallway a young man was found sitting beside an open window, his dead body leaning forward.

Although the occupants were nearly all more or less severely crippled many of them became so frantic that they lost all control and almost invited death by their action. They would rush to a window, cast their eyes below, and realizing that a leap was almost certain death, retreated at once into the room and faced the result.

Ghouls at Work.

Early this morning ghouls began their work among the ruins and no small amount of jewelry and valuables were pilfered by the thieves. The detectives arrested a man who gave his name as Russell Troy. They found him rummaging among the debris and in his pockets were money and other articles which it was thought he had stolen from the effects of the patients.

Many Bodies in the Ruins.

The total loss of life is yet unknown and it may be that many bodies will yet be found when the debris is cleared away.

$20,000 DAMAGES.

A Worthless Law Student Who Ruined a Happy Home Mulcted for This Sum.

TORONTO, Jan. 22.—Thomas Pinkney was a promising young man when he was united in marriage to Miss Kennedy, whose relatives also resided here. Three children were the issue of his marriage. Things went smoothly along until about a year ago when William A. McCord, a law student in an office in this city, and who claimed to be a first cousin of Mr. Pinkney's, was introduced to the family by Mr. Pinkney's father. The former took a fancy to the young fellow, and as he was in meagre circumstances and found difficulty in meeting his expenses, Mr. Pinkney assisted him in every way possible and gave him money to put him through his law examinations. He visited the house very often, and the two men often went to the theatre together. Mr. Pinkney never suspected anything wrong until about the middle of September, when he went on his annual vacation. While in Chicago he received a letter from his wife that led him to believe that everything was not all right. Upon returning home his surmises were proved to have been well founded. He upbraided his wife for perfidy, but promised, for the sake of his own and his children's name, to retain her in the house, provided she would promise to cease communicating with McCord. She promised, but broke her vows in a few days. McCord kept up a clandestine correspondence with her that led to elopement to Detroit about Nov. 6 last.

The couple were arrested there a few days later, and Mr. Pinkney served Mr. McCord with a writ, claiming $20,000.

This morning in the Assize Court the action was taken up by Mr. Justice Falconbridge, but no defence whatever was made by McCord or Mrs. Pinkney, so the full claim was awarded.

Decamps from the City.

STRATFORD, Jan. 24.—Alexander Anderson, for the past three years bookkeeper for the McDonald Manufacturing Company here, is missing. Lately the firm began to suspect that there was something wrong in Anderson's accounts. Finding that he was discovered, Anderson feigned sickness on Saturday last and left the city. The shortage will reach $1000. Anderson is a married man with two or three children.

Killed By An Old Blast.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—The premature explosion of a blast on a vacant lot in East 65th-street this afternoon killed two persons and seriously injured three others.

The explosion was caused by an old blast which had been for some time among the rocks where the men were quarrying.

A Double Hanging.

DANVILLE, Va., Jan. 22.—Jim Lyles and Margaret Lashley, colored, were hanged here to-day for the murder of George Lashley, the woman's husband, in October, 1890. Lyles confessed and declared he alone was responsible for the crime. The woman died declaring that she had no hand in the murder.

Mr. Blake's Nine Day Speech.

THE SITUATION IN QUEBEC.

Mr. Mercier Denies That He Received Any of the Boodle.

MONTREAL, Jan. 22.—The Mercier situation is not particularly unchanged from yesterday.

In connection with the $25,000 check made payable to Mercier in Montreal, to his brother J. A., and C. A. Geoffrion, Q.C., they are out withsworn affidavits to the effect that the money was placed to the ex-Premier's credit here without his knowledge and applied to political purposes by Mr. Geoffrion without Mercier's connivance.

Mr. Tarte, who is at present acting as Mr. Mercier's chief lieutenant, gives the following explanation in Le Canadien of the $25,000: "On Feb. 24 Mr. Mercier spoke at a meeting in Sorel in behalf of Mr. Gouin. Messrs. Tarte, Nantel and Leblanc were there also. It was on that same 24th that the $25,000 were sent from Quebec to the Jacques Cartier Bank at Montreal to the credit of Mr. Mercier. It is well known here that Mr. J. A. Mercier attends to the business of his brother and the latter was in the habit of leaving him checks signed in blank. Having been notified of the transfer of the $25,000 Mr. J. A. Mercier made use of two of these blank checks, drew the $25,000 and handed them on the same day to Mr. C. A. Geoffrion. The ex-Premier, whose every day was disposed of beforehand, never had any knowledge of this transfer of funds and in no way profited by it. The checks, which we have seen, are entirely filled out in the hand of Mr. J. A. Mercier, and we are authorized by Mr. C. A. Geoffrion to state he received the $25,000. Is it too much to expect from the opponents of Mr. Mercier that they will keep in mind these facts, the truth of which cannot be contested?"

La Patrie yesterday came out with a very ominous editorial, intimating in thinly-veiled language that the Liberal party in Quebec would have to depose the ex-Premier.

An Important Question Answered.

"How can I obtain repose and sleep at night?" This important question is asked by thousands who, at the season, are troubled with hacking and continuous coughing and throat irritation. They have tried scores of the advertised remedies of the day without relief or cure. Let us assure all sufferers and anxious inquirers that medical science has produced what they are looking for—Harvard Bronchial Syrup, a remedy that never fails; that is instant in its effects; and that does not produce stomach sickness and constipation of the bowels, as is often the case when common remedies are used. The rest repose and sleep, so much needed and looked for, will certainly come, as well as freedom from cough and irritation, if Harvard Bronchial Syrup is used.

GENTLEMEN,—In 1888 I was severely afflicted with gravel of the kidneys, from which I suffered great pain. I was recommended to try Burdock Blood Bitters, which I did, finding great relief, and after taking four bottles can truly say I am cured, and have not since been troubled. I highly recommend it.

CHARLES HUGHES.

A Montreal Lumber Merchant Attacked on the Public Streets!

A Montreal lumber merchant, Mr. Charles Hughes, has had the misfortune of being attacked at various times on the streets of that city. Mr. Hughes is an estimable gentleman, well-known as a prominent business man, and highly respected by all who have the privilege of his acquaintance.

At first sight it seems almost beyond comprehension that Mr Hughes should have personal enemies, that would encompass him, work evil, and even resort to bodily injury. The facts, however, prove conclusively that the attacks referred to were extremely serious, and that Mr. Hughes' life was in positive danger on several occasions.

Business men of Mr. Hughes' high standing and character are often obliged to take great precautions, so that they may avoid the treacherous foes that would attack them even in the clear brightness of day on our public streets and thoroughfares.

Many of our estimable and honoured citizens have foes in human form, who are actuated by jealousy, envy and malice. We know from long experience that thousands of our Canadian business and professional men are daily beset by foes which are more to be dreaded than the armed assassin, or the enemy who stealthily hides in the cover of darkness for his victim. These deadly foes are unseen and invisible when they commence their subtle and nefarious work; and it requires the utmost care, vigilance and attention, so that the person attacked may cope successfully with them.

Mr. Hughes unfortunately had fallen into the unpitying grasp of these death-dealing enemies, and for three years was almost at their mercy. Mr. Hughes best describes his position in his letter; he vividly pictures his severe sufferings and his efforts to get rid of them, and then in joy he tells us of his triumph and victory as follows:

Office No. 2, 4th Flat,
Montreal District Savings Bank Building,
MONTREAL, August 31st, 1891.

Messrs. Wells & Richardson Co., Montreal:

DEAR SIRS,—Herewith I add my testimony to the infinite benefits I derived from your Paine's Celery Compound. I have been suffering for three years past with nervous debility and indigestion, and a most singular feeling, after my meals, of sickness of the stomach. I have been so giddy at times that I had to remain in the house for several days. The same symptoms of giddiness often and often attacked me while walking in the streets, and were so severe at times that I staggered and had to rest, or would have fallen down. If I happened to go out at night I felt the giddiness so bad that I dread of the darkness. A severe rheumatism I had in one of my legs, caught from working in the cold water in my lumber business, also has kept me weeks in the house.

I shall not mention all the prescriptions I got at various times from different physicians but none of them seemed to assist me or relieve me of my sufferings. However, reading of the immense benefits and cures afforded from your Paine's Celery Compound amongst the Federal soldiers in the late American war, I obtained six bottles of your Compound from Dr. Demers, the druggist in St. Jean Baptiste village, which I used before and after my meals. I continued taking some until I had used some fifteen bottles which completely cured me of all my complaints. I have now been fully six months relieved, and any time I feel indisposed or tired, I get a couple of bottles, which tone me up again and restore my health. I do willingly say that its one of the safest, most pleasant and invigorating medicines extant, and I fully recommend it to any one suffering as I have been.

CHARLES HUGHES,
Lumber Merchant.

Can the statements of any gentleman be more earnest forcible or convincing? This honest letter written by Mr. Hughes, is given with a view of encouraging others in our fair Canada. Its object is not the seeking of fame, publicity and renown. The writer is simply filled with a true desire to communicate to others the glad message that there exists a remedy, known as Paine's Celery Compound, which gives to all who use it new strength, perfect health, renewed activity and untold blessings, even after doctors have failed and other remedies have proved useless.

It seems unnecessary to urge at greater length upon all sufferers the necessity of taking hold upon this great and valuable preparation after the strong testimony given by Mr. Hughes. Scores of our best and most worthy people are daily sending in similar testimony to Mr. Hughes', and we may safely assert without fear of contradiction, that no other remedy known to Canadians enjoys the same popularity and fame to day. In conclusion it may be asked with great seriousness and solemnity — why will our suffering people hesitate and longer doubt, and why will they die?

Hagyard's Yellow Oil.

This great internal and external remedy always allays all pain. It is a specific for croup, and promptly cures coughs, colds, sore throat, sprains, bruises, burns, cuts, wounds, etc. Good for man or beast. Stands all tests. Sold everywhere. Price 25 cents. Hagyard's Yellow Oil. dw

Makes Flesh and Blood.

When the system is all run down and there seems to be no hope of obtaining nourishment for the body by the ordinary process of food supply and digestion, when the body is sinking fast, then is the time to use Miller's Emulsion of pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil. It always works wonders, because it is a flesh and blood maker, and contains all the constituents for nourishment found in wheat, in fact Miller's Emulsion is a perfect "staff of life" and has saved and cured thousands. In big bottles, 50c. and $1, at Peterborough Druggists. dw

And I'll meet ye, honey! in de mornin'.

When de stars fell down, I 'member it well,
Yet I don't know de year I was born in,
But I goes by a star dat neber has fell,
So I'll meet ye, honey! in de mornin'.

I mind back yonder in old Tennessee
How de speculators come without a warnin',
But now I'se a waitin' for de Lord to come for me
And I'll meet ye, honey! in de mornin'.

What hab I done dat de Lord let me stay
A waitin' so long for de dawnin'!
The earth is gettin' dark and a fadin' away,
But I'll meet ye, honey! in de mornin'.

Don't cry, chile! I must say good night,
For your mammy's done had a warnin',
To close up de shutter and put out de light,
But I'll meet ye, honey! in de mornin'.

Has Five Husbands.

SAGINAW, Mich., Jan. 22.—Eliza Willard, under arrest here on a charge of bigamy, has had a varied career as a wife. It is alleged that in 1882 she went from this city to Alpena and in a short time was married to Frank Miller. A half year later she left him and went to Sheboygan and within a month, it is alleged, was married to William Howard, and with him she managed to live three years, and then she sought other regions. She lived two years with Tug Wilson at Crow Island and in 1888 she once more was married, this time to Joseph Griffin of Harrison.

Cure for A Constipation and Headache

Dr. Silas Lane, while in the Rocky Mountains, discovered a root that, when combined with other herbs, makes an easy and certain cure for constipation. It is in the form of dry roots and leaves, and is known as Lane's Family Medicine. It will cure sick-headache in one night. For the blood, liver and kidneys, and for clearing up the complexion it does wonders. Druggists sell it at 50 cents package. dw

"Like Magic,"

THE effect produced by Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Colds, Coughs, Croup, and Sore Throat are, in most cases, immediately relieved by the use of this wonderful remedy. It strengthens the vocal organs, allays irritation, and prevents the inroads of Consumption; in every stage of that dread disease, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral relieves coughing and induces refreshing rest.

"I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my family for thirty years and have always found it the best remedy for croup, to which complaint my children have been subject."—Capt. U. Carley, Brooklyn, N. Y.

"From an experience of over thirty years in the sale of proprietary medicines, I feel justified in recommending Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. One of the best recommendations of the Pectoral is the enduring quality of its popularity, it being more salable now than it was twenty-five years ago, when its great success was considered marvelous."—R. S. Drake, M. D., Bellot, Kans.

"My little sister, four years of age, was so ill from bronchitis that we had almost given up hope of her recovery. Our family physician, a skilful man and of large experience, pronounced it useless to give her any more medicine; saying that he had done all it was possible to do, and we must prepare for the worst. As a last resort, we determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and I can truly say, with the most happy results. After taking a few doses she seemed to breathe easier, and, within a week, was out of danger. We continued giving the Pectoral until satisfied she was entirely well. This has given me unbounded faith in the preparation, and I recommend it confidently to my customers."—O. O. Lepper, Druggist, Fort Wayne, Ind.

Already over forty ladies and gentlemen have been enrolled, and Mr. Ketcham expects to have some sixty voices in all. The members of the different church choirs have gone into the practice enthusiastically. So far rehearsals have been held weekly on Tuesdays, but next week Monday will be the date, owing to the G.T.R. concert intervening. The cantata will be presented early in March.

We Would Like This Read.

In this day's issue of the EXAMINER will be found an advertisement from Mr. J. J. Sheehy. It is well worth reading, especially to any one requiring the particular class of goods which he advertises. Mr. Sheehy has been a constant advertiser in this paper for the past six years, and evidently thinks that if a thing "is worth doing, it is worth doing well." His adv. are always brief and to the point, and at once impress the reader with their genuineness. Mr. Sheehy assures us that the line he always follows is this—when you have a special line advertise it, and advertise it well, and when, as the result, the customers ask for what has been advertised, be sure to have just such goods as you have promised them and at the prices quoted.

Local Legal.

In the chancery division of the High Court of Justice in Toronto on Friday the following judgment was given:

LEONARD v. TOWN OF PETERBOROUGH.—Judgment on appeal by the defendants from the judgment of MacMahon, J., who tried the action at Peterborough, in favour of the plaintiff. Action for damages and an injunction in respect of the opening up of Water street, in the town of Peterborough. The learned trial judge found that no street existed, and that the defendants were liable to the plaintiffs for damages because of the opening up of a highway upon the plaintiff's land. The chancellor held that the defendants were within the protection of sec. 549 of the Municipal Act. Meredith, J., held that the plaintiff's remedy was compensation under the Municipal Act and not by injunction. Appeal allowed and action dismissed with costs, unless the plaintiff agree (within 30 days) to the retention by the defendants of the strip encroached upon, in which case no costs. Shepley, Q. C., and R. B. Edwards (Peterborough) for the defendants. Watson, Q.C., for the plaintiff.

Otonabee Lodge I.O.O.F., meet Monday evening in their lodge room.

Bro. A. McFarlane, District No. 5, (Peterborough) writes to the Dominion Oddfellow that each lodge in his district has had a prosperous term, and the outlook for the present term very bright. There are no signs of premature decay in all these interesting reports which are daily coming in.

Peterborough Lodge I. O. O. F., No. 111 had a very satisfactory team practice in the third degree last night. It is expected that the full paraphernalia for the team will be on hand for next Tuesday night. With their new team regalia and their new lodge room (in prospect) Peterborough Lodge will be able to show the way in exemplifying the work in a first class manner.

An "International" Debate.

The champions' address in Peterborough post office. Lindsay may lay claim to beating Peterborough in the matters of commercial enterprise and curling, but when it comes to downright brain work and the triumph of the rostrum, this town "rules the roost. Last night the oratorical champions of the respective towns met on the platform and settled the question of argumentative ability by a debate on the subject. "Resolved that men have done more for liberty than they have for fame."

The affirmative was taken by Peterborough who should have been represented by Messrs. J. D. MacKay, Principal of the South Ward School, and Mr. A. McCallum. Owing however to the latter gentleman being unable to fulfil this engagement, Mr. MacKay had to go alone to Lindsay, to uphold the name and fame of Peterborough and right worthily did he fulfil his duty.

Lindsay for the negative were represented by Rev. Mr. Wilson, B.A., and Mr. McLachlan, B.A., two doughty warriors in the field of debate. The former was champion debater of his term in the University, and the latter had never acknowledged defeat on the debating platform. As the odds were somewhat uneven, two to one. Mr. MacKay asked permission to speak twice. This was not allowed but Mr. Hardy of the Lindsay Collegiate Institute was told off to assist him Mr. Hardy was taken at a disadvantage, owing to his not having had any preparation, but promised to do his best as a substitute for Mr. McCallum. The judges were Rev. Mr. McCann, and Messrs. Harrington and S. Moore, all of Lindsay, so that Peterborough was again at a further disadvantage. However at the close of the speeches and arguments, the judges decided by a vote of two to one that the Peterborough side had won, the affirmative being sustained.

This is a very creditable victory for Peterborough, and a feather in the cap of both gentlemen who represented it, particularly so considering the past record of both the Lindsay gentlemen. The verdict, it may be said, was awarded Peterborough, not out of courtesy, but on the merits of the arguments adduced. There was a good attendance of listeners at the debate, who apparently quite appreciated the arguments advanced pro and con. The debate was held in the Methodist church, the chair being occupied by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Hall.

Sale of Bonded Goods.

Mr. Stapleton conducted a sale on the market square this morning of goods lying in bond and unclaimed at the customs. The goods were offered for sale unopened, so that an intending purchaser could not tell upon what he was bidding. Is not this a mild form of gambling?

King of Medicines

A Cure "Almost Miraculous."

"When I was 14 years of age I had a severe attack of rheumatism, and after I recovered had to go on crutches. A year later, scrofula, in the form of white swellings, appeared on various parts of my body, and for 11 years I was an invalid, being confined to my bed 6 years. In that time ten or eleven sores appeared and broke, causing me great pain and suffering. I feared I never should get well.

"Early in 1886 I went to Chicago to visit a sister, but was confined to my bed most of the time I was there. In July I read a book, 'A Day with a Circus,' in which were statements of cures by Hood's Sarsaparilla. I was so impressed with the success of this medicine that I decided to try it. To my great gratification the sores soon decreased, and I began to feel better and in a short time I was up and out of doors. I continued to take Hood's Sarsaparilla for about a year, when, having used six bottles, I had become so fully released from the disease that I went to work for the Flint & Walling Mfg. Co., and since then on account of sickness. I believe the disease is expelled from my system, I always feel well, am in good spirits and have a good appetite. I am now 27 years of age and can walk as well as any one, except that one limb is a little shorter than the other, owing to the loss of bone, and the sores formerly on my right leg. To my friends my recovery seems almost miraculous, and I think Hood's Sarsaparilla is the king of medicines." WILLIAM A. LEHR, 9 N. Railroad St., Kendallville, Ind.

Self Application of Electricity

FOR MEDICAL PURPOSES

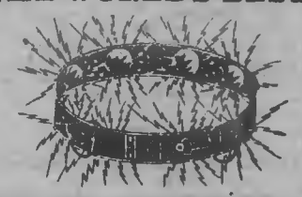
BY THE

DORENWEND ELECTRIC BELT

And Attachments.

HEAD OFFICE—103 Yonge St., Toronto

THE WORLD'S BEST.



ALL diseases curable by Electricity can be treated at home by the Dorenwend Appliances. The Dorenwend is the only legitimate Electric Belt made which fulfils the requirements of Electro-medical science. It is a complete BODY BATTERY. It has an independent Battery, which generates a mild, continuous current of Electricity (without shocks) and can be regulated to suit the strongest man or the weakest child. It is a CURRENT of QUANTITY, not merely a sensation current, and the quantity current is the greatest curative. It is a successful treatment for INDIGESTION, RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, LIVER AND KIDNEY TROUBLES, WEAK BACK, SPINAL DISEASE, HEART DISEASE, NERVOUS DEBILITY, PARALYSIS, VERTIGO, FEMALE COMPLAINTS, IMPOTENCE, SEXUAL DECLINE and all diseases of the Nervous and Muscular Systems.

Remember that the DORENWEND BELT is the very latest invention in this line, and was invented by a scientific electrician, and ranks as the best in the world; we defy anyone to bring proof to the contrary.

Do not class this Belt with the humbug combinations of leather and metal with which the country is being flooded. If you wish to experiment with cheap articles, BUY THEM but, if you want to procure a genuine Electric Belt and one that will be a benefit get a Dorenwend Belt.

Consider the Printer.

Our local contemporary, if it contemplates effecting to discuss municipal politics upon the same lines it has begun with, should, out of consideration to the printer, have the phrase "misrepresentation and abuse," stereotyped. It "bobs up serenely," with such irrelevant frequency that if the phrase referred to were logotyped, the printer, working on an editorial article, would have a "fat take" indeed.

THERE is a curious diversity of taste among smokers as to the kind of pipe they prefer. Some like the clay pipe best, others prefer the briar root, others again the meerschaum, some must have their pipe well seasoned before they can enjoy it, others again must have a new pipe and throw it away whenever it becomes a little old. But though this diversity of taste among them is curious, it is not at all curious that there is substantial unanimity among them about the kind of tobacco to be used. Experience has proved to them that the "Myrtle Navy" brand of Messrs. Tuckett & Son is the genuine article.

Our Oddfellows in Lindsay.

The Lindsay Post says:—On Wednesday evening the excellent degree team of Otonabee Lodge, Peterborough, supplemented by members of the team of Peterborough Lodge of the same "burg," paid a visit to Lindsay Lodge No. 100, I.O.O.F., and gave pleasing exemplification of the dramatic work of the order. On their arrival at the lodge room, and after a brief speech of welcome, they were placed in charge. There being a couple of candidates in waiting, the "initiation" was the first to engage the attention of the visitors, and to say that the work was well done, is expressing it very mildly. But it was in the first and second degrees—with five candidates in charge—that the perfect work of the team perhaps showed to the greatest advantage, and certainly proved a revelation to the majority of those present. Representatives were present from Beaverton, Sunderland, Manilla and Woodville, and, with the resident members of the order, heartily enjoyed the occasion. After the work had been concluded the brethren adjourned to the Simpson House dining room where a sumptuous repast was served in "mine host's" best form, after which a pleasant hour was spent in toasts, speeches recitations, etc., when the brethren took their departure for their respective homes, delighted with the evening's entertainment.

Collegiate Institute Literary Society.

Opening of Their Lecture-Concert Course—Good Attendance—Excellent Programme—Successful Meeting.

The first of the series of concert-lectures in connection with the above important auxiliary to Collegiate Institute work was given in the assembly hall of the Institute building last night. There was a large attendance of parents and friends, in addition to pupils, and all seemed to highly appreciate the entertainment which had been provided.

CHAIRMAN'S ADDRESS.

M. T. Dodds, the president of the Literary Society, took the chair and in a few brief and well chosen remarks welcomed the visitors. He said how glad the members of the society were to see so many present, and hoped that the remainder of the lectures would be as well attended. He concluded by outlining the work of the remainder of the session, and referred to the excellent lectures that would be given to Mr. Fessenden and others. The first number on the programme was a glee "The Morning Fresh is breaking," by the Institute glee club, which was remarkably well rendered. This was followed by a pianoforte duet by Misses Paterson and Hall, which was played in good style.

THE LITERARY TREAT.

Mr. Jefferies, English Master, was next called upon to give his lecture on "The poet and his art." In introducing his subject Mr. Jeffries said, he would not give a lecture in the ordinary sense of the term, but would read an essay he had prepared on the subject. He said he was not going to introduce any new theory, but would mention some of the most prominent characteristics of the different poets of the age, and he illustrated his meaning by means of passages drawn from some of the best poetical works. Mr. Jeffries then spoke of the essential elements of the poetic nature. The first phase of the poetic nature considered was "imagination." This power is made to work in a variety of ways. It presents to our imagination an object or circumstance more forcibly and more vividly than either would present itself. It surrounds the portrayal of an object or circumstance with imagery which adds to it vividness or impressiveness, or gives pleasure by its own suggestiveness or beauty. It clothes abstract conceptions in appropriate concrete forms, thus giving to them greater simplicity and beauty. It gives us a deeper insight into man and nature, discovers for us hidden thoughts and relations, and subtle resemblances that mere understanding would never dream of. Through the art of omission of certain points, the selection of others, and limited exaggeration, it presents to us ideal pictures, more acceptable to our feelings and tastes than real ones, being without either blemish or discord. It creates a realm in which things are mere brain products, having no foundation in fact, and being contrary to discovered truth. The power of a poet's imagination is in proportion to his sympathy with the object seen or the truth presented. When his feelings are aroused, his intellect is informed and kindled, and is enable to penetrate into the inner life of things. Then it is but natural to suppose that the vision beheld is accompanied by a thrill of delight. Hence in the poet imagination is inseparably coupled with emotion. Susceptibility of feeling is therefore another aspect of the poetic nature. The poet is a man with a large and sensitive heart. For inspiration and material he goes straight to the true sources of poetry—his fellow-men, his own heart and external nature. Poets also avail themselves of the great national histories that lie behind them, and their poetry is a record of the age in which they live. When dealing with external nature they impart sensuous pleasure, arouse moral emotion, and often point us to the presence of Him who is the great author of nature.

A function of the poet is to reveal some new truth, or to unveil truths forgotten or hidden from common eyes. Sir Walter Scott did the latter when he turned back the eyes of Scotchmen to their own past history and national life. The poet is often the herald of science, foretokening the discoveries of the man of science. The various phrases of expression were next considered, as well as the several departments of the art. The subject was concluded by a consideration of the poets aim, or the function he fulfils in human society.

Illustrations were taken from Shakespeare, Wordsworth, Thompson, Swinburne, Proctor, Bryant and Shelly.

The remainder of the programme consisted of a vocal solo "Bitter Sweet" by Miss A. Hall, the rendition of which was quite in harmony with the excellence of the other portions of the entertainment. Mr. B. Brooks gave a selection on the cosiphone and the programme closed with "Evening Bells" which was beautifully rendered by the glee club.

If the Institute Literary Society continue to provide such evenings of entertainment as were furnished last night, there can be no question as to their success.

Evangelistic Meetings.

The Evangelist Mr. Meikle addressed a large number of boys last evening in the Y.M.C.A. Hall. He gave them a most interesting and instructive address and was listened to with rapt attention. The subject dealt with was a watch, comparing it to a boy, and was treated in a very novel manner. Every part of a watch and the works were compared to some portion of a boy's life, as the regulator, this was contrasted with conscience. The boys appeared to be very much pleased with the address, and it will no doubt leave its good effect on them.

A self-registering thermometer marked 32° below zero Tuesday night.

Another lively snow storm has set in this Friday afternoon.

As a result of the good sleighing large quantities of wood is passing through the village to town. Prices here is sawed maple $3 per cord, tamarac, $1 75, dry or green.

After a rest of a couple of weeks to get over the scare given him by Mr. T. J. Bird, our enterprising burglar has again been at work, this time Mr. S. Nelson's warehouse was broken into Wednesday night and the safe ransacked but nothing taken.

Mr. Chas. Payton, of Medicine Hat, N.W.T., who has been on a visit to friends in this vicinity for the past month, leaves for his home on Monday.

Our Lakefield school board are getting "toney" as will be seen by the report. They have decided to hold their future meetings in the town hall, considering they will show to better advantage in the comfortable chairs and at the desks of the village council, while their good looks will be better appreciated by the rays of the electric light.

Many remarked the absence of a flag on the tower flag staff of the town hall, last Wednesday during the hours of the funeral service of His Royal Highness the Duke of Clarance. Our corporation are too poor to go to the useless expenditure of a flag and even if they had one, it will take a couple of men and ladders to get it hoisted, for while one has to climb up unto the roof to pull the outside cord, the other goes up into the tower inside to pull the other, and the same performance has to be repeated when it is taken down.

No gospel and song service will be held Sunday evening, owing to the union evangelistic services being held in St. Paul's church, conducted by Evangelist Meikle.

The annual meeting of the ladies' auxiliary will be held on Monday afternoon at 4 p.m. in the Y.M.C.A. parlour. Reports of last year's work and presented and officers for this year elected. Every member and all ladies interested in our work urged to be present.

The International Travelling Commissioner and Bis A. D. C. Arrive To-day.

Colonel McKie the International Travelling Commissioner, who has recently returned from a visit to the Australian Colonies, arrived in town to-day. He was received at the station by the band of the local corps and was escorted through the principal streets of the town. A sketch of his life and work, together with a photo, appeared in the EXAMINER of Thursday.

THE MEETINGS.

Meetings will be held to-night in the barracks, Simcoe street, to-morrow and Monday. On Monday evening he will give an account of his travels around the world.

The Colonel will be assisted by his A.D.C., Staff-Captain Plant, the musical wonder, and Staff-Captain Southall.

Personal.

The Rev. A. McWilliams is now recovering from his sickness.

Mr. Robert Innes is also convalescent from an attack that has kept him to his room for some time.

The many friends of Mr. William Hamilton will be pleased to learn that he is recovering from his recent attack of illness.

Staff-Captain Southall of the Salvation Army, who is to take part in the special meeting, arrived in town this morning.

Mr. Heap, classical master of the Collegiate Institute staff, is very ill with pneumonia, supervening on influenza. At noon his condition showed no improvement.

Professor Ketcham, who has been suffering for some time with an attack of la grippe, is now out again. He will continue conducting the rehearsals in Lindsay next week of the cantata "Queen Esther," which is to be produced in that town in March.

I beg to say that this school is to be strictly conducted on the truest principles of the art, and all the modern and newest society dances are taught in class. I might also add that there are no spectators admitted and the method we use is most comprehensive, enabling the pupil to progress from first lesson, and I would suggest that those who intend to avail themselves of this opportunity to take a thorough course in dancing, should subscribe without delay.

The classes will meet on Monday and Thursday at 8 to 10 p.m. for Ladies and Gentlemen, commencing Monday, 25th inst., and 4 to 5:45 same days for Juveniles.

Classes meet at Opera House, George St.

THE WORK FOR YOUNG MEN

Annual Meeting of the Y. M. C. Association.

Held Last Evening—Reception of Reports—Encouraging State of the Work—The Financial Statement Shows a Balance on Hand—The Election of Officers Postponed.

The annual meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association was held last evening in the Association Hall. It was somewhat disappointing to find that such a few had responded to the call of the Secretary, yet those who attended were well repaid for their presence by the encouraging reports that were presented.

THE CHAIR WAS TAKEN

at 8.30 p.m. by the President, Mr. G. J. Early, and he conducted the devotional exercises, assisted by Mr. Richardson, chairman of the Devotional Committee.

After the opening prayers and hymns, the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The chairman then made a few brief and appropriate remarks, and drew attention to the prosperous state of the various departments of the Association work. He made brief reference to Mr. J. W. Bennett, who was sick in the hospital and who had been an active worker in the Association. He then briefly led the meeting in prayer.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. Geo. Gilchrist reported on behalf of the Invitation Committee.

Mr. A. Hamilton reported on behalf of the Reception Committee, in which he spoke of the duties of the Committee and how they were performed.

Mr. J. Richardson reported on behalf of the Devotional committee and gave the following statistics of the attendance of the various meetings as follows :—

	No. of Meet's.	Att.	Ave.
Sunday morning Bible study	52	478	9
" afternoon Personal Purity Meeting.....	35	1,316	24

Fifty-three had professed to find Christ during the year and ten had signed the temperance pledge.

The treasurer made his annual report which showed a balance in hand.

THE ANNUAL REPORT.

The secretary here read the annual report as follows :—

PETERBOROUGH, January 22nd, 1892.

To the President and Members of the Peterborough Young Men's Christian Association :

Your General Secretary in submitting the annual report desires to acknowledge God's faithfulness to His promises, which have been tested and not found wanting during the year just closed, and to acknowledge the place that the Association holds in the community. Its claims are now well established and generally understood. That it is "a definite work" for young men by young men is steadily kept in view.

SOME STATISTICS.

The Peterborough Association is one of over 4,000 similar organizations scattered through the world, of we have in the United States and Canada 1385, with a membership of 225 500, and 45,756 young men serving on committees, 250 buildings owned, valued at $10,460,000. In the provinces of Ontario and Quebec there are over 50 Associations, including 9 College Associations, with a membership of 10,000 and 1,335 serving on committees ; 14 of these own buildings valued at $395,879.

We have great cause to praise God for the great things he has wrought through us and by us in our local Association. Our motto last year was "go forward" and by His grace our work had been a forward movement throughout the year, and we do sincerely thank Him for the steady progress of the work, for the stability which characterizes it, for the harmony which exists in it, and although removals and deaths have been numerous during the year, our membership has made substantial progress, and the coming to our town of the Edison General Electrical Works has brought us many valuable additions to our work.

CONDITION OF THE MEMBERSHIP.

The membership at present is as follows : Subscribers, 181 ; active, 67 ; associate, 26 ; juniors, 90 ; total, 364, who are from all walks of life. Over twenty young men have left our town and Association during the year, for other cities, carrying with them letters of introduction to the Association where their future home was to be, by the system of transfer of membership tickets, which enables members removing to other places to continue in the Christian fellowship and be made at home, although a stranger in a strange city. This is of the utmost importance to all concerned, for each member can have his membership ticket exchanged and enter fully into the privileges that are provided and he will not be lost to the christian influence of home and he will meet there there who will introduce him to the church he attended at home and be welcomed to the church home, and life to which he belongs.

This we have had the privilege of doing with many young fellows, during the past year.

A RETROSPECT.

Our hopes ran high in expectancy of our "New Home" to be erected during the past year, but after arranging for and pushing with vigor the building canvass under the able personal supervision of Mr. T. S. Cole, Travelling Secretary, we were reluctantly compelled to forego our canvass, on account of our inability to secure the amount stated by the executors of the late Mrs. Nicholls to warrant them in allowing us to proceed with the new building. While it was a great source of disappointment to all yet we believed it was one of the "all things which work together for good," and after many meetings of the directors and special committee, we saw we must get more commodious premises if we were to hold the young men, for the work had outgrown the old quarters

THE NEW PREMISES.

We were able to arrange with Mr. Geo. A. Cox for the premises we now occupy, which will meet the needs of the work for some time to come. We are very grateful for the hearty manner the premises have been fitted to meet the needs of the work by Mr. Cox, and to our Ladies' Auxiliary for their untiring sympathy and energy in furnishing our rooms so elegantly. Our new premises are in close of attraction and a centre of life and activity and attended by a daily average of over one hundred. Our young men are surrounded for so as to mold every side of his three old nature, viz., intellectual, social, physical, and especially spiritual.

THE FREE READING ROOM,

with its plentiful supply of papers (daily and weekly) and periodicals, brings around a large number who would be walking the streets in their leisure hours or in other ways would be tempting Satan to tempt them. It also affords many opportunities for personal work, in which God has blessed us in "rescuing the perishing," and touching by the loving hand of sympathy those wakened by kindness, chords that were broken have vibrated again. Thirteen situations have been secured and many directed to boarding houses,

"WHAT TO DO ? WHERE TO GO ?"

in his spare time. These questions the Association seeks to answer by providing its social parlours for games and chat, its library of books for reference and its tables filled with the leading magazines, educational classes to encourage the pursuits of study, gymnasium and baths for the physical man and Bible classes and religious meetings to instruct in and point to the Lord Jesus Christ who is "the way, the truth and the life." These are not only for the young man, but in order to develop him, so the work may be by young men, fifty from the active membership are serving on committees, which are developing and preparing them for church work.

THE SPIRITUAL WORK.

The Bible classes held during the year more definitely emphasize the importance of personal work and testimony has been given by those who have attended to their value, seeking as they do to ground young men in an intelligent, simple manner in the Word of God, plan of salvation, and methods for successful personal work, and the result has been to make reliable, consistent and persistent workers.

During the "Week of Prayer for Young Men in All Lands," the Rev. Alex. McAuley of Woodville, gave us valuable aid in conducting Bible readings in the afternoon for all, and in the evening evangelistic services, for men only. By these helpful services God's people have been built up and sinners led to Christ Jesus.

The same also can be said of the mission held by Mrs. Baeyertz, the converted Jewess, who, we regret, was unable to complete the services owing to being attacked with the prevailing epidemic, la grippe.

THE RELIGIOUS RESULTS.

We rejoice that throughout the year the religious services have been persistently carried on, and with good results, as the report of the Devotional Committee to be submitted, will show. Many requests for prayer have been received, and 53 have professed Christ as their Saviour. The majority of these have united with the church of their choice.

The general secretary and several of the active members have visited many young men at their homes, or at Nicholls Hospital and elsewhere, to speak a word of comfort, sympathy and encouragement.

Several committee conferences have been held with good results. Much thought and prayer have been given to the work, and although we have not accomplished all we desired, yet marked progress has been made in the christian life by our members.

SOCIAL WORK.

Receptions were given to the "Printers" and the "Edison General Electrical Company," and a New Year's "At Home" by the association ably assisted by the Ladies' Auxiliary. The Y.W.C.T.U. and St. Paul's Y.P.S.C.E. gave receptions to our members. These social gatherings were times of good fellowship and were fruitful in making all feel at home, and were greatly appreciated by the many young men who enjoyed the good cheer and hospitality provided. These did much to cheer the lonely position of those who were away from their home and who felt the coldness and strangeness of everybody. It is such as these we seek to give special attention. The next best thing to "home," home-like attractive rooms and helpful companionship, and we can assure our devoted and indefatigable Ladies' Auxiliary that their labor of love has been blessed of God in reaching and saving somebody's boy, and eternity alone will reveal the good accomplished.

THE ANNIVERSARY AND CONVENTION.

Our anniversary was held on December 4th, when Rev. J. E. Starr, pastor of Elm street Methodist church, Toronto, gave us an eloquent and stirring address on "The Bible the Young Man's Guide Book," which was greatly blessed to all who heard it. We rejoiced to see so large an audience present, although the weather was unfavorable, in St. Andrew's church which was kindly loaned for the occasion by the pastor and the Board of Managers.

This Association was represented at the Provincial Convention held at Kingston in February by Messrs. Arthur Jolley, J. P. Armstrong, C. Collins, John Williams and the General Secretary. It was a time of great refreshing and practical benefit to all the Association workers, throughout the Province, for all these gatherings are very helpful to those who are privileged to attend, by the refining influence on the home work.

REMOVALS AND CHANGES.

In February last Mr. F. G. Saunders left for China to engage in mission work, and where he is making marked progress with the language, and hopes soon to be able to preach the Gospel to those who are sitting in darkness. We rejoice that he is happy in his life work. Mr. Arthur Jolley, one of our most valued active members, received and accepted an urgent call to Association work in Hamilton, which he entered early in December, and he is enjoying the work and winning his way into the hearts of all there, as he did here.

THE FINANCES.

You will see by the treasurer's report, to be submitted, that the Lord has opened the hearts and purses of our citizens and has enabled us to close this year with a balance on hand. This faithful work was accomplished by the untiring energy of Mr. J. W. Bennet, chairman of the Finance Committee, who has not spared himself in bringing our Association to this enviable position we trust it may ever be so. We all regret that Mr. Bennet has been laid aside so long with typhoid fever, and earnestly pray he will soon be able to be with us, to give us the benefit of his counsel and consecrated zeal.

"Y" EXTENSION WORK.

We have done a little on the line of "Extension work.' A number of our members are giving weekly to this fund which seeks to encourage systematic giving among our members, for work at home and abroad among young men. We trust that this year this work will gain a firm hold on our members, and bear an abundant harvest in receiving as well as giving. We have received voluntary offerings, the first Sabbath evening of each month, for work among young men in the foreign field, which amounted to $23.62. Of this amount $8 has been sent to Mr. F. G. Saunders, as gifts from this fund. It is for you to say how the balance shall be disposed of.

Our Junior branch is bright with promise and by the Lord's help we shall make it an important factor in the future work of this Association.

THE HOY HAND OF DEATH.

Death has been reaping a rich harvest among our members during the past year, several valuable and consecrated young men have been called home to rest, as follows :

On April 7, FRANK J. PARKER.
On July 29, WILLIAM HOLLAND.
On Oct. 3, WILLIAM A. SMITH.

All were active members and were loved for their quiet, consistent Christian life, and "though dead yet speaketh."

There have also died Rev. G. H. Davis, and Messrs. W. C. Nicholls and J. L. Gower, who were subscribers to our work,

W. H. COMSTOCK, Brockville, Ont.
DEAR SIR,—Your "Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills" are the best regulator for the system that humanity can use. Life is as the time-piece : frail and delicate are many of its works. A tiny particle of foreign substance adhares to the smallest wheel in the works, and what is the result?—at first, only a slight difference is perceptible in its time-keeping, but wait you ; as the obstruction grows, the irregularity becomes greater, until at last, what could have been rectified with little trouble, in the beginning, will now require much care in thoroughly cleansing the entire works. So it is in human life—a slight derangement is neglected, it grows and increases, imperceptibly at first, then rapidly, until what could, in the beginning, have been cured with little trouble, becomes almost fatal. To prevent this, I advise all to purify the system frequently, by the use of Morse's Pills, and so preserve vigor and vitality.
Yours faithfully,
H. F. ATWELL.

THE WORK FOR YOUNG MEN

and always had a kind word of encouragement. Our loss is great, but these dear ones have entered into rest and we can say, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

THE MOTTO FOR 1892.

In conclusion we have to recount again the mercies of the Lord our God in the past, and trust Him more fully in the future. We propose to give still more attention to Bible study during this year, and let our members see that our motto for 1892 is true. "The entrance of thy Word giveth light. Thy Word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path," and in its power we shall, by giving our time, and as God preserves us our means, and each member can do his part by giving more than a membership fee, and the public by more generally and generously supporting this work and the cause of God among young men, and we active members do more aggressive personal work by living our motto for 1891—"Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong," for "we can do all things through Christ who strengthens us." We are believing for showers of blessing, which will surely come if we are individually true to our motto and by God's grace it shall be.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

(Signed) R. J. COLVILLE,
General Secretary.

OTHER REPORTS.

Mr. John VanEvery, one of the junior members, presented the report of the junior branch, which was a very carefully and thoughtfully prepared one. He spoke of the general prosperity of the branch, and referred to their new home as being very well adapted for its purpose.

Mr. E. A. Mannel reported briefly with respect to the "Extension Fund."

The members present signified their gratitude for the encouraging reports by singing "Praise God from Whom all Blessings Flow."

The reports as read were then received.

It was here decided that the disposal of the $15 left in the extension fund should be left in the hands of the general secretary to be disposed of for foreign work as he thinks best.

A committee was then appointed to condense the secretary's report and have it published, together with the financial statement.

Some earnest words were here addressed to the meeting by Mr. G. M. Roger and the secretary with reference to the primary aims and objects of the Association.

The election of officers and directors was then postponed until Friday night, the 29th inst., after which the meeting adjourned.

Advice for Canadians!

We strongly advise those who have failed to find a cure for headaches to make a trial of Paine's Celery Compound. Never use opium, morphine or bromides; they are exceedingly hurtful and dangerous and lead on to fearful results. Paine's Celery Compound is reliable, and gives quick relief in the worst cases. Try it, sufferer, without delay.

A TRAGEDY OF THE SEA.

A TANK STEAMER ON FIRE IN MID-OCEAN.

All the Crew Supposed to Have Perished—One Million Gallons of Crude Petroleum in a Blaze—Unsuccessful Attempt to Rescue a Couple of the Seamen.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—The steamer Egyptian Monarch, Captain Irwin, at this port from New York, reports that 1 a.m. Jan. 16, in lat. 43 north, long. 19 west, she sighted a wooden vessel apparently of American build on fire and burning furiously.

Judging from the dense black smoke and the odor, Capt. Irwin came to the conclusion that the burning vessel was laden with oil. As the steamer approached the burning craft it was seen that her masts were gone. Her bowsprit was standing, and to it could be seen clinging two men.

A life boat on the steamer was hastily cleared away to rescue these men, but before it could be lowered the bowsprit fell and the two men were precipitated into the sea. Efforts were made to find them, but they were not afterwards seen.

A tremendous sea was running at the time and it is more than likely that if the crew had managed to get away from their vessel they were drowned by the capsizing of the small boats.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—There are two tank steamers of the Standard Oil Co. that should be in the latitude and longitude reported by the Egyptian Monarch on the date mentioned. The tank steamer Bear Creek left Philadelphia on January 6th with a cargo of 1,000,000 gallons of oil. Another steamer is the Alleghany, bound for Marseilles with a million and a quarter gallons of crude oil. She left New York Jan. 1. The tank steamers carry a crew of 35 men all told, and the chances of escape in case of fire or explosion are considered to be very slight. In addition to the tank steamers the Standard Oil Co. has a large ship, the Lochana, which left this port for London about Dec. 15. She carries a cargo of naphtha and is supposed to be near where the vessel reported by the Egyptian Monarch is said to be.

Newfoundland Delegates Still Urging the Ratification of the Bond-Blaine Treaty —The Fast Mail Service—The United Empire Trade League and Preferential Tariffs.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—Hon. Mr. Harvey is still here on behalf of the Newfoundland Government urging the colonial office to secure the imperial sanction to the proposed Bond-Blaine treaty that the same may be ratified by the United States and the Newfoundland Legislature this spring.

Newfoundland urges that Canada will not suffer by the treaty and in any case has no right to intervene in a purely Newfoundland affair.

Further, it is urged that if Newfoundland must wait till Canada negotiates a treaty with the United States she will wait till doomsday.

Canada, however, maintains that a unity of policy regarding the North Atlantic fisheries should be preserved and that Newfoundland must retreat from her present irreconcilable attitude towards Canadian fishermen.

He thought it probable that the colonial office would make a restoration to the Canadian fishermen of their freedom of action in Newfoundland waters a condition upon sanction to the treaty with the United States.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—Yesterday's influential deputation to the Canadian Government offices, which was received by Mr. Colmer, the secretary in Sir Charles Tupper's absence, owing to influenza, is again attracting attention to the Canadian fast mail service. It seems evident, however, that Canada must defer all hopes for the completion of the scheme till an Imperial subsidy has been obtained. The British Government has already been formally approached by Canada for aid to both the Atlantic and Australian services, the vessels to be used as armed cruisers. It's understood that seeing the prospect of Plymouth becoming a port of call influential members of the Cabinet and Parliament who are concerned in Plymouth are being induced to press the question upon Mr. Goschen.

This will help to meet the influence of Liverpool in favor of a modified service only slightly better than that now running. The friends of a fast service think that Imperial aid to the extent of £50,000 annually will place the commercial success of the project beyond doubt.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—The United Empire Trade League is holding a series of meetings in large towns to bring pressure to bear on parliament to rescind the treaties which prevent a preferential trade between Britain and her colonies.

Speaking at Birmingham last night, Howard Vincent said he found Canada anxious to throw off foreign shackles and give better terms to their fellow-Britons, if the Mother Country would give Canada better terms.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 23.—During services in a church at Slobodskoi in the Government of Niatka, the roof gave way and fell upon the worshippers beneath. A scene of the wildest excitement followed. The villagers rushed to the scene and worked heroically to rescue the persons imprisoned by the falling timbers, boards, etc. The wreckage was soon cleared away, when it was found that 50 persons had been either killed or injured.

Princess May Can't Marry.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—It is not generally known that, by the provisions of an old statute, any princess who shall be betrothed to an English prince royal in the direct line of succession to the throne, shall not, in the event of the death of her affianced husband, be allowed to contract another marriage within five years of the demise of the prince. This provision adds further gloom to the already dismal surroundings of Princess May of Teck, and it is possible that, as some sort of a solace to her in her deep trouble, she will be raised to the rank of "Royal Highness" by the Queen.

A French Avalanche.

PARIS, Jan. 23.—An avalanche occurred last night near Dieppe Dale, in the department of the Seine, Inferieure. A high precipice, without a moment's warning, crashed down with thundering noise upon two buildings used as laundries and another house, completely burying them. Twenty persons, men, women and children, were taken from the ruins alive; all injured. Two women were taken out dead, their bodies being frightfully mangled.

Stephanie to Wed Again.

VIENNA, Jan. 23.—The announcement is made of the betrothal of the Archduchess Stephanie, widow of the Crown Prince Rudolph, whose death on Jan. 30, 1889, caused such a widespread scandal, to Prince Miguel of Braganza. Stephanie is the daughter of King Leopold of Belgium. Prince Miguel of Braganza resides in Hungary.

Shot By a Companion.

HAMILTON, Jan. 23.—Albert Long, the 18-year-old son of Mr. D. H. Long of Johnstreet south, was killed yesterday by the accidental discharge of a shot-gun in the hands of W. Gowland. The boys, who were shooting in Fillman's bush, Glanford, were climbing over a fence and were larking, when Gowland's hand struck the muzzle of his gun, which was instantly discharged, the entire contents lodging in his companion's body and causing almost instant death.

A Canadian Girl Quarrels With Her Lover and Goes Crazy.

CHICAGO, Jan. 22.—Disappointed because her lover refused to marry her, Hannah Boyd, pretty and graceful, was taken from her aunt's home, No. 755 South Halsted-street, a raving maniac. She is a dressmaker by trade, and when she came to this city from her Canadian home she commenced work. Miss Boyd became acquainted with Max Dietrich, a coachman. Max paid considerable attention to her, had promised to marry her, and the wedding day was not far off. Last Sunday night Dietrich called at the house, and before he went away quarreled with his sweetheart and declared that he would break his promise of marriage, and that he would never see her again.

The young woman's mind seemed to become affected at once. She raved in her sleep and kept crying out, "Max! Max!" until she lost all power of reason. All night she kept muttering, "Max, you do not love me; what shall I do?"

Yesterday morning she was sent to the detention hospital.

Would Have Saved Much Expense.

BRACEBRIDGE, Ont., Jan. 23.—Charles Hastings, a former Muskoka teacher, was tried yesterday and acquitted on the charge of placing stones on the track on July 16, 1891, in an attempt to derail a train. The man observed in the act of committing the offence was masked. From last August until a few days ago a detective has been tracing Hastings, visiting Kingston, Napanee, Stirling, Belleville, Clarendock and back to Kingston, where he was detained. He says had he known he was wanted he would have come at once. It seems he could have been got very much sooner and much cheaper by advertising for him.

Which Caused a Sensation.

SMITH'S FALLS, Ont., Jan. 23.—Eighteen months ago the daughter of James Latrace mysteriously disappeared and it was supposed she had been murdered. Government detectives investigated the case without being able to trace the girl. Last week it was learned that the girl was alone and well in New York State. Now her father has disappeared.

It seems that a few days ago Latrace entered the home of a Mr. Bradford in the village and attempted a criminal assault upon Mrs. Bradford. He was brought before a J.P. at Newbliss and fined only $2. Mr. Bradford discovered then that he had made a mistake in not entering the charge for criminal assault and so he at once went to Brockville to take further steps. Latrace hurriedly left, then drove to Smith's Falls, took the train and at present his whereabouts is not known.

Made Love to Nellie McHenry.

BROOKLYN, N.Y., Jan. 23.—During the performance of "A Night at the Circus" at the Bedford-avenue Theatre last night a crank managed to pass the stage door and making his way to the dressing room of the leading lady, Miss Nellie McHenry, he fell on his knees and made violent love to her. He told her in fevered speech that he had adored her for six years past from the time of her engagement with the Troubadours. Thrusting a note in her hand he wanted to marry her on the spot. The affrighted actress rushed out on the stage pursued by the crank, who gave to the public a demonstration of ardent love in realistic manner. Miss McHenry's scream frightened some of the audience, while others, thinking it a part of the play, applauded loudly. The property man at this juncture hustled the crank off the stage and into the street.

His Brains Beaten Out.

MACLEOD, N.W.T., Jan. 23.—The police are in pursuit of one Frank Ford, against whom a coroner's jury have returned a verdict of having been the cause of the death of a Frenchman named Maghow by beating out his brains with the barrels of a revolver. The two men were journeying north into Alberta intending to smuggle into the country three large kegs of whisky. They occupied the same seat of Ford's buckboard when the occurrence took place.

Trouble Among Montreal Tailors.

MONTREAL, Jan. 23.—Last night United States Special Agent J. Converse Smith of Boston, Deputy United States Collector Twohey, stationed in Montreal, and Nicholas Sorrensky, a Montreal tailor, were arrested at the instance of J. J. Milloy, another city tailor, on a charge of conspiring to secure his arrest when passing through the States on a charge of smuggling. United States Consul General Knapp secured their release on bail. The defendants claim it a big game of bluff.

Died From His Injuries.

ORANGEVILLE, Jan. 23.—After nearly a month's suffering Alexander Smith, the Toronto young man whose leg was amputated by a C.P.R. train at Caledon station on Christmas eve, died at Burrell's Hotel yesterday morning. Blood-poisoning set in and was the immediate cause of death. Smith was about 30 years of age and a school teacher by profession.

Witnesses with Defective Memories.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 23.—The investigation into the charges against Police Commissioner Herchmer is in progress at Regina. About all that has come out yet is that he strongly supported Tweed against Davin in the general election and urged men under him to do likewise. Some of the witnesses thus far are afflicted with uncommonly defective memories.

Died at the Portage.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 23.—At Portage la Prairie George Edington, of Imperial Bank, died last night of pneumonia after a week's illness. The remains were sent to Woodstock, Ont.

Scratched 28 Years

A Scaly, Itching, Skin Disease With Endless Suffering Cured by Cuticura Remedies.

If I had known of the CUTICURA REMEDIES twenty-eight years ago, it would have saved me $200 0 and an immense amount of suffering. My disease (psoriasis) commenced on my head in a spot not larger than a cent. It spread rapidly all over my body, and got under my nails. The scales would drop off me all the time, and my suffering was endless and without relief. One thousand dollars would not tempt me to have it disease over again. I am a poor man, but feel rich to be relieved of what some of the doctors said was leprosy. Hence the word, psoriasis, etc. I cannot praise the CUTICURA REMEDIES too much. They have made my skin as clear and fr e from scales as a baby's. All I used of them was $5 worth. If you had been here and said you would have cured me for $200 0, you would have had the money. I looked like the picture (No. 2, page 47) in your book, "How to Cure Skin Diseases," but now I am as clear as any person ever was. Through force of habit I rub my hands over my arms and legs to scratch once in a while, but to no purpose. I am all well. I scratched twenty-eight years, and it got to be a kind of second nature to me. I thank you a thousand times.

DENNIS DOWNING, Waterbury, Vt.

GOSSIP FROM ACROSS SEA

THE PRINCE OF WALES AND THE WEDDING SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Probability That They May Be Set Apart for a Memorial to the Duke of Clarence—Emperor William Goes Shooting When He Hears the Duke is Dying.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—During the Prince of Wales' short stay in town Saturday he saw several intimate friends. Alluding to the suggestion that the money subscribed for wedding presents for Princess Mary be made the nucleus of a national pension, he said this proposition could not possibly be entertained. Being thus disapproved, nothing more will be heard of the proposition. The entourage of the Prince now favors the idea of submitting to Princess Mary what may be done with the money in the way of creation of a charity or memorial to the Duke of Clarence.

The Kaiser's Callousness.

The conduct of the German Kaiser in respect to the Duke of Clarence is resented in court circles here. The Emperor went on a shooting excursion of Bushsburg on the evening of the Duke's death, although he had been appraised that his condition was desperate. Even after receiving the telegram announcing the Duke's death he continued his sports, and had another day's shooting, returning to Berlin Friday evening. And instead of immediately hastening to express his condolence the Emperor did not call on the British Ambassador until Sunday afternoon. Finally, the nearness of the relationship justified the court here in expecting that the Emperor would order mourning for three weeks instead of for only 10 days. The ex-Empress is believed to have written to a personage in the English Court that she had been pained by her son's want of consideration and that she had also cause to complain as the Emperor did not call upon her as custom and duty dictated until the third day after the Duke of Clarence's death. The best interpretation put upon the behaviour of the Emperor is that he had a fit of eccentric humor such as now frequently occurs and that he allowed his latent ill-will towards the Prince of Wales to display itself.

Prince George to Remain in the Navy.

Prince George of Wales, instead of leaving the navy as it was reported he would do, is likely to be promoted to the command of the Queen's yacht "Victoria and Albert" and after a short interval he will become a rear admiral.

A very remarkable feature in connection with the death of the Duke of Clarence and Avendale is the demonstrations that are still made. The Albert memorial chapel was open to the public to-day and hundreds of people went from London to Windsor for the purpose of looking at the coffin containing the remains of the Duke. Not alone from London but from many parts of the country, people flocked to Windsor, and every train which stopped at the station added its quota to the crowd. The streets were early filled with a throng of men and women and children moving in the direction of the Castle. All morning there was a steady stream of humanity pouring through the chapel, eager to look upon the coffin. They were kept moving along steadily.

The fear that the Duchess of Fife may through a concentration of events succeed to the throne continues to excite the English people, particularly those of the nobility and upper classes. A well-informed correspondent says Prince George of Wales, who, through his brother's death becomes heir presumptive to the throne, will almost immediately be made Duke of Sussex, and that his engagement to some princess will be announced before the end of the season. It is earnestly hoped that the greatest precaution will be taken with regard to the health of Prince George, for it is said he is not gifted with a much stronger constitution than that possessed by his brother.

It was generally understood that when Princess Louise of Wales married the Earl of Fife, whom the Queen afterward created a Duke, she renounced her rights of succession, but it is now known that she did not.

In the event of the Duchess of Fife becoming Queen the Duke of Fife would of course be made Prince Consort and the idea of his holding that most exalted position is not at all acceptable to the nation such a succession might have unfortunate results.

The death of the Duke has a very great effect upon many branches of trade. The prospects of "the season" will not be seriously interfered with. The Queen having reconsidered her determination not to hold the usual "drawing rooms" in May, those functions will take place as usual. The Queen has heretofore been assisted at the "drawing rooms" by the Princess of Wales, whose place will now be taken by the Duchess of Albany, widow of Prince Leopold, fourth son of the Queen, who died in 1884.

Although the members of the Royal Family will take no part whatever in private entertainments, the various dances, teas, etc., of society will continue much as usual.

Money was superabundant in London during the past week. But in spite of the ease of money a deadly state of inactivity prevails on the stock exchange. During the past week there was no feature except stagnation in any department.

The Vienna Fremdenblatt states that the Austrian and Hungarian ministers have arrived at a complete agreement as to the adoption of a gold currency and that commissions of experts will be appointed by both countries to deal with the details of the undertaking.

EARTHQUAKES IN ROME

CREATE A WILD PANIC AMONG THE INHABITANTS.

Who Remain in the Streets All Night for Fear Their Dwellings Will Tumble Upon Their Heads—All the Street Lights Extinguished — The Pope's Alarm.

ROME, Jan. 25.—There were several quite severe shocks of earthquake felt here last night, which caused a panic in the more crowded quarters of the city.

The inhabitants of the houses in these places thought their dwellings were about to fall and they rushed into the streets, many of them in dishabille, not waiting to save any of their personal effects.

So thoroughly frightened were they, and so much did they fear a repetition of the shocks that nothing could induce them to return to their dwellings and they remained in the streets all night seeking for better security in the open place where they would be out of reach of any falling buildings. The shock was so violent that persons present at the performance were greatly frightened. The panic soon subsided, however. Most of the clocks in the city stopped at 11.27. The ground shook so violently that the street lamps were extinguished, and it is feared damage perhaps has been done to the underground pipes.

The Pope was aroused by the earth tremors. He immediately sent to the Vatican observatory to inquire if the shocks were likely to prove serious. His Holiness was assured that there was no danger, or any prospect of any, and he thereupon retired for the night.

At Genanzano, a town of 500 inhabitants, situated southwest from Rome, several houses collapsed and the inmates had taken fright at the first underground rumblings and had sought safety in flight, consequently no one was injured.

At Civita Lavigna, 18 miles east of Rome, where there are a number of Roman antiquities, the historical tower fell.

Many houses were damaged at Villeteri, 21 miles southwest of Rome.

No loss of life has been reported from the places thus far heard from.

Many Belles in Ashes.

BRUSSELS, Jan. 25.—A portion of the residence of the Duke of Arinburg in this city was discovered to be on fire at 2 o'clock this morning. The origin of the fire is unknown, but it started in the bedroom of Princess Lu Amille of Croy Dulmen, a sister of the Duke, who is the wife of the hereditary Prince of Croy Dulmen.

The Princess and her young children, Prince Charles and Princess Isabel, barely escaped with their lives.

The palace occupied by the Duke of Arinburg was a very old one, and many historical associations cling to it. In it was the room known as Count Egmont's cabinet, which for 325 years has remained exactly as it was left by that unfortunate Prince at the time of his arrest in 1567.

This room, with its invaluable contents was completely destroyed. The pavilion Egmont was also destroyed with all its valuable treasures, with the exception of some very rare Gobelin tapestries which adorned the walls. These were saved.

All the works of art in the wing occupied by the Prince of Croy Dulmen and his family were lost.

The palace was filled with famous historical paintings and other works of art.

Historical Reminiscences.

Count Egmont, Prince of Gavre, whose room in the Palace has been kept intact for so many years, was beheaded in the market place in Brussels, June 4, 1568. It is related that as he received the fatal stroke, Johanna Lavil, who had been his mistress, fell down dead and the people in a paroxysm of sympathy dipped handkerchiefs in the blood that had been shed in the martyrdom to freedom.

Count Egmont was executed by order of the Duke of Alba, governor of the Nether lands primarily for the part he took in supporting the Prince of Orange and the "Beggar's League."

Legislators Assassinated.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—The correspondent of The Times at Valparaiso confirms the report of the attack of a mob on the house of Dr. Suarez at Mendoza, Argentine Republic, where a number of the members of the Provincial Chamber were holding a meeting. In addition to killing of Senor Navagos, secretary of the Chamber, several other legislators were assassinnted.

Cold Weather in Austria.

VIENNA, Jan. 25.—Saturday was the coldest day experienced here in years. The thermometer registered one degree above zero in the city and six degrees below outside.

The streets were almost deserted. Owing to the extreme cold there were very few spectators at the funeral of Archduke Salvator.

A Victory For the Army.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—The justices of the Queen's Bench division of Her Majesty's High Court of Justice have quashed the conviction of the members of the Salvation Army at Eastbourne, who, in November last, were found guilty of unlawfully assembling.

Require $10,000,000.

VIENNA, Jan. 25.—The Ministers of Finance of Austria and Hungary have opened negotiations with the Rothschilds to arrange for a supply of gold to be used in providing a gold currency. Gold to the amount of £20,000,000 is required.

A Woman at Shelburne Tries to Smother Her Child.

SHELBURNE, Jan. 23.—A unknown young woman came to the Royal Hotel with an infant and engaged rooms. On Monday she went down to dinner, leaving the child in the room. Mrs. Tuck happened to go into the bedroom and noticed that the child was completely covered up with quilts, blankets and pillows. She removed them and found the child black in the face and nearly dead with suffocation. Dr. Rooney was called in immediately and after considerable work the child was brought round. The woman left a short time after wards, taking the child with her.

A Famous Priest Dead.

QUEBEC, Jan. 25.—Rev. Father DeBonnie, rector of St. Anne de Beaupre, better known as the shrine of St. Anne, died there early this morning. Deceased was a native of Belgium and was widely known.

Crushed to Death.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 25.—Jacob Peters, a young farmer, was killed at Emerson while moving a stable.

MR. LAURIER IS ILL.

CONFINED TO A FRIEND'S HOUSE AT MONTREAL.

He Will Be Unable to Keep His Ontario Engagements His Physicians Having Enjoined Absolute Rest—Mr. Hyman Again Nominated by London Liberals.

MONTREAL, Jan. 25.—Mr. Laurier arrived here yesterday and was to have left for Ontario to-night. During the day he was seized with a severe attack of bronchitis and was taken to the residence of L. O. David.

Doctors have forbidden him to undertake his western trip.

Parliament to Meet Feb. 25.

OTTAWA, Jan. 25.—It is understood that a proclamation will issue in a few days calling Parliament for the dispatch of business on Thursday, Feb. 25. It is expected by that time the bye-elections will be over.

The writs for North and South Victoria have been issued. Nomination takes place on Feb. 14. Polling a week later.

Mr. Hyman Re-Nominated.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—The Liberal convention held last night nominated Charles S. Hyman, ex-M. P., for their standard bearer.

The Conservative convention will be held Monday evening.

One of the Keenest Contests of the Bye-Elections in Progress.

ST. CATHARINES, Jan. 24.—The political pot in Lincoln and Niagara is becoming very hot over the bye-election. Orators from Ottawa down to the side-road stump speakers are quite numerous and are overrunning the riding. Half a dozen or more meetings are being held nightly in different sections of the county, and the electors are becoming very enthusiastic.

Dr. Ferguson of Welland, Dr. Montague of Haldimand, N. F. Patterson of Port Perry and others have been assisting Mr. Neelon during the past week.

Tuesday evening Hon. Messrs. Foster and Haggart will hold forth at the Opera House.

Mr. Gibson has not been less active than his opponents and has had William Paterson of Brantford, John Crerar of Hamilton and Thomas Bain, M.P., of Dundas, and others assisting him.

Ottawa Gossip.

OTTAWA, Jan. 24.—A Barrow-in-Furness, England, company of steamship owners have forwarded a tender for the proposed fast Atlantic line.

Hon. J. A. Chapleau has sold his house to A. Z. Palmer. This is looked as an indication of his not intending to return to Ottawa to live.

W. P. Northrop is mentioned as a probable candidate for East Hastings rendered vacant by the death of Mr. S. Burdett.

Writ for bye-election in Digby, Annapolis, issued this evening. nomination Feb. 6, polling Feb. 13.

HERCHMER COMMISSION.

A Witness Who Found It Necessary to Keep His Eye Skinned.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 25.—The first witness before the Herchmer Commission yesterday was Sergeant Flint who worked in Commissioner Herchmer's office. The substance of his evidence was that up to the election Col. Herchmer was quite satisfied with him, but on his voting for Davin he was persecuted. Col. Herchmer's son had met him shortly after the election and said, "Ha! Ha! So you voted for Davin. Look out for a transfer." Inspector Wilson told him he would have to keep his eye skinned now.

Inspector Moffatt was called. He testified that it was well known in barracks that Herchmer was supporting Tweed. His opinion at that time was that if he voted for Davin he would have to suffer for it.

Major Jarvis was examined in the afternoon. All his evidence was in Herchmer's favor. He voted for Tweed because he thought Davin was trying to interfere with the discipline of the force. He had talked with Herchmer about the elections, and Herchmer had given a memo. that he was in favor of Tweed, but he had no reason to believe that undue influence was used.

Inspector Moffatt swore, during his evidence, that Inspector Routledge, whose extraordinary lack of memory the day before was strongly commented on, told him that if he was called as a witness he intended to have a short memory.

A Bullet in His Brain.

TORONTO, Jan. 25.—For over a week the detectives tried hard, but ineffectually to discover the whereabouts of Mr. R. A. Stevens, the bank clerk who so mysteriously disappeared from his home at 96 Nassau-street nine days ago. The mystery is now solved, for his body was found yesterday in the pavilion at High Park frozen stiff in death.

The body was lying partly on the right side. He wore a dark suit and overcoat, a white shirt and high collar and a black tie with a red stripe. In his right hand he loosely held a 38-calibre British bulldog revolver. Five cartridges were in it and one chamber was empty. A hole through the man's head explained where the other ball had gone. It entered above the right ear and came out on the opposite side of the head.

The case being clearly one of suicide no inquest will be held.

Two Ingersoll Sisters Led from the Path of Rectitude.

PORT HURON, Mich., Jan. 23.—Charles Fruchan and William Vick of London arrived in the city on Thursday with two pretty girls by the name of White. The entire party put up at a leading hotel as married couples. Yesterday the men induced the girls to enter a notorious house to lead lives of shame. The police heard of the affair and arrested the entire party.

The girls are sisters and belong to a respectable family of Ingersoll, Ont. They confess they ran away from home at the instigation of the young men. Their parents have been notified.

Under the Runners.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Jan. 24.—Alfred Begy the 10-year-old son of Mr. William Begy, Wellington-street, was riding on passing sleighs yesterday when he fell under the horses' feet and received a severe kick on the head which crushed the skull badly.

Facts About Butter-Making.

Prof. Robertson Answers the Letter of a "Farmer's Wife."

To the Editor of the Examiner, Peterborough, Ont.:

DEAR SIR,—I have received a letter signed "Farmer's Wife," in which the writer asks me to reply through the columns of your paper to some questions concerning butter-making.

1. The bitter taste which is sometimes found in cream, and which is quite injurious to the flavour of the butter obtained from it, usually results from one of two causes: the cows may have been fed upon some food having a bitter principle in it, or they may have been prevented from obtaining a sufficient supply of salt; the other probable and common cause arises from keeping cream at a temperature of about fifty degrees for several days.

The remedy for the defect, if caused by the feed of the cows, would be to withhold all bitter tasting feed, such as turnips, and to provide a liberal allowance of salt for milking cows, with plenty of pure, clean water every day. When the cream from each mess of milk is being gathered for several days to make two churnings a week, it should be kept below forty-five degrees until the whole quantity for each churning has been collected. During the winter season it should then be warmed to 66 or 68 degrees, and kept at that temperature, until it is sufficiently ripened or soured to be churned.

2. Milk should be kept in some place free from all odors arising from cold vegetables and cooked or uncooked feed. A milk room or a few shelves in some sweet-smelling place with a temperature of about 50 or 55 degrees will give the best results for setting in shallow pans. Where deep pails are used for setting, the milk should be set as quickly as possible in ice cold water. All the cream for each churning should be kept sweet until it is mixed. One day before the churning it should be raised to a temperature of 66 or 68 degrees as already recommended, and then churned at the same temperature. The temperature for both the ripening and the churning of the cream should be much lower during the summer, say from 58 to 60 degrees.

The letter to which these remarks are a reply, appears to come from a serious seeker for information, and I take pleasure in adding that I will be very glad to send a bulletin on butter making and also the annual report of the Dairy Commissioner for 1890, which gives full particulars for the carrying on of dairy work, to anyone who applies. A letter or post card addressed to me at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, will suffice. I am

SALVATIONISTS BEGIN

Their Special Campaign in the Army Barracks.

Enthusiastic Meetings—And Large Audiences Greet Colonel McKie and Staff—Stirring Addresses Delivered—The Audience Moved to Tears.

The long looked for visit of Col. McKie and his staff to this town culminated in his reception at the noon train on Saturday, when an enthusiastic crowd of soldiers of the local corps, headed by their brass band, tendered the Colonel a "blood and fire" welcome. A march was made through the principal streets, after which the contingent marched to the barracks on Simcoe street.

SATURDAY'S MEETING.

A large turn-out to the meeting on Saturday night evidenced the interest that had been created by the visit of this distinguished officer. The EXAMINER has already published a sketch of his eventful career both as an officer on the English field, and also as the International Travelling Commissioner of the Salvation Army, in which capacity he visits various countries at the command of the General. As the latter's representative he inspects the work of the army, and thus the International Headquarters in London, Eng., may be said to be in touch with its work the world over. The colonel has already visited South Africa, Australia, New Zealand and California, and expresses himself as being highly delighted with the work in each of these countries, and speaks in glowing terms of the prospects of the army in the future, especially in South Africa, where it is extending its operations in a method somewhat novel in missionary enterprise. It appears to be a striking characteristic of this modern crusade that if there is not a way to the people they will make one, and undoubtedly this spirit of aggression and untiring devotion peculiar to the army has proved the greatest factor in lifting it to the position it now occupies in various parts of the world.

A large and respectable audience greeted the Colonel at the barracks on Saturday, who made his appearance after the band and soldiers were seated following the open air parade. His appearance was the signal for a "volley" which was composed of a deafening shout, blast of trumpets, beating of drums, which lasted but a minute, after which Staff Capt. Southall gave out a song, and the audience together with the Salvationists sang with vim and energy. Adjt. Manton followed in praying, then the Colonel arose and expressed himself as being delighted with the hearty reception tendered him by those present, at the same time apologizing for the enforced absence of Staff Capt. Plant (his secretary) who was left behind at Bowmanville on account of sickness. After a solo by Adjt. Manton, the Colonel read a few verses dwelling especially on the words "Him that cometh." His address was profound, searching and convincing, while the earnestness of the speaker and his distinct utterances made a deep impression upon his hearers. At the solicitation of the Colonel three persons went forward.

The Colonel is a fine, intelligent looking man, rather small build, with a very keen eye, and has the appearance of a military commander. His gestures are original, but graceful, his language choice and forcible, delivered in a clear manner, which goes to make up the clever platform orator now found in the person of this distinguished officer.

SUNDAY'S MEETINGS.

Large audiences attended the meetings yesterday. The morning meeting was extremely interesting, and the Colonel delivered a very practical and powerful address from the eighth of Romans, on the words, "He that hath not the spirit of Christ, is none of His." This meeting being chiefly intended for professing Christians, was enjoyed by those present, and as the responsibility of those professing Christ was forcibly presented, every one seemed to realize the solemnity of their position.

THE AFTERNOON

opened with one of the Army's stirring songs, accompanied by the brass band which by the way is improving rapidly of late. Ensign Strede sang from the War Cry, after Adjt. Manton had invoked divine blessing on the meeting. The Colonel then stepped forward and read a few verses concerning the betrayal of Christ by Judas. He in a forcible manner emphasized the awful possibility of being by profession and conduct regarded as a Christian, and yet a stranger to the spirit of the Master, as illustrated in the melancholy character of the betrayer. After the forcible address, in which his hearers were impressed with the importance of a practical knowledge of their acceptance with Christ, the large audience rose and sang, the meeting terminating with prayer.

THE EVENING MEETING.

The barracks was filled at night with a very large and intelligent audience of all classes and sects. The interest evidently increased as the meetings progressed. After the usual preliminaries the colonel called upon Staff-Captain Southall to speak. He pointed out the responsibility of all present considering their opportunities and advantages. He urged them to consider the same in the light of eternal realities. The colonel then stepped to the front, after Adjutant Manton had sang, and read from Genesis vi, commenting on the words, "My spirit shall not always strive with man," which was listened to with respectful silence, and seldom has a Peterborough audience listened to such an address. At times the speaker would become impassioned, and his remarks be most pungent, cutting and convincing, then emotive, tender and pleading. This took visible hold of the audience. For forty minutes the speaker held his audience spell-bound with his fluent oratory. At the solicitation of the colonel the audience rose and sang a favourite song, and a large number of persons then went forward to the penitent form and professed to accept Christ.

This terminated a red letter day in the history of the local corps.

TO-NIGHT'S MEETING.

To-night the Colonel will deliver a thrilling address on the Salvation Army work in the various countries he has visited, which will prove without doubt, highly instructive as well as interesting to all who attend. We predict a full house for the Colonel, whose presence is much appreciated in our midst.

The barracks have been gaily decorated for this visit. Flags and mottoes are hung in profusion round the walls. In front of the platform there are hung English and American national flags, connected with a beautifully painted motto "Welcome Colonel," the whole having a very striking appearance.

Col. McKie will remain here until Tuesday and not Monday, as formerly announced.

Bancroft Railway Matters.

Railway matters in the north are again creating much interest. The Irondale and Bancroft line has a force of between one and two hundred workmen clearing the line, blasting, etc., and the promise is that it will be completed by next January. This will place Bancroft in direct communication with Toronto. The Ottawa and Georgian Bay line is now also being located by the surveyor and assistants to the number of twenty-six, who are cutting out their road as they proceed sufficiently wide for a waggon or sleigh. These lines, when completed, will secure all or nearly all of the trade of the back part of the country, to the injury and loss of the Central Ontario and the North Hastings lines. The amount of hardwood lumber that would offer for shipment from this district would keep a line busy for years, and produce belog in lessening demand by lumbermen, railways are an imperative necessity for the farmers, otherwise a vast exodus of that class is contemplated, where the presence of such energies is better appreciated and their interests looked after.—Correspondence Belleville Intelligencer.

For several years I was persistently annoyed with an excessive accumulation of dandruff, and although using various preparations recommended and shampooing regularly once a week, no material relief was realized until my attention was called to Anti-Dandruff, which has produced unlooked for results in my case, four applications removing every particle of dandruff, and as a specific for this trouble it certainly has no equal.

"Like Magic,"

THE effect produced by Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Colds, Coughs, Croup, and Sore Throat are, in most cases, immediately relieved by the use of this wonderful remedy. It strengthens the vocal organs, allays irritation, and prevents the inroads of Consumption; in every stage of that dread disease, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral relieves coughing and induces refreshing rest.

"I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my family for thirty years and have always found it the best remedy for croup, to which complaint my children have been subject."—Capt. U. Carley, Brooklyn, N. Y.

"From an experience of over thirty years in the sale of proprietary medicines, I feel justified in recommending Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. One of the best recommendations of the Pectoral is the enduring quality of its popularity, it being more salable now than it was twenty-five years ago, when its great success was considered marvelous."—R. S. Drake, M. D., Beliot, Kans.

"My little sister, four years of age, was so ill from bronchitis that we had almost given up hope of her recovery. Our family physician, a skilful man and of large experience, pronounced it useless to give her any more medicine; saying that he had done all it was possible to do, and we must prepare for the worst. As a last resort, we determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and I can truly say, with the most happy results. After taking a few doses she seemed to breathe easier, and, within a week, was out of danger. We continued giving the Pectoral until satisfied she was entirely well. This has given me unbounded faith in the preparation, and I recommend it confidently to my customers."—C. O. Lepper, Druggist, Fort Wayne, Ind.

Obituary.

The Late Mrs. William Mercer.

On Thursday the EXAMINER had the painful duty of announcing the death of one of the most respected and best known citizens of Peterborough, Mrs. Wm. Mercer, relict of the late William Mercer, merchant-tailor, who died at her residence, 369 Hunter street, after a short illness of about ten days. The deceased lady, whose maiden name was Jane Affleck, was the only child of Dr. Affleck, of Jedburgh, Scotland, where she was born in 1835. She settled in Peterborough in 1860, at the time of her marriage to Mr. Mercer (who died about fourteen years ago,) and here she has resided till her death. She has been a member of St. Andrew's church for thirty-one years. She leaves behind her a family of seven, three sons and four daughters, who have the deepest sympathy of the community in the bereavement that has been so sad a one—intensified by the fact of Mr. Mercer and her aunt, Mrs. Renwick, both lying ill in the same house at the same time, unknown to each other, and the latter dying and being carried to the tomb without the knowledge of her niece. Mrs. Mercer's death will not only be mourned in the home where she ruled in love and thoughtful affection for so many years, but in scores of other homes where her quiet and unostentatious, but frequent, acts of charity brought, not only the sunshine of considerate Christian sympathy, but substantial relief of physical wants. The general fact of her local charities is known, but the particulars were known only to those who enjoyed her benefactions, to herself and to the divine love that inspired her ministry of kindness. Mrs. Mercer in her every day life set forth the depth and earnestness of her Christian character. She was a faithful and devoted member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, regular and constant at divine worship, and entered with heart and hand into all the works that could promote the interests of the congregation. In private life Mrs. Mercer was greatly beloved. She was spontaneously cheerful and genial, and in all her social relations she exhibited, to an unusual degree, that friendliness which always makes friends. In every relation of life she was beloved and esteemed, and she goes to her rest leaving behind her a memory that will be held in veneration and esteem.

This was shown by the very large concourse of friends, acquaintances and the public generally, that followed her remains to their last resting place in the family plot in Little Lake Cemetery. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Jos. H. Locke, the pastor of St. Andrew's not being sufficiently recovered from his recent illness to venture abroad.

Funeral of W. F. Johnston.

His Strong Struggle for Life.

The funeral of the old soldier, W. F. Johnston, who committed suicide on Friday morning, took place this morning. The funeral left the residence of his sister, Mrs. Duncan, Westcott street, at 10.30 a.m. A large number of friends and acquaintances attended.

HIS DEATH.

On enquiry at the Nicholls Hospital the EXAMINER learned that the unfortunate man showed a most remarkable tenacity of life. At 11 Friday night his respiration ceased and he was thought to be dead. Suddenly, however, the supposed deceased began his laboured breathing again. Once more at 5 o'clock on Saturday morning life was thought to be extinct. Such was his vitality, however, that he again caught hold of life. Finally, however, he passed away at about 3:20 on Saturday afternoon, having made a powerful struggle for life against fearful odds.

Church Chimes.

ST. ANDREW'S PRESBYTERIAN.

Owing to the continued illness of the pastor, Rev. A. McWilliams, the pulpit was occupied yesterday by Rev. J. E. Trotter, of the Baptist church in the morning, and Rev. J. H. Locke, of George street Methodist, in the evening. There were fair congregations.

GEORGE STREET METHODIST.

The preachers at this church were the pastor, Rev. J. H. Locke, and in the evening Rev. E. F. Torrance, of St. Paul's Presbyterian.

BAPTIST CHURCH, MURRAY STREET.

At the morning service the pulpit was occupied by Rev. E. F. Torrance, of St. Paul's Presbyterian church, and in the evening by the pastor, Rev. J. E. Trotter.

Light Wanted.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

DEAR SIR,—I should like to inquire through your paper why it is that the new electric lights are not now burning, as both the chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, and the elected aldermen promised the ratepayers of No. 3 Ward last they would be burning on Jan. 1st, 1892. Do they think that they gave the electors so much light during the canvass for the local elections that they don't need any electric light?

Yours truly,
JOHN MCNAUGHTON.

Evangelistic Services.

Preached in St. Paul's Church—Eloquent and Earnest Appeals to the Large Congregations.

Mr. Meikle occupied the pulpit at St. Paul's church yesterday, morning and evening. In the afternoon he gave an earnest address to men only in the Opera House. The congregation at the morning service was a large one, and great interest was manifest in the sermon preached by the evangelist.

THE EVENING SERVICE.

At the evening service the church was filled with people anxious to hear one of Mr. Meikle's characteristic addresses. The text preached upon was taken from Paul's Epistle to Galatians, third chapter and eighteenth verse:—"O, foolish Galatians, who hath bewitched you that ye should not obey the truth, before whose eyes Jesus Christ hath been evidently set forth, crucified among you." The preacher delivered a most eloquent and pathetic discourse upon the crucifixion of Jesus Christ. He detailed all the circumstances connected with it, and drew a vivid word picture of the agony of Christ in the Garden of Gethsemane. Succeeding this came a description of the scene upon Calvary, delivered in such an earnest and entreating manner, that a large number of the congregation were visibly affected. He concluded a touching and impressive discourse by an earnest appeal to all unsaved, to hate sin and accept Christ as their Redeemer. Quite a number stood up as anxious enquirers, and several remained to the after meeting.

The meetings are to be continued during the rest of the week in St. Paul's church. Every one invited.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

There was a large attendance at the young men's rally, Saturday evening, and all present listened with great interest to a very helpful and encouraging address by evangelist Meikle. The subject was "Put on the whole armour of God that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the Devil," Ephesians, vi, 11. There was an after-meeting held, a large number of the young men remaining behind and taking part, and souls were apparently born again.

The Bible study and consecration meeting was held Sabbath morning at 9.15 a.m., and was conducted by Mr. Frank Brisco, and was largely attended. Subject, "Hezekiah's Prayer and Deliverance."

On Sabbath afternoon at 4 p.m. Bradburn's Opera House was filled with a large audience of men to listen to Evangelist Meikle give another of his plain talks. All present listened with intense interest as the speaker described the sins that the young men of the present day indulged in, and the way the devil paid his followers. The speaker held up Jesus Christ as the only way a young man could overcome the temptations of the world, the flesh and the devil. At the close scores of young men stood up and manfully asked for the prayers of God's people that they might have the power to forsake their evil ways, and to take upon them the name of Christ and walk in His ways.

No gospel and song service was held in the evening in the Y.M.C.A. Hall owing to the union evangelistic services held in St. Paul's church, conducted by Evangelist Meikle.

Dyspepsia

Intense Suffering for 8 years—Restored to Perfect Health.

Few people have suffered more severely from dyspepsia than Mr. E. A. McMahon, a well known grocer of Staunton, Va. He says: "Before 1878 I was in excellent health, weighing over 200 pounds. In that year an ailment developed into acute dyspepsia, and soon I was reduced to 168 pounds, suffering burning sensations in the stomach, palpitation of the heart, nausea, and indigestion. I could not sleep, lost all heart in my work, had fits of melancholia, and for days at a time I would have welcomed death. I became morose, sullen and irritable, and for eight years life was a burden. I tried many physicians and many remedies. One day a workman employed by me suggested that I take Sarsaparilla, as it had cured his wife of dyspepsia. I did so, and before taking the whole of a bottle I began to feel like a new man. The terrible pains to which I had been subjected, ceased, the palpitation of the heart subsided, my stomach became easier, nausea disappeared, and my entire system began to tone up. With returning strength came activity of mind and body. Before the fifth bottle was taken I had regained my former weight and natural condition. I am today well and I ascribe it to taking Hood's Sarsaparilla."

In order that their capabilities may be tested by the townspeople, they undertake to laundry a shirt, collar and one pair of cuffs free of charge.

EDUCATIONAL SERMONS

Preached in Charlotte Street Methodist Church

By Professor Wallace, of Cobourg—Large Congregations—Interesting Sermons—What a Minister Should Preach, and How He Should be Educated—A Thorough Education Indispensable.

The Charlotte Street Methodist Church was well filled yesterday at both services on the occasion of the visit of Rev. Professor Wallace, of Cobourg University. The Professor was preaching educational sermons in aid of the university, special collections being taken up for the benefit of the funds of that institution. He appears to have the cause of the college thoroughly at heart, and presents its claims in a plain, straightforward manner. He speaks in a clear and somewhat subdued voice, yet his hearers are fully impressed with his words. While free from the "mannerisms" that distinguish many preachers, he is vivacious and illustrates his sermons freely with anecdotal references.

THE MORNING SERVICE

was well attended, although other special services were being held in the town. After the usual devotional exercises had been conducted by the Professor, the choir rendered in good style the anthem "I am the Way." The lessons read were the nineteenth Psalm and Paul's Second Epistle to Timothy, second chapter. The text was taken from First Corinthians, first chapter and 23rd verse. "But we preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumbling block and unto the Greeks foolishness." Paul was the preacher referred to and it was he that the Jews came to hear. He was a new preacher to them, and they came that their intellect might be gratified.

THE JEWS DESCRIBED.

The Jews were not a people of great taste or depth of thought. They were essentially a nation of traders, living to make money. They hated the Romans as the oppressors of their native land. They were looking forward to the fulfilment of the old prophecy, which said that a deliverer would come. The shackles of the people would then be broken and the chosen people of God made free. They looked forward to a conquerer coming, who would break the power of the Romans, and set up a kingdom on earth.

Paul preached Christ to them. He told them of the meek and lowly Jesus who had come to earth to save his people and pictured to them the crucifixion. The Jews could not bring themselves to believe that this was the Messiah. The man who came in such humble guise and who died upon a Roman cross. He was a stumbling block to them, being so different to what they had expected, and they despised him.

PAUL PREACHED CHRIST.

The heathen raged and the Jews raged, yet Paul stood calmly by. He abated not one jot of his preaching of Christ the Messiah. This was explained to be the true preaching, to preach Christ and Him crucified, as Paul did. Christ and His salvation should be the centre of all preaching. Ministers, however, must not only preach Christ, but all that is implied in redemption and religion, and all that was involved in the crucifixion. Although the name of Christ was the centre of all preaching, yet something more was necessary. The wisdom of the Christian religion must be fully explained. Christ did not preach much about Himself, but in His parables and the Sermon on the Mount, He had frequent reference to His father, God.

PREACHING SHOULD BE BROAD.

The doctrine of justification by faith alone, must also be fully expounded. The breadth of Paul's preaching was here touched upon. When he was at Athens, he preached the fatherhood of God, the brotherhood of man, and the redemption through Christ. When he preached before Felix, he did not rehearse the infinite goodness of God, and the story of Christ's crucifixion, but he spoke of temperance, and righteousness, and the judgment to come, until Felix trembled. The minister must preach not only the promises, but the threatenings and warnings of God; not only doctrine, but duty. The law of God should also be preached to the people, loving Him with all their hearts, and their neighbors as themselves.

HOW MINISTERS SHOULD PREACH.

The preacher should have a better knowledge of the Scriptures, and the Christian life, than those he professes to teach. He should be able to show his members their duty not only to the church but to the world. He should be the real leader in all aggressive work. He ought to be able to lead men into the nobler, fuller light of Jesus, so that a grand symphony of holy hearts and lives, would be ascending to God on high. The professor referred to the college as a means of properly equipping men for this important work of preaching the gospel and made an earnest appeal to the congregation to help, in the work of training young men, by their subscriptions.

THE PREACHER'S EDUCATION.

The education of a minister should consist of first, general good culture. A certain familiarity with mental philosophy was also a necessity. The Bible ought to be well studied—in the original language if possible. It was the sword of the spirit, and the preacher should know how to use it. Systematic theology or the harmonizing of the various parts of the Bible, ought not to be neglected, and the history of the church ought to be carefully studied. The professor in conclusion drew attention to the facilities of the college for teaching all these things and made an earnest appeal for further support.

THE EVENING SERVICE.

There was another large attendance at the evening service, and the professor preached another of his eloquent and appropriate sermons. The congregation were much pleased with the discourse and a good collection was taken up.

Oh, What a Cough!

Will you heed the warning. The signal, perhaps, of the sure approach of that most terrible disease consumption. Ask yourselves if you can afford, for the sake of saving 50c., to run the risk and do nothing for it We know from experience that Schiloh's Cure will cure your cough. It never fails. dw

Personal.

Mrs. Adam Hall is said to be much better this morning.

Rev. A. McWilliams is progressing favorably to recovery.

Mr. Samuel Neill, of Guelph, is in town to-day visiting his brother, Mr. Robert Neill.

Mr. F. Heap, of the Collegiate Institute is somewhat better this morning. His brother is in town watching him.

Mrs. Baeyertz, the converted Jewess, has almost recovered from her illness. She leaves here for Kingston to morrow.

We are pleased to see Mr. W. H. Hill once more on the street, able to attend to business, after a severe attack of la grippe lasting nearly three weeks.

Mr. Geo. Schofield, druggist, received a telegram to-day from his brother-in-law, Dr. Chamberlain, informing him of the sudden death of his grandfather, W. A. Schofield, Esq., U.S. Consular, agent at Morrisburgh, at the age of 85 years. Mr. Schofield will leave this evening to attend the funeral.

Mr. J. K. Stewart, an alderman of the City of Ottawa, has been appointed Provincial inspector of licenses in the place of the late Rev. J. W. Manning, who so ably filled the position for many years. The duties of the office require the exercise of great judgment, tact and impartiality. In making a selection the Government has evidently desired to appoint a gentlemen who has the confidence of friends of temperance, and who would also be just to those lawfully engaged in the liquor business as long as such a business is sanctioned by law. There is every reason to believe that Mr. Stewart possesses all these qualifications. He has had a wide experience as a business man, as well as considerable training as the representative of a large business ward in the city council of Ottawa. As respects his temperance record he has been for twenty years actively connected with temperance organizations; for two years he was grand scribe of the Order of the Sons of Temperance, and was several times sent by the members of the order as their representative to the National Division of North America at its meetings at Washington, Philadelphia and elsewhere. He was also a member of the Executive of the Dominion Alliance, and made a favourable impression on the members of the Government and of the Assembly while serving as a delegate to represent the views of his constituents with regard to the enforcement of the Scott Act. Mr. Stewart is also an experienced and effective platform speaker and an able writer—qualifications of great value in his new office. He is still in the prime of life and full of energy. While Ottawa is losing a good alderman the Province is getting an excellent officer, in whom all parties may place just confidence.

AN ANONYMOUS LETTER

By Edgar Fawcett.

CHAPTER I.

A STRANGE school is that we call life. Is it Destiny is not a lenient task-master for many of us. But for some of us he wields a rod of iron,indeed, or perhaps one might better call it a whip of scorpions, like the mythic Corinna's in the Greek tales. Not long ago there lived in a lonely, old-fashioned New York house which traffic and enterprise have removed from the once almost somnolent region of Waverley place a pale woman, with traces of remarkable beauty, whose hair was quite white although she had not yet reached the age of fifty. Long ago she had inherited the house from her father, but she had never cared to dwell there until a certain crowning misfortune of her days caused her to seek it, almost as one might seek a nunnery or monastery, and bide in absolute social seclusion with two trusted servants.

There was nothing morbid in this resolve. She was rich, and quietly dispensed large sums in charity, personally visiting hospitals, and often finding her way to the squalid homes of those whom her purse could aid or her presence cheer. But as for the world of men and women with whom she had once mingled, all that became wholly dead to her, and for excellent reason, according to her own belief.

"I have tried faithfully throughout my entire life," she would sometimes muse, amid those long, slow years of the retirement that preceded her death, "to serve duty and shrink from all wrong. And yet nothing but sorrow has proved my reward! I have been brought into the very closest contact with three men. One I dearly loved; for one I felt a boundless friendship; to one I gave a compassion, so deep that it almost resembled love. Yet each has left with me memories that are horrors, and each in his way has dealt my spirit the bitterest of wounds."

Her gift as a musician had always been striking, and music now consoled her through many a laggard hour. She had a small piano of exquisite tone, and seated before this she would sometimes seem to be recalling and rehearsing through the plaintive melodies of Schumann, Chopin or Schuberth all the strange grief and inflexible doom of her astonishing past.

Her name before marriage had been Helena Hamilton. The only child of a wealthy father, who idolized her to the verge of folly, she had reached maidenhood without knowing what it meant to have a single wish crossed. When, suddenly, one day, she told her father that she desired to marry her music teacher, a young Englishman named Justin Worcester, the announcement was a fearful shock. But Mr. Hamilton quickly rallied from it. After all, it had only been somewhat as though his Helena had asked for the moon. If she had really asked for that luminary he might almost have consulted with some noted astronomer on the possibility of securing it for her. As it was he made a wry face and gave her to Justin Worcester. He permitted himself sorrowfully to add, however, "I did hope, Helena, that your cousin Tallmadge Van Dyke, would have found favor with you."

"Dear papa," she answered, "he never sought it." And within two months, having the full paternal sanction, she was married to her music teacher in Grace Church.

But she had been wrong as to Tallmadge Van Dyke not having cared for her. The engagement was a fearful blow to him. He was not a first cousin of Helena, but a cousin twice removed. He had loved her for many months past and had been debarred from telling her so simply because of the clearly seen wish on her father's part that she should become his wife. Tallmadge was proud and sensitive. He had never cared for society, though it had opened its arms to him as a gentleman of leisure with an income handsome if not huge and a face and figure which marked him alike for good looks and grace.

This Justin Worcester, as Tallmadge now bitterly reflected, was a young man with twice his own personal attractions. These alone, the kinsman of Helena decided, had caused him to win the hand of his young pupil. Of course, passionately argued Tallmage, Helena had been inveigled (and her father as well) by a mere adventuring fortune-hunter. In a little while all would be plain. Worcester, with his curly blond hair, his deceptive blue eyes and his beguiling silky mustache, had made a deliberate "set" for a rich wife. He would now ignore his music, except in a careless, dilettante way. He would drag Helena among the fashionable cliques which she had always hitherto despised. He would aim to shine as a leader of society, and perhaps in a few years would break his wife's heart by a course of reckless infidelities. Helena would never seek a divorce; she was too modest and gentle for that. It would all merely result in an infliction of lingering misery on the sweet creature whom he had married.

So Tallmadge prophesied, and after two years had passed there was every reason for him to acknowledge himself the very falsest of prophets. Old Mr. Hamilton followed his dear wife to the grave during these two same years, yet before his death silently blessed the husband who had already made his daughter charmingly happy. Helena and her lord seldom went into society at all. She remained childless, and yet their home was one replete with contentment. A more loving husband than Justin Worcester could not well be imagined.

Tallmadge occasionally visited them and saw nothing in their quiet, refined household except signs of a thorough connubial peace. He met on several occasions the kinsman of Justin Worcester, who had come to dwell with himself and wife in that pretty basement house uptown, which was a refuge of delightful taste and culture.

This gentleman was Mr. Oswald Blagden, and his age was certainly ten years more than that of Helena's husband. It was to him, as Justin Worcester frankly and freely said, that he owed all his proficiency in music. Blagden (a tall gray man with scintillant black eyes and a most distinguished general appearance) had come to America for the purpose of placing on the New York stage an opera of his own composition which had enjoyed fair success abroad. He had felt very hopeful at first about the success of the opera here, but soon he discovered that, even if performed, there would be slight chance for it, as it aimed at something better than triviality.

Blagden was not without certain means of his own, and through the aid of Mr. and Mrs. Worcester he secured a few highly desirable pupils. Then, in a little while he came to live with Justin and his wife. This plan Helena herself had one day proposed, and her husband warmly seconded it. At first Blagden drew back from the proposition, grateful and yet reluctant. He stammered at least ten polite excuses to Justin for not accepting it, but there was not a real excuse in any of them. Finally a vision of Helena in all her gentle loveliness conquered him. This Blagden was no longer a young man, but he had never met a woman of such enthralling presence. Now and then he would tell himself that her musical endowments formed for him her chief charm; then, soon afterwards, he would realize that this was false, and that if she had not had a note of music in her soul he would have been captivated just the same. No sooner had he gone to live in the same house with her than he regretted the step, though neither Justin nor Helena dreamed that his happiness had not in all ways been materially augmented. Justin Worcester was a man of strongly jealous temperament, and yet, as time went on, he failed altogether to perceive that the world had marked him out for either the most complaisant or hoodwinked of husbands.

Of course Tallmadge Van Dyke was among the first to hear scandalous rumors. He went to the home of the Worcesters, and during each visit carefully watched. These visits took place in the evening, and Oswald Blagden was nearly always, at such times, in the drawing-room with Helena. They played Chopin and Mendelssohn together, and often for an hour or two at a time conversed in murmurs. The hum of their low voices would reach Justin Worcester where he sat in his library writing or reading. Since marriage had brought him entire financial ease, he had devoted himself to the writing of a history of music, a most ambitious work and one whose wide-sweeping design necessitated earnest labor and keen research. Justin was quite willing to give it both; his task had already penetrated him with enthusiasm; he used laughingly to say that he was one of those commonplace musicians who are born only to record the glories of their betters. Now and then he would call from his library to Helena and Blagden. "Come in," he would say, "and hear me read this passage that I've just finished." And they would obey his summons, admiring or disapproving, as the writer's point of view pleased them or did not please. Occasionally there would be musical parties at their pretty home, and then Justin forsook his manuscript to shine among his own and his wife's guests, as the truly charming man he was. While he devoted himself more to his history, music in a practical sense interested him the less. He loved to write about it and did not care half so greatly to hear it. Doubtless for this reason Helena proposed that she and Oswald Blagden should attend certain concerts together. This arrangement won Justin's ready and hearty consent.

"It's so good of you, dear Oswald," he once said to his friend. "I am the worst and most neglectful of husbands, and your kindness heaps coals of fire on my head."

"Coals that I shall put out!" cried Helena, who was present; and having passed to her husband's side, she wreathed his head with both arms while he remained seated, stooping and kissing his temples and brow, and for a few seconds resembling the picture of Isabella with her pot of basil. "You're the best and most loving of husbands," she continued. And then, suddenly appealing to Blagden: "Is he not?" she asked.

"He is everything you describe him, and more besides," was Blagden's reply.

"Oh, you two humbugs!" laughed Justin. "It's lucky I'm not a jealous husband as well."

Helen echoed his laugh. "I've the best right to be jealous," she said, "with that manuscript absorbing you so! Haven't I, Oswald?" (She called Blagden by his first name nowadays; it seemed so natural to her, since her husband did the same.)

After this granted request on the part of his wife Justin would spend at least three evenings of each week alone in the library with his cherished work. He had never cared for the theatre, and now he grew equally indifferent to all social entertainments. Thus it happened that Helena not only went to musical affairs with Blagden but that they drifted out together for different purposes of diversion.

People saw them in each other's company and gossip grew like rank grass. Meanwhile Helena was innocent of the least guile, and if the friend of her husband had dared to breathe a word of passion in her ear she would have shrunk back from him with horror.

SUN LIFE

ASSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA.

The attention of our Policy-Holders is directed to the following summary of the leading items of the present report, which speaks for itself as to the progress and prosperity of the Company:—

Life Assurances in force, 1st January, 1891	$16,759,255.92
Increase over previous year	2,421,378.54
New Applications received in 1890	6,271,599.15
Increase over 1889	2,266,585.60
Cash income for year ending 31st December, 1890	589,078.97
Increase over 1889	225,938.25
Assets at 31st December, 1890	2,473,514.19
Increase over 1889	687,691.47
Reserve for Security for Policy-Holders	2,109,282.66
Increase over 1889	567,732.71
Surplus over all Liabilities and Capital Stock	223,175.69
Increase over 1889	75,649.65
Death claims fallen in during 1890	142,961.65

The progress made by the SUN LIFE during 1890 was remarkable. The new business was the largest in the Company's history, and was equalled by but one other Canadian Life Company. The income for the year exceeds $2,000 for each day in the year, Sundays included. The Assets are large and rapidly increasing. They are, moreover, of the highest character, yielding an average interest of 5.04 per cent. The overdue interest is small, and the Real Estate owned under foreclosure is only four per cent. of the amount of mortgages. This is a remarkable showing. The SURPLUS accumulated during the FOUR years of the current quinquennium is nearly THREE TIMES as much as the amount earned during any previous FIVE years, and the profits to Policy-holders consequently will these to be highly satisfactory. The following are the figures:—

Net Surplus, 31st Dec., 1881, (five years)	$94,224 97
" " " " 1886, "	99,522 97
" " " " 1890, (four years)	223,175 69

For Dyspepsia.

A. Bellanger, Propr., Stove Foundry, Montagny, Quebec, writes: "I have used August Flower for Dyspepsia. It gave me great relief. I recommend it to all Dyspeptics as a very good remedy."

Ed. Bergeron, General Dealer, Lauzon, Levis, Quebec, writes: "I have used August Flower with the best possible results for Dyspepsia."

C. A. Barrington, Engineer and General Smith, Sydney, Australia, writes: "August Flower has effected a complete cure in my case. It acted like a miracle."

Geo. Gates, Corinth, Miss., writes: "I consider your August Flower the best remedy in the world for Dyspepsia. I was almost dead with that disease, but used several bottles of August Flower, and now consider myself a well man. I sincerely recommend this medicine to suffering humanity the world over." ©

Kidd, part pay repairs on town hall, $75.00.

Council adjourned to meet again on Saturday, Feb. 20th, 1892.

Other Local News.

The officers and members of Court Warsaw, C. O. F. No. 220, gave an oyster supper on Tuesday evening, Jan. 12th, 1892 which was a great success, there being about thirty couples, the guests being composed of Foresters and their wives, and those Foresters who fortunately had no wives had to get some other fair sex, who after the supper was over expressed a wish that they wished they only could be Foresters wives. After all had partaken of the fine spread provided, the following programme was rendered in excellent style: H. Nesbitt, D.D.H.C.R., gave a fine description how the order had prospered since its organization. R. Q. Dench, D.D.H.C.R., gave us a speech how he first went courting, not to a Forester's court, but how he first courted the fair sex, which was very much applauded. Rev. R. Hyde, and Miss B. Campbell sang a number of songs, and several others of local talent gave quite a fine oration, after which was sung the national anthem, and all retired satisfied with the night's fun.

Court Warsaw No. 220, C.O F., will hear their annual sermon in the Baptist Church, Warsaw, on Sunday morning, Feb. 14th, 1892, at 11 o'clock a.m. All Foresters are cordially invited.

Mr. James Kidd, Warsaw's energetic contractor, has finished the contract on the town and agricultural hall, which is a credit to him as well as to the village of Warsaw.

The Sunday school convention held in Warsaw on Tuesday was a decided success, the churches being crowded morning, afternoon and night.

The best cure we knew of for constipation and headache is the pleasant herb drink called Lane's Family Medicine. It is said to be Oregon grape root, combined with simple herbs, and is made for use by pouring boiling water onto the dried roots and herbs. It is remarkably effective in all blood disorders, and is now the sovereign remedy for ladies in clearing up the complexion. Druggists sell the packages at 50c and $1 dw

Lakefield.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The inaugural meeting of the Lakefield school board was held in the town hall on Wednesday at one p.m. Present, Messrs. Levi Payne, W. J. White, W. M. Graham and R. Q. Dench. A report from the village clerk was read to the effect that at the nominations for school trustees Messrs. W. M. Graham, Thomas Gordon and R. Q Dench had been elected by acclamation and that each had taken the statutory declaration. Mr. T. Gordon was elected chairman for 1892, and as he was absent, Mr. W. M. Graham was voted to the chair and called the meeting to order. Minutes of last meeting read and adopted. The following committees were appointed for the year:—Finance, W. M. Graham and D. J. R. Fraser; property, R. Q. Dench and Levi Payne; supervision, W. J. White and W. M Graham. The monthly report of the head master was received and adopted. The following accounts were received and ordered to be paid: John Hall, lumber, 6 05; G. A. Milliner, stationary, $2. Mr. J. Bullock's tender for sawed maple at $3 per cord, was on motion accepted. The board on motion decided to meet in future in the town hall. Board then adjourned.

CRASH ON THE ROCK ISLAND.

Several Passengers Fatally Injured, Including One Canadian.

CHICAGO, Jan. 25.—The passenger train on the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad, which left for Council Bluffs at 11.30 last night, was ditched four miles from this city by the spreading of the rails. The train was wrecked and a number of passengers were badly hurt. The train at once took fire from the stoves and but for the prompt work of the uninjured several persons would have been burned to death. Among the injured are George Patten, Butte, Mont., skull fractured, will probably die; unknown man, cut and bruised about the body, probably fatally; George Patten, Huntington, Que., skull fractured, will probably die. The entire train was consumed, with the mails. The loss is estimated at $40,000.

ABERDEEN FOR LIEUT.-GOV.

A Queer Sort of Report all the Way from British Columbia.

VICTORIA, B. C., Jan. 25.—The Times says: Among the rumors that are flying about is one to the effect that the Earl of Aberdeen will be the next Lieutenant-Governor of British Columbia. The Earl has recently invested a quarter of a million dollars in British Columbia reality, and is known to like the Province and people. From Dublin Castle to Carey Castle would be a long step, but who will say that it would be a backward one. There are great things to be done in British Columbia, the greatest in some respects of all the Provinces, and it would be a splendid thing for us if a man of Lord Aberdeen's position could be induced to accept the Lieutenant-Governorship.

THEY KILLED THEIR TEACHER.

Because She Chastised Them for Some Misdemeanor.

LIMA, Ohio, Jan. 25.—John Stephenson, Burt Smith, William and Charles Spurlock, schoolboys, whose ages range from 12 to 17 years, are in Kenton jail charged with murder. Their teacher, Miss McLaughlin, corrected them for some misdemeanor in school yesterday, whereupon they began to beat her. Frank McLaughlin, the teacher's 12-year-old brother, interfered, when the boys turned on him and beat him into insensibility, and inflicted injuries from which he died in a few hours.

Miss McLaughlin is also badly injured and her recovery is doubtful.

There are threats of lynching the boys.

A Dead Man at the Throttle.

CLAYTON, Ill., Jan. 25.—Considerable comment has been caused in railroad circles here over the statement by Fireman Edward Warber, who was on the ill-fated westbound Wabash "Cannonball" express that dashed into the eastbound express at Aladdin, near East Hannibal, about a week ago. Engineer Burchard of that train was killed, and all the railroad men wondered how so careful a man as he could have run by the switch in the fog as he did. Warber, who is recovering from hurts in the wreck, says that Burchard was undoubtedly dead in his cab before reaching the switch, having died of heart disease soon after leaving Hull. This Warber now believes, as Burchard did not take his head from the window once after leaving Hull. Railroad men generally credit the story.

GLADSTONIAN VICTORY.

The Rossendale Election Goes Against the Tories.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—An election was held yesterday to fill the Parliamentary vacancy in the Rossendale Division caused by the elevation to the peerage of Lord Hartington. The result was the election of the Gladstonian candidate and the almost complete reversal of the vote cast at the previous election. The voting was announced as follows:

Maden	6006
Brooks	4841

In the preceding election the vote was:

Lord Hartington	5399
Mr. T. Newbigger (Home Ruler)	3949

The Chronicle commenting on the election refers to the extreme moderation of Mr. Maden's Home Rule view and says: "Rossendale supported a man who declines to pledge himself to Mr. Gladstone's Home Rule bill until he has seen it. If the country generally shares these doubts the Government should not delay an hour more than necessary to the dissolution of parliament or stand in the way of a parliament with Mr. Gladstone as leader, dependent for official life on a majority represented by the men who won Rossendale, Messrs. Maden and Davitt."

Devonshire to Gladstone.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—G. W. Smalley cables: The Duke of Devonshire's reply to Mr. Gladstone is very dignified and very weighty, and goes much beyond the mere denial which I quoted. I will quote one other passage, which puts before the English people material for judgment on the two competing Irish policies. Mr. Gladstone complains that local government has not yet been granted to Ireland. Steps will be taken next session, replies the Duke, to satisfy Irish desires in that matter; and he adds: "It is more than probable that these steps would have been taken long ago but for the determined and mischievous agitation kept up in Ireland by his allies as long as they were able, tolerated and encouraged by Mr. Gladstone himself for the purpose of proving government of Ireland under the Union impossible." One more point: Mr. Gladstone's comment on the condition of Ireland and of Irish feeling to England invites comparison between the present condition and the condition under Mr. Gladstone's rule. "I suggest," says the Duke of Devonshire, somewhat dryly, "as periods for comparison which Mr. Gladsone might select, the suspension of the habeas corpus in 1881, the resignation of Mr. Forster, followed by the Phœnix Park assassinations in 1882, the conclusion of Lord Spencer's and Sir George Trevelyan's administration in 1885, when they had found it necessary to demand renewal of some provisions of the Crimes Act, or the brief administration of Mr. Morley and the Belfast riots of 1886."

Influenza in England.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—G. W. Smalley cables: A respectable conference of doctors has at last mustered courage to express to the English public their belief that influenza is a dangerously infectious disease. The organs of public opinion, not entirely satisfied with this declaration, are clamoring for an official inquiry into the disease and the remedy for it. Meantime the epidemic is steadily spreading. The death rate increases throughout the country, in some cases 30 per cent. The only thing doctors agree upon is that no general rule can be framed, whether for prevention or cure. I know of one physician who has treated 1300 cases and lost none. That is probably a record. I know of an eminent surgeon who fumigates his house with vapor of carbolic acid, given off from an apparatus in the hall. I know of another equally eminent who scoffs at precautions. I know of a third who says that half the deaths that have occurred would have been prevented had the doctors given the disease some name less trivial and more formidable than influenza. There is, perhaps, one other point on which the whole faculty agree; that every one should go to bed and send for a doctor. Yet never was the medical profession so overworked, and nurses are at a premium.

A Rebellion Breaks Out.

BERLIN, Jan. 25.—The Tageblatt announces that a dangerous rebellion has broken out in the Cameroons, West Africa, and that the cruiser Pelican, with a detachment of 300 troops on board, has been ordered to proceed to that locality.

BOLD TRAIN ROBBERY.

Two Men Go Through a Missouri Pacific Express Car.

LAMAR, Mo., Jan. 25.—Two bold men robbed the express car of the Missouri Pacific train which reaches here at 12.30 a.m. The men held up the occupants of the car, keeping them covered with revolvers while the train traveled the 10 miles between Sheldon and Lamar.

FORT SCOTT, Kas., Jan. 23.—Soon after the robbery at Lamar a despatch was received here to watch for the two robbers, stating that they had left on a freight train for this place. Policeman B. M. Lemore saw the men get off the train, which arrived at 7 o'clock, and he halted them. One of the men shot him dead and both then escaped. A few minutes later they were seen to get into a box car on an outgoing north-bound freight and Detectives Chester and Mapes started on a passenger train in pursuit, overtaking them at Pleasanton, 24 miles north of here. One of the men was shot and killed and the other badly wounded. The wounded man says he is Charles Myers of Kansas City. The name of the dead man is not known.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

Co-Operative Farming in Russia.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 25.—The Government, with the view of averting a repetition of the famine, has decided to make experiments in co-operative farming. Plots of ground will be allotted for this purpose to communes in the provinces of Saratof and Samara, and if the enterprise proves successful other plots will be allotted in other provinces. The plots intended will be cultivated by all the inhabitants, while the yield will be devoted to re-fitting the communal stocks, and the proceeds of the surplus will be applied to the re-payment of local public debts.

The authorities are busily occupied with measures to relieve the distress. They have postponed the enactment of the proposed new laws against the Jews and the projected establishment of agricultural institutes in the Baltic Provinces. Twenty-five officers of the guard have started for Ufa, Orenburg, and other places to replace civilians in the task of superintending the transportation of wheat to the famine-stricken provinces.

The novelist Ertel, who is staying in the parish of Makari, in the province of Veronesch, is arranging to feed the inhabitants there. He receives subscriptions amounting to $500 monthly for the purpose. Hundreds of starving people apply to him daily for relief. In Makari 119 out of a population of 539 are without food and depend upon charity. One half of the live stock owned by the peasants has been sacrificed during the last two months for a mere trifle.

The village of Orlova, near Makari, is in a still worse plight. Many deaths have been caused by starvation. In numerous villages numbers of families huddle together promiscuously like cattle. The result is a terrible state of immorality. Princes Eugenie of Oldburg, who owns a large sugar factory in Ramon, Veronesch, mixes sugar beet refuse with rye meal, the mixture making an excellent bread for the starving. The amount of corn doled out in some villages is insufficient, affording the villagers only one meal in two days. Many horses are dying of starvation.

Recovering the Bodies.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 24.—The story of the holocaust at the National Surgical Institute was told yesterday with but one mistake, the body of Dr. D. A. Prayor of Ann Arbor, Mich., having been identified as that of C. H. Gorman, who turned up all right in the afternoon. The little Lazarus child is still alive but cannot live until night. She will make the eighteenth victim.

AN ULTIMATUM TO CHILI.

BLAINE'S DEMAND FOR APOLOGY AND REPARATION.

The President's Message—Nature of the Correspondence—Review of the Case—Chili Apologizes and Peace Reigns Supreme.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—President Harrison's message on the Chilian situation, accompanied by the documents, correspondence, etc., in the case was sent to Congress to-day.

The message reviews all the evidence in the case and says the President feels compelled to stand upon the demands of the note of the 21st inst. to Minister Egan. These demands are that the Chilian Government must apologise and make reparation for the assault upon the Baltimore's sailors Oct. 16, that the Matta circular note of Dec. 13 must be withdrawn and the language disavowed with as much publicity as it was circulated, or diplomatic relations with Chili will cease; that Mr. Egan's recall will not be considered until these matters are disposed of. The President, in stating his reasons for making these demands, advised that they be confirmed and enforced by Congress.

Egan Defended.

After defending Egan for his course throughout, President Harrison continues: The communications of the Chilian Government in relation to this cruel and disastrous attack upon our men, as will appear from the correspondence, have not in any degree taken the form of a manly and satisfactory expression of regret, much less of apology.

The event was of so serious a character that if the injuries sustained by our men had been wholly the result of an accident in a Chilian port, that incident was grave enough to have called for some public expression of sympathy and regret from the local authorities. It is not enough to say the affair was lamentable, for humanity would require that expression, even if the beating and killing of our men had been justifiable. It is not for a generous, sincere Government to seek for words of a small or equivocal meaning in which to convey to a friendly power an apology for an offence such as this.

In our note of Oct. 23 last, after receiving the report of the board of officers appointed by Captain Schley to investigate the affair, the Chilian Government was advised of the aspect that it then assumed, and called upon for friendly facts in its possession that ought to modify an unfavorable impression which our report had created. It is very clear from the correspondence that before the receipt of the note the explanation was regarded by the authorities as practically closed. It was, however, reopened and protracted through a period of three months.

We might justly have complained of this unreasonable delay, but in view of the fact that the Government of Chili was still provisional and with a disposition to be forbearing and hopeful of a friendly termination I have awaited the report which has just been made. On the 21st inst. I caused to be communicated to the Government by the American Minister at Santiago the conclusions of this Government after a full consideration of all the evidence and of every suggestion affecting the matter, and to these conclusions I adhere. They are:

1. That the assault is not relieved of the aspect which the early information of the event gave to it, viz.: That of an attack upon the uniform of the U.S. navy, having its origin and motive in a feeling of hostility to this Government and not in any act of the sailors or any of them.

2. That the public authorities at Valparaiso flagrantly failed in their duty to protect our men, and that some of the police and of the Chilian soldiers and sailors were themselves guilty of unprovoked assaults upon our sailors before and after arrest. He thinks the preponderance of evidence and the inherent probabilities lead to the conclusion that Riggin was killed by the police or soldiers.

3. That he is therefore compelled to bring the case back to the position taken by this Government in the note of Mr. Wheaton of Oct. 21 last, a copy of which you will deliver with this, and to ask for a suitable apology and for some adequate reparation for the injury done to this Government. You will assure the Government of Chili that the President has no disposition to be exacting or to ask anything which this Government would not under the same circumstances, freely concede. He regrets that from the beginning the gravity of the questions involved has not apparently been appreciated by the Government of Chili and that an affair in which two American seamen were killed and 16 others seriously wounded, while only one Chilian was seriously hurt, should not be distinguished from an ordinary brawl between sailors in which the provocation is wholly personal and the participation limited; no self-respecting Government can consent that persons in its service, whether civil or military, shall be beaten and killed in a foreign territory in resentment of acts by or imputed to their Government without exacting suitable reparation.

The President continues: We have given every opportunity to the Government of Chili to present any explanatory or mitigating facts, and have had due regard to the fact that the Government of Chili was for a considerable part of the time that has elapsed since Oct. 16 upon a provisional basis.

The Montt Message.

On Jan. 21 Senor Montt delivered to Mr. Blaine the following note:

SIR,—I have received instructions from my Government to state to you that Mr. Egan is not a persona grata to my Government, which will have much pleasure in receiving another representative of the United States. The desire of the Government of Chili to draw closer its relations with that of the United States is its motive for taking this step.

The President's Comments.

Commenting on this correspondence the President says:

In the same note the notice of the Chilian Government was called to the offensive character of a note addressed by Mr. Matta, its Minister of Foreign Affairs, to Mr. Montt, its Minister at this capital, on the 11th ult. This despatch was not officially communicated to this Government, but as Mr. Montt was directed to translate and give it to the press of this country it seemed to me it could not pass without official notice. It was not only undiplomatic, but grossly insulting to our naval officers and to the executive department, as it directly imputed untruth and insincerity to the reports of naval officers and to the official communication made by the executive department to Congress. It will be observed that I notified the Chilian Government that unless this was at once withdrawn and an apology as public as the offence made it will terminate diplomatic relations. The request for the recall of Mr. Egan upon the ground that he was not persona grata was unaccompanied by any suggestion that could possibly be used in support of it, and I infer that the request is based upon official acts of Mr. Egan which have received the approval of this Government. But however that may be, I could not consent to consider such a question until it had first been settled whether our correspondence with Chili could be conducted upon a basis of mutual respect. In submitting these papers to Congress for that grave and patriotic consideration which the questions involved demand, I desire to say that I am of the opinion that the demands made of Chili by this Government should be adhered to and enforced. If the dignity, as well as the prestige and influence of the United States are not to be wholly sacrificed we must protect those who in foreign parts display the flag or wear the colors of this Government against insult, brutality and death. It has been my desire in every way to cultivate friendly and intimate relations with all the Governments of this hemisphere. We do not covet their territory; we desire their peace and prosperity; we look for no advantage in our relations with them except the increased exchanges of commerce upon basis of mutual benefit; we regret every civil contest that disturbs their peace and paralyzes their development, and are always ready to give our good offices for the restoration of peace. It must, however, be understood that this Government, while exercising the utmost forbearance towards a weaker power, will extend its strong and adequate protection to its citizens, to its officers and to its humblest sailors when made the victims of wantonness and cruelty, in resentment, not of their personal misconduct but of the official acts of their Government.

The Message Applauded.

The President's message was heartily applauded by both sides. It was referred to the House Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Secretary Tracy Talks.

Secretary Tracy told a correspondent to-night that he was convinced Congress would uphold President Harrison, and unless Chili apologized and made proper reparation war must follow. He also prophesied that the United States navy would blow the Chilian ships to smithereens in less than 30 days.

CHILI GETS THE ULTIMATUM.

It Took the Cabinet By Surprise and They Ask For Delay.

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—The Herald has the following from Valparaiso: The ultimatum of the Government of the United States that Chili must immediately and without reservation withdraw the offensive note of Senor Matta, ex-Minister of Foreign Affairs, apologize for the assault upon the sailors of the cruiser Baltimore and pay indemnity for the injuries inflicted upon American citizens, has been handed to the Chilian Government by Minister Egan. This is the reply sent by the United States to the demand of the Chilian Government for the recall of Mr. Egan. The prompt sending of this ultimatum, instead of an order to Mr. Egan that he return home, has surprised the Chilian Government, and it is rumored that President Jorge Montt, while resting at a bath resort, has been asked to return at once to Santiago and consult with his Cabinet and Council of State in regard to the matter. The correspondent says: "I had interviews to-night with Edwardo and Judge Alfonso, both of whom are members of the Council of State. When I informed them of the nature of the ultimatum sent by Secretary Blaine they expressed considerable surprise at its terms, and without formally committing themselves both agreed that it would be a supine act to now withdraw Matta's letter. They expressed the hope that at the meeting of the Council of State in conjunction with the Cabinet Monday a peaceful solution of the difficulty might be arranged. Judge Alfonso, who is well known to Secretary Blaine, said that any war between the two countries would be exceedingly foolish and he was fully convinced that the United States did not desire to humiliate Chili. When I saw Don Carlos Walker Martinez to-night he expressed deep regret that the Chilian Cabinet had brought matters to such a crisis and evinced strong hope for a peaceful settlement of the difficulty. He has no doubt that the sentiment of the Chilian Congress will uphold these views. The Chilian public is not aware of the gravity of the present situation, nor does it know that the American ultimatum has been received. The Cabinet is acting secretly, and is accused in some quarters not only of giving out false news to the public, but also of keeping the real facts from the councillors of state. Vague and uncertain rumors have gained circulation in Santiago and Valparaiso, but the real danger is not generally known.

Mr. Kennedy, the British Minister, acting under instructions from the Home Government, went to Santiago this morning to offer his friendly offices as a mediator.

There is a marked sentiment in army and navy circles against saluting the American flag should that be demanded. I am privately informed that British Admiral Hotham is very much opposed to the foolish policy of the Chilian Government.

It was definitely ascertained to-day that Senor Pereira, the Chilian Minister of Foreign Affairs, has sent to United States Minister Egan a formal notification that the Chilian Government will reply to-morrow to the note containing the ultimatum of the United States.

Coal for the Cruisers.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 26.—The Southern Pacific steamer San Benito, which has been chartered by the United States Government to convey coal to Chili for warships there, will probably be ready for sea Friday. It is learned that at least three other ships will follow the San Benito on the same errand, and the cruisers in Chili will soon have all the coal they need.

Chili Buys Another Ship.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—Authentic information was received yesterday from England that the Chilian Government has just purchased the new cruiser now being built at Armstrong's shipyard, Newcastle, and that her completion is being rapidly pushed. This vessel is described as a high speed 3000 ton cruiser, very similar to the cruiser Twenty-Fifth of May recently constructed by the same firm for the Argentine Republic.

To-day's Important Session.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—Senator Sherman, chairman, said last night that there will be a meeting of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Senate to-morrow, when the President's message on the Chilian situation will be called up for consideration. The meeting will be a special one.

A Reply Expected To-day.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—Senor Montt, the Chilian Minister, had an interview with Secretary Blaine at the State Department yesterday and informed him that he expected to receive the reply of the Chilian Government to Mr. Blaine's note of the 21st instant containing President Harrison's ultimatum either to-morrow or the next day.

Secretary Blaine refused to say anything whatever last night in regard to the Chilian situation.

Chili Asks Delay.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—Secretary Blaine received a cablegram from Minister Egan at Santiago, in which he states that, in the absence of President Montt, Senor Pereira, Minister of Foreign Affairs, requested Minister Egan to grant a delay of one or two days to his Government until President Montt could be recalled to Santiago. On his return a reply would be sent to the demand of the United States for reparation. It is understood that this delay will be granted.

CHILI APOLOGIZES.

The Objectionable Matta Note to be Withdrawn and the Request for Egan's Recall Also Withdrawn.

SANTIAGO De Chili, Jan. 26.—The Chilian Government has sent a reply to the ultimatum of the United States. The reply is in in effect as follows: Chili agrees to withdraw the offensive note sent by Senor Matta to all the Chilian Ministers abroad and acknowledges that its issuance was due to an error of judgment.

Chili also withdraws its request for the withdrawal of United States Minister Egan.

In addition to this the Chilian Government in its answer proposes that the affairs of the attack on the Baltimore's sailors in Valparaiso be submitted to the arbitration of some neutral nation. If this proposition is not acceptable to the United States Government the Chilian Government suggests that the matter be submitted to the Supreme Court of the United States.

PATTI AT THE FALLS.

She Thinks Some of the Effects Might Well Be Reproduced on the Stage.

LOCKPORT, N.Y., Jan. 2.—Adelina Patti and Nicolini, her husband, with her company, spent this afternoon at Niagara Falls seeing the sights. It was the singer's first visit to the Falls in winter, and she described her impressions as follows:

"It is too beautiful, too inspiring for words. The white mantle of snow, the brilliant ice scenery and the tone effects soften and beautify the scene wonderfully. I never realized how great a difference it would create, never saw such remarkable scenic effects. How grand some of these would be on the stage! They would inspire me to sing as I have never felt like before.

"Just look in that grotto! Why, that would be worth coming thousands of miles to see. I love nature, and here you can see her grandest work in all its wondrous beauty."

Baden Powell in Ottawa.

OTTAWA, Jan. 26.—Sir George Baden Powell, the British commissioner in the Behring Sea, arrived in Ottawa Monday. He was met at the depot by his brother commissioner, Dr. Dawson, who accompanied him to the Russell House, where a command to attend at Government House awaited him.

In answer to questions Sir George said the British commissioners would probably remain in Ottawa for some days awaiting a summons to attend the meeting of both Canadian and United States Commissioners with the Board of Arbitrators at Washington, at which it had been decided that the reports of the two commissions should be presented.

House of Commons Accountant Dead.

Lily is Missing.

TORONTO, Jan. 26.—Lily Smith on Saturday night told her step-mother, Mrs. Smith, a widow who lives at 186 Adelaide-street west, that she had lost her purse with nine dollars in it, for which she was mildly scolded. Sunday morning about 9 o'clock she said that she was going out to look for the purse and has not been seen since.

Fell Forty Feet and Died.

TORONTO, Jan. 26.—Another accident which will possibly prove fatal happened yesterday at the new Parliament buildings.

Peter MacIntosh, son of Mr. MacIntosh, the marble dealer on Yonge-street, lost his balance as he was adjusting the chain to a block of marble that was being hoisted and fell forty feet.

His right leg was broken and he suffered serious internal injuries.

Toronto Girls' Home on Fire.

TORONTO, Jan. 26.—A child playing with matches set fire to the Girls' Home, Gerrard-street east, yesterday. Six or seven of the straw mattresses on the children's cribs in two different rooms were alight and blazing fiercely when the fire was discovered, but it was speedily extinguished.

South Dummer.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

A very successful tea meeting was held in the South Dummer church on Monday evening, 18th Jan. During the course of the evening, two of Mrs. N. Beavis's Sunday school scholars stepped forward and presented her with the following address:—

To MRS. NELSON BEAVIS:—

DEAR TEACHER AND FRIEND,—We the scholars of your Sunday school class having felt the great interest you have always taken in us since you undertook our class, desire to present you with these vases as a slight token of our love to you. We thank you for the great trouble you have taken in trying to make God's word more simple and plain to us and we all feel your great love for us. It is our hope and prayer that you may long be enabled to be with us Sabbath after Sabbath, and may God's choicest blessings be yours forevermore.

Signed on behalf of your class,
MABEL RITCHIE,
ETTIE BROWN.

Mrs. Beavis made a suitable reply.

The address was accompanied with a pair of handsome vases.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The council elect for the current year met at the town hall, on Monday Jan. 18th, 1892, after having made and subscribed the necessary declarations of office and qualification, the several members took their seats, viz., John Moloney, Esq Reeve, and councillors Allen, Garbutt, Walsh and Bullock. On motion the minutes of previous meeting were read and confirmed. By-law No. 515 appointed Maurice Condon and R. H. Reid, auditors and by-law No. 516 appointed the Reeve and Clerk ex-office and F. M. Leahy, Jas. Josey, and David Farsythe, a Board of Health. By-law No. 517 re-appointed Wm. Condon as assessor at a salary of $45. On motion the collector was instructed to have balance of taxes collected on or before the the 1st day of Feb. 1892, and was also re-appointed collector for the year 1892, at a salary of $55. The contract for printing and stationery was re-let to J. R. Stratton at the old contract price, W. H. Robertson's tender not being accepted. On motion Robert Allen was elected deputy-reeve, for the year 1892. Council adjourned to Feb 22nd, then to meet at 10 o'clock a.m.

Don't experiment with your health. You may be sure of the quality of your medicine, even if you have to take much of your food upon trust. Ask your druggist for Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and no other. It is the standard blood-purifier, the most effective and economical.

Billiousness—Fever and Ague.

So pleasantly do Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills search out and drive away the seeds of disease that all persons living in a country where fever and ague, and all other billious diseases, are prevalent, will find they should never be without them. From two to four pills each night upon going to bed, will, in a short time, drive away the sickly yellow look of billious persons, and bring to their cheeks a beautiful glow of perfect health. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are sold by all dealers in medicine.

Good Deeds Done.

The good deeds done by that unequalled family liniment, Hagyard's Yellow Oil, during the thirty years it has been held in ever-increasing esteem by the public would fill volumes. Connolly Bros.' Compromise.

The Dominion Government's Election Time Honesty—The Government's Extremity in Kingston.—The Contractor's Opportunity—Another $32,000.

A letter from Ottawa states that on Friday the Government issued a check for $32,000 to the Messrs. Connolly Brothers of Kingston, on account of the dry dock in that city. Nothing has been talked of so much for some time as this sudden change of front on the part of the Government towards the Connollys. The payment itself is not extraordinary except for the circumstances and the time chosen for the payment, as the money is undoubtedly due to the firm and overdue. The Government, however, took the ground many months ago that they would pay no portion of the amount earned on the Kingston dock except on two conditions, first, that the Connollys should surrender up their books to the department of Justice, and secondly, that they should give the Government a lien upon all their plant at Kingston as surety for any sum which the Government might determine to be due in connection with any of the works of the firm of Larkin, Connolly & Co. Kingston was vacant, however, and the shrewd contractors knew what sort of men they had to deal with, so they kept coming to Ottawa pretty constantly even when not compelled to be there in connection with the prosecution. They interviewed half the members of the Cabinet from and including Mr. Abbott down, and as the date of their hopes grew brighter and their interviews with Cabinet Ministers more frequent. After frequent interviews between Mr. Nicholas Connolly and the Hon. Frank Smith, then acting Minister of Public Works, the latter recommended that $32,000 of the amount due should be paid at once. When the matter was being finally put through, Mr. James Metcalfe, the Government candidate in Kingston, came to Ottawa, followed next day by Mr. R. W. Shannon, barrister, of Kingston, a prominent Tory lawyer. Mr. Frank Smith then took a trip to Kingston, and two or three days after his return, namely, on Friday, the check was issued, the day being nomination day in the election for the House of Commons, which comes off at Kingston next Thursday. This sudden change of the Government's fixed determination not to pay anything to the Connollys until the prosecutions were over, and the hob-nobbing between the Connollys and prominent members of the Government, and the issue of the check on the eve of the election are circumstances so suspicious that no one will doubt for an instant that the Government intend walking arm-in-arm with the Connollys to the polls, the very thing Sir John Thompson boasted at Halifax they could not do and prosecute them at the same time in the courts.

THE KINGSTON ELECTION APPROACHED

THE REASONS ASSIGNED.

It is officially given as a reason for the change of policy on the part of the Government in paying $32 000 to the Connollys at this late hour that work on the Kingston dry dock was suspended and one particular vessel desired to use the dock, and it is further stated that the Government at the beginning of the prosecutions against the Connolly arranged with them to go on with the work to completion. Both these statements are false. When the Government declined to pay anything further on account of the dock until the courts decided how the whole account between Larkin, Connolly & Co., their successors, Messrs. Connolly Bros., and the Government stood, in regard not only to the Kingston dock, but all their contracts which Parliament investigated, the Connolly's were naturally inclined to stop work on the Kingston dock until the money already earned on that work was paid over. On the advice, however, of their counsel, Hon. Edward Blake, the Connollys determined to proceed with the work to completion just as if nothing had happened. This was several months ago, and work was not therefore suspended on the Kingston dock. These facts also prove the

FALSITY OF THE SECOND STATEMENT

that the Government arranged with the contractors that they should go on with the work and be paid for work done from that time forth. The contractors continued the work on advice of counsel and not by arrangement with the Government. As a matter of fact the work was almost completed when the prosecutions were begun, and the work done since does not amount to $5,000, much less $32,000. Try as they may the Government cannot conceal the object of their sudden change of front. That it is sudden is proved by the fact that Mr. Connolly stated in the Russell House not three weeks ago that he was still endeavoring to get the Government to change its decision and pay what was due. That decision, which made the surrender of the books of the old firm to the Department of Justice a prime condition, remained unchanged until the Kingston election contest began to look blue for the Government, and then at the solicitation of leading Kingston Conservatives (whose names could be given if it were not a breach of confidence) they consented to surrender to the Connollys. The Kingston Conservatives promised the Connollys in the name of the Government four or five weeks ago that this should be done.

The Grippe!

An Agent of Safety for the Home.

The grippe, with all its terrors, is making sad havoc in our midst. This evil, which visited us nearly two years ago, is with us now in a more dreaded form. In some respects our people understand the troublesome malady better now than when it first appeared. It is acknowledged by all that prompt action is necessary, so that primary symptoms may be checked. Bronchial affections, coughs and sore throat are generally forerunners and leaders of a severe attack of grippe, and should be carefully and intelligently attended to. Let us strongly impress upon all the great necessity of ridding themselves of what some may terms slight colds. These attacks on the bronchial tubes, irritation of the tonsils and throat, that fitful cough, are sure indications the enemy grippe has begun to effect an entrance. At this particular time simple yet effective measures are of vast importance, in order that the great nervous system be enabled to sustain its vital energy and power. It is conceded by those competent to judge, that Harvard Bronchial Syrup should be used without delay, whenever the throat and bronchial tubes are in any degree threatened, and when the first symptoms of cough and irritation are felt. This great remedy gives almost instant relief and fortifies every weak part. As an evidence of its popularity and usefulness, we may say that the manufacturers are unable at present to fully supply the demand which has arisen since the advent of the grippe. It is simple in its composition, free from every injurious narcotic, and so extremely reliable that every man, woman and child can use it with the greatest safety, and receive almost instant results. See that you procure a bottle without delay.

Small Sugar-coated Burdock Pills do no gripe or sicken. They are mild and effectual.

Funeral of S. B. Burdett.

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Jan. 25.—The funeral of the late S. B. Burdett, Q.C., M.P. for East Hastings, took place this afternoon and was one of the largest which has been seen in this section of the country. H. Corby, M.P., W. H. Bigger, M.L.A., William T. Kerr, Q.C., ex-M.P. of Cobourg; George Hargraft, ex-M.P. for West Northumberland; M. W. Ostrom, ex-M.L.A., and other prominent politicians were present. The Masonic body, of which deceased had been a member for a number of years, conducted the obsequies. Whilst the cortege was passing through the streets the bells of various churches were tolled.

Sir James Spaight Dies of Grip.

DUBLIN, Jan. 23—Sir James Spaight, the chairman of the Board of Directors of the Waterford and Limerick Railway, died yesterday of influenza.

A portion of the residence of the Duke of Arinburg was destroyed by fire at Brussels, Saturday. In it was the room known as Count Egmont's Cabinet, which for 325 years has remained exactly as it was left by that unfortunate Prince at the time of his arrest and execution in 1567. This room with its invaluable contents was entirely destroyed.

A woman named Badmewski was beheaded yesterday by the Berlin executioner for having killed her husband by administering poison. She will, however, in all probability be the last criminal despatched in this manner, as the Emperor is turning his attention to methods of capital punishment. His Majesty has decided against the present barbarous system. As executions are now conducted in Germany the condemned criminal is placed upon a stool, an assistant of the executioner holds the head while the executioner uses a sword ground to razor-like sharpness and severs the head from the body. The Emperor advocates hanging.

The best medical authorities say the proper way to treat catarrh is to take a constitutional remedy, like Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Culloden Cullings.

GENTLEMEN,—In 1888 I was severely afflicted with gravel of the kidneys, from which I suffered great pain. I was recommended to try Burdock Blood Bitters, which I did, finding great relief, and after taking four bottles can truly say I am cured, and have not since been troubled. I highly recommend it.

"Like Magic,"

THE effect produced by Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Colds, Coughs, Croup, and Sore Throat are, in most cases, immediately relieved by the use of this wonderful remedy. It strengthens the vocal organs, allays irritation, and prevents the inroads of Consumption; in every stage of that dread disease, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral relieves coughing and induces refreshing rest.

"I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my family for thirty years and have always found it the best remedy for croup, to which complaint my children have been subject."—Capt. U. Carley, Brooklyn, N. Y.

"From an experience of over thirty years in the sale of proprietary medicines, I feel justified in recommending Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. One of the best recommendations of the Pectoral is the enduring quality of its popularity, it being more salable now than it was twenty-five years ago, when its great success was considered marvelous."—R. S. Drake, M. D., Beliot, Kans.

"My little sister, four years of age, was so ill from bronchitis that we had almost given up hope of her recovery. Our family physician, a skilful man and of large experience, pronounced it useless to give her any more medicine; saying that he had done all it was possible to do, and we must prepare for the worst. As a last resort, we determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and I can truly say, with the most happy results. After taking a few doses she seemed to breathe easier, and, within a week, was out of danger. We continued giving the Pectoral until satisfied she was entirely well. This has given me unbounded faith in the preparation, and I recommend it confidently to my customers."—C. O. Lepper, Druggist, Fort Wayne, Ind.

The Dancing Classes.

Professor A. Roy McDonald, senior, assisted by Mr. F. H. Normoa, started the new dancing classes last evening in the Opera House hall. There was a fair attendance of pupils which will no doubt increase as the class becomes more widely known. Speaking of Professor McDonald, the Arnprior Chronicle of last Friday says:—

"PROF. MCDONALD'S CLOSING EXERCISES AT GALETTA.—An assembly was held in Whyte's hall, Galetta, on Monday evening, January 18th, the occasion being the closing of Prof. McDonald's dancing class. The hall had been nicely decorated for the event, which had been looked forward to for some time with much interest, and the simple but pretty costumes of the ladies made a very pleasing scene as they moved through the gyrations of the various dances. The class, which had been in existence for a very short time and was composed entirely of raw material, has made most marvellous progress under the able instructor, which reflects great credit alike upon the teacher and on the pupils. The intricacies of the many waltz, bon-ton, jersey ripple, quadrilles and other fashionable dances of the day, were executed with a grace and precision that might truly be called the "poetry of motion." The floor was in splendid condition, the music excellent, and all present expressed themselves as being delighted with their evening's enjoyment. Prof. McDonald, who is a veteran in his profession, has taught the art of tripping the light fantastic toe from Quebec to Toronto and is considered one of the foremost teachers in Canada. Mr. and Mrs. McDonald were highly congratulated at the close of the class by the pupils and their parents, for the success which had attended their efforts and for their courtesy and attention, which has in no small measure contributed to their proficiency.

They Elect a Superintendent.

A special meeting of the teachers of the Charlotte Street Methodist Sunday School was held last evening for the purpose of electing a superintendent in place of Mr. O. C. Rowse, who has had to give up the position on account of ill-health. The pastor of the church took the chair. After some discussion it was decided that Rev. Geo. Edwards be elected to fill the position.

The Toboggan Slide.

The slight thaw yesterday followed by the sharp frost, had a very beneficial effect on the toboggan slide. Last night it was in excellent condition, the snow on it having packed and formed under the action of "Jack Frost" into a solid bed. There was again a good attendance of sliders and spectators, the latter enjoying the sport almost as much as the former. The sport was much appreciated last night by all who took part in it.

Foresters' Entertained.

Last night Mr. Thos. Hunter and Mr. John McIntosh, two of the newly elected members of the North Monaghan Council, entertained the members of Court Springville, C.O.F., with a number of visiting brethren, to an oyster supper in Goodfellow's Hall, Springville. Before satisfying the inner man a session of the court was held, a large number of visiting brethren from Peterborough, Mount Pleasant, Bethany and Zion, in addition to the regular members being present. About one hundred sat down to supper and at the close a social time was spent, and songs, recitations and speeches were the order of the evening. The evening's entertainment concluded with an expression of esteem and good-will by all present, to the two brethren who had so generously entertained them.

Sweet Toothed Thieves.

At a certain residence in eastern Peterborough last night their reigned high festival—a "quilting bee" was in preparation, and the festivities were to inaugurate this time-honoured medium for feminine gossip, under the guise of making bed clothes. The lady of the house, on hospitable thoughts intent, had made a gigantic brewing of taffy and set the plates containing it outside to cool. After allowing a proper time for the cooling ceremonies, the damsel went forth, but not an ounce of the glutinous and saccharine confection could be found. Some sweet toothed prowlers, seeking what they could devour, had discovered and appropriated it, taking away both the plates and the several square yards of the sugary aid to social festivity. They made good their theft, for some of the plates that had contained the taffy were found near the Edison works, about a mile from the festive scene, which was robbed of the glory of the taffy pull.

Personal.

Mr. Heap, of the Collegiate Institute, was a little better this morning.

Miss Hamilton, of Kingston, the British Whig says, is visiting Mrs. E. B. Loucks, Peterborough.

The many friends of Dr. Scott will be pleased to hear of his complete recovery from his recent illness.

The Rev. A. McWilliams is rapidly approaching convalescence, and hopes soon to be able to resume his duties.

Attention is drawn to the legal card of Mr. W. F. Johnston, barrister, etc., who has opened an office for the practice of his profession, at 372½ Water street, over the U.S. Consulate.

Salvation Army Notes.

To-day's Meetings.

This afternoon a holiness meeting was held, conducted by Colonel McKie. A good number of soldiers attended and took part.

To-night the last of the special services will be held, conducted by Colonel McKie and Staff Captain Southall. It will partake of the nature of a dedicatory as well as farewell service, there being several children to be dedicated to the Army. The service will commence at 8 p.m. previous to which which there will be an illuminated march through the principal streets. A large attendance is anticipated.

Police Court.

TUESDAY, January 26th, 1892.

The charge against a Cavan man for unlawfully and by force taking away a little girl under the age of fourteen years (a former inmate of the Barnardo Home), with intent to deprive her lawful guardians of her possessions, was withdrawn. Mr. E. B. Edwards appeared for the prosecution.

Informations had been laid by Messrs. Wm. Swinton, of Smith township, and Andrew Young, of North Monaghan, against Mr. J. J. Brealey. The charges were that he had threatened to shoot any one trying to enter Eothan Grange Hall, North Monaghan. Mr. G. M. Roger appeared for Wm. Swinton, Mr. E. B. Edwards for Andrew Young, and Mr. E. B. Stone for J. J. Brealey.

In answer to the magistrate, Mr. Stone said that Brealy was still unable to appear in court. He was confined to his bed with an attack of pleurisy and inflamation of the lungs which he said was due the beating he had received. He asked for an adjournment of the case. Mr. Roger and Mr. Edwards objected to it being put off too long. Finally the case was enlarge until Monday next, the 1st February. The Winchester rifle and cartridges which it is alleged Brealey had threatened to use were shown in court.

An Inquest Suggested.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

DEAR SIR,—I read in your local columns of the funeral of the late W. F. Johnston. Myself, and I believe a great many more of our townspeople, expected that an inquest would have been held over the remains, as I submit that sufficient mystery surrounds the death of deceased to warrant such a course. I am ignorant as to whom belongs the duty of demanding an inquest, but I hope I am not stepping beyond my limits in calling the attention of the coroner and the public generally to the case. I have heard a rumour that his death would be the means of enriching certain parties in town in the shape of insurance money, but do not vouch for the truth of this.

Yours very truly,
THOS J. BARKER.

The Gymnastic Classes.

Sergt.-Major Randle opened the gymnastic classes last night in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. There was only a moderate attendance, but the classes are expected to increase. Several exercises were carefully taught by the Sergt., including the use of dumb bells and Indian clubs. These opportunities for physical training ought not to be neglected by any member of the Association. This department is a most important adjunct to the spiritual work of the Association.

B. L. of C. E. Notes.

The Charlotte street Epworth League of Christian Endeavor held a very interesting meeting last evening, president in the chair. This being the regular monthly business reports of the different committees were read and delegates appointed to attend the convention of the Epworth Leagues of Ontario to be held next month at Toronto, Miss Barrie and Miss E Sherlock were appointed. A short programme was then rendered which consisted of a reading by Miss Daw, a duet by Misses E Stevens and E. Sherlock, and a recitation by Miss Holmes. During intermission an opportunity was given to sign the pledge and nine names were added to the roll.

The Tallest Tree this Side of the Rockies.

Smith township has entered the lists, in the big tree competition, with British Columbia. On Monday Mr. Edward Archer, of the fourth line of Smith, delivered to Mr. Wm. Donel's planing mills the last of a lot of 7,550 feet, board measure, of lumber, cut from a single tree which has been growing on Mr. Archer's farm for the past few centuries, more or less. This gigantic pine was five feet in diameter across the stump and was 180 feet in length. It was was cut into 12 feet saw logs, which were cut into lumber by Mr. W. J. Brunwell, Bridgenorth, who deserves great credit for the manner in which he did the work. In order to cut the lumber to advantage he had to quarter the logs. The timber was of excellent quality, as shown by the fact that the selling price was $24 per thousand.

OUR COUNTY COUNCIL.

Inaugural Meeting for the Year 1892.

Joseph Forster, Esq., Reeve of North Monaghan, Elected Warden—Appointment of Officers—Standing Committees.

TUESDAY, JAN. 26th.

The statutory meeting of the County Council was held at the Court House to-day, beginning at 2 o'clock.

The following members having filed their certificates of qualification and election, and subscribed to the declaration of office, took their seats.

ASPHODEL—Reeve, Jas. Moore; deputy reeve, John Fitzpatrick.
ASHBURNHAM—Reeve, John Burnham.
BELMONT & METHUEN—Reeve, A McAuley; deputy-reeve, J. L. Aanger.
BURLEIGH, ETC.—Reeve, F. Elmhirst.
DOURO—Reeve, John Moloney; deputy-reeve, Robert Allen.
DUMMER—Reeve, Jas. Robb; deputy-reeve, R. Hawthorne.
ENNISMORE—Reeve, C. O'Connor.
GALWAY—Reeve, C. Coban.
HARVEY—Reeve, R. Shaw.
LAKEFIELD—Reeve, W. H. Casement.
NORTH MONAGHAN—Reeve, Jos. Forster.
NORWOOD—Reeve, John Finlay.
SMITH—Reeve, M. Sanderson; deputy-reeve, William McIlmoyle.

Mr. Eig. Pearse, county clerk, took the chair and called for nominations for Warden.

Mr. Moloney moved, seconded by Mr. F. Elmhirst,—That Joseph Forster, reeve of the township of North Monaghan, be Warden of the county of Peterborough for the year 1892.

There were no other nominations, and Mr. Forster was unanimously elected Warden. He was conducted to his seat by his mover and seconder, and briefly thanked the members of the council for his unanimous election to the position.

STANDING COMMITTEE.

After the reading of the minutes of the last session, Mr. Moloney moved, seconded by Mr. Sanderson, that the following gentlemen be a special committee to strike the standing committees for the current year:—Messrs. Sanderson, Moloney, Casement, Moore, McAuley, Barnham and Anderson—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Barnham, seconded by Mr. Casement, that Mr. Frank Adams be appointed auditor for 1892—Carried.

The warden nominated Mr. F. J. Bell, as the other auditor.

On motion of Mr. Sanderson, seconded by Mr. Anderson, Mr. W. A. Stratton was appointed sessional clerk for the year 1892.

A communication asking a grant for the Prisoners' Aid Association was referred to the Finance Committee.

Mr. Casement moved, seconded by Mr. Barnham,—That the clerk lay on the table the minutes of the special committee appointed under by-law 647, and that in future the minutes be printed with the minutes of the council.

Mr. Casement gave notice of a motion to repeal by-law 405, and to amend the standing rules relating to the election of warden.

The council then adjourned.

Evangelistic Services.

At the service in St. Paul's last evening Mr. Meikle gave an earnest address upon the condition of the sinner. He showed from the Bible that the sinner is without Christ, without God, without hope, without excuse. He argued that such being the condition of the sinner, God's people ought to be earnest about the salvation of souls. He made a touching appeal to the unconverted to decide for Christ.

The meeting this evening will be in St. Paul's church at 7 45 o'clock.

Ennismore.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The first meeting of the municipal council was held in the town hall on Monday, Jan. 18th, 192. All the members present — Cornelius O'Connor, Esq., reeve, in the chair, Messrs. Jas. Murphy, P. J. Galvin, Michael Pardue, Jno K. Galvin, councillors. All members having subscribed the necessary declarations of office and qualification. A by-law was then passed appointing township officers for the current year:—Stephen O'Reilly, township clerk; John N. Telford, treasurer; Patrick B. Sullivan, assessor; Francis Moloney and Thos. O'Connor, auditors. Minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed. The council extended the time for the collector to return his roll until the 15th day of Feb., 1892. A bylaw was passed appointing a Board of Health as follows:—The Reeve and clerk, and Messrs. John Flood and William Geary, and Richard Cosgriffe, members.

The council then adjourned to meet again at the call of the Reeve.

The Boom in Cheese.

The cheese market on both sides of the Atlantic continues to favour the interests of holders, and it is most surprising that the demand from England keeps up, even at the recent advance, the sale of 5,000 boxes of finest Western having transpired at 11¼c., which showed a good profit. Stock in this city has been considerably reduced of late, and it is confidently expected that a good portion of what remains will bring 12c. Buyers on the other side have tried their utmost to check the steady upward trend of values, but all to no purpose, as the demand has dogged the footsteps of supply, until British buyers who refused to pay 10½c. have been compelled to place their orders at 11¼c. Some very nice profits have already been realized by Montreal firms, one of which stands to make quite a fortune. It is stated by a reliable party in the trade that the profits on cheese have ranged from 60c. to $1 per box. It is expected that buyers will find some difficulty in filling their orders during February, March and April, which would indicate a splendid wind up of the season. Still as we have before remarked, it will all depend upon the demand, which so far has been excellent; but should the altitude of present prices check consumption (of which there is no sign at present) the enquiry would of course recede. There is, however, no likelihood of the latter contingency, the general tone of the market being stronger than it has been known for years past at this season.—Trade Bulletin.

For several years I was persistently annoyed with an excessive accumulation of dandruff, and although using various preparations recommended and shampooing regularly once a week, no material relief was realized until my attention was called to Anti-Dandruff, which has produced unlooked for results in my case, four applications removing every particle of dandruff, and as a specific for this trouble it certainly has no equal.

Self Application of Electricity

FOR MEDICAL PURPOSES
BY THE DORENWEND
ELECTRIC BELT
And Attachments.

HEAD OFFICE—103 Yonge St., Toronto
THE WORLD'S BEST.

ALL diseases curable by Electricity can be treated at home by the Dorenwend Appliance. The Dorenwend is the only legitimate Electric Belt made which fulfils the requirements of Electro-medical science. It is a complete BODY BATTERY. It has an independent Battery, which generates a mild, continuous current of Electricity (without shocks) and can be regulated to suit the strongest man or the weakest child. It is a CURRENT of QUANTITY, not merely a sensation current, and the quantity current is the greatest curative. It is a successful treatment for INDIGESTION, RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, LIVER AND KIDNEY TROUBLES, WEAK BACK, SPINAL DISEASE, HEART DISEASE, NERVOUS DEBILITY, PARALYSIS, WORMS, FEMALE COMPLAINTS, IMPOTENCE, SEXUAL DECLINE and all diseases of the Nervous and Vascular Systems.

Remember that the DORENWEND BELT is the very latest invention in this line, and was invented by a consultant electrician, and ranks as the best in the world; we defy anyone to bring proof to the contrary.

Do not class this Belt with the humbug combinations of leather and metal with which the country is being flooded. If you wish to experiment with cheap articles, BUY THEM. But, if you want to procure a genuine Electric Belt and one that will be a benefit get a Dorenwend Belt.

AN ANONYMOUS LETTER

By Edgar Fawcett.

CHAPTER II.

Tallmadge Van Dyke, having watched, had drawn his inferences. Yes, he concluded, Helena was stainlessly innocent. As for Oswald Blagden, the repose and quiet self-command of that gentleman defeated his closest scrutiny. All this time Tallmadge felt himself consumed with growing and indignant hatred of Justin Worcester. It seemed to him the worst atrocity that this man, whom fate had so blessed by giving him such a wife as Helena, should hold her in such insolent disregard. There were times when he even thought bitterer things regarding him who had married the one woman of all others in the world capable of making his own days dear and sweet.

Tallmadge's hatred steadily increased. One day a fever seized him, and for a fortnight he lay very seriously ill. Helena, hearing of this illness, made efforts to see him, but his physicians forbade her presence at his bedside. There were several hours when his life almost hung by a hair. He was delirious and in his delirium often spoke of a letter that he intended to write, though to whom and with what intent his watchers failed to gather.

On a certain night, while his nurse was dozing, Tallmadge arose from his bed. He was still at times delirious, in spite of his fever having markedly abated. In the chamber next to that where he had lain was a writing desk, and this he now approached. Scarcely conscious of what he did he opened the desk and seated himself before it. Then, with a hand of perfect steadiness, he began a letter to Justin Worcester. It was a merciless missive, indeed, and written as though some cold observer of Justin's household surroundings had chosen to discuss in it his believed blindness and self-absorption. Then it went cruelly on to treat the current reports and slurs concerning Helena and Blagden. "You stand to-day," one sentence ran, "in the light of a husband who willingly turns his back upon what many another husband has shed blood for when he discovered it." And a second sentence ran thus: "You are the jest of those who proffer you their outward respect, for behind the mockery of all such lip service lies their conviction that you are either terribly fooled or terribly indulgent.

Tallmadge had finished his letter when he heard an approaching step. It was that of his hired nurse, roused from an unsuspicious nap. The sick man rose, thrusting his recent work into a compartment of the desk. As he did so a giddiness came upon him, and the nurse, shocked and dismayed, had almost to support him back to bed.

His recovery was delayed because of the effort he had used, and it was not until a fortnight later that he was sufficiently recovered to leave the house.

Weeks elapsed, however, before he came across the letter written in his semi-delirium and then he found that his memory of having composed and transcribed it was almost as vague as the airy incident of some dream. To his amazement the caligraphy did not at all resemble his own. As if by malign inspiration, he had wrought every stroke with an amazing secretive skill. Astonished, even disgusted, he was on the verge of tearing up the sheets which contained it, for the sending of an anonymous letter he had always held to be cowardly beyond words. But this extraordinary work of a brain and hand in the clutch of fever—work which normal conditions of health would never have enabled him to accomplish—affected him with a sinister fascination; and instead of destroying the curious lines he placed them under lock and key.

On his recovery, as during his illness, Helena was sympathy itself. She gave a congratulatory dinner in his honor and invited only such people as she felt sure he would wish to meet. And yet, as Tallmadge well knew, those very people had often flung her name from lip to lip, and with that heartless derision, too, which scandal so daringly employs when guilt is unproven while innocence has been doubted.

Never having liked Justin Worcester since he became the husband of his cousin, Tallmadge found this evening, a new reason for disliking him. In a conversation which these two men held over their cigars, after the ladies had gone from the dining-room, Justin struck his listener as the very essence of self-satisfied effrontery. This was not really the case; Justin only spoke with natural warmth and feeling of his own domestic happiness. When he praised the wifely duteousness of Helena, Tallmadge almost ground his teeth; but when he referred to Blagden in terms of affectionate interest, and added carelessly yet meaningly, "He's so kind about going to places with Helena and never complains, dear old fellow, any more than she does at my laziness in not going," then it seemed to Tallmadge, for a few turbid seconds, as though he must strike the speaker on his impudent lips.

That night he drank more wine than at any time since his illness, and its effect upon him was by no means mild. He went home, and unlocking a certain compartment of his desk, took from it the anonymous letter which he had written Justin Worcester. "Send it," whispered a tempting voice. The handwriting, as he now reassured himself, was marvellously disguised. Could he imitate it in the way of a superscription on an envelope? No, he soon concluded; but he could print Justin's name with pen and ink, and this he had soon done. But even after he had inclosed the letter within the envelope thus directed, he had no fixed intent of really despatching it. For a long time he sat and gazed down upon it, with both hands supporting his bowed head. Nearly all this while temptation was growing stronger in his soul. At last he rose and presently he had left the house. During the next ten minutes the letter was irrevocably posted.

On the following day, with cleared mind and moderated pulses, he became the prey of acute remorse. What had he done, he asked himself, except an act of the most unmanly baseness? And if this act bore no fruit more evil than that of his own self-contempt, would not such dark product alone be forceful enough to effect sternly his entire future life?

But the fruit which it bore was far bitterer than that. Justin Worcester was seated in his library, at work on his history, when the letter came to him. He opened it, read it through and turned white as death. Only a few minutes ago his wife had entered the room, clad in street costume. She was going to a picture show with Blagden, she said. She looked specially pretty. He shut his eyes as he recalled her appearance, and the image came to him with a new and frightful irony investing it. The side-light from a near window had struck her hair in this way, bringing from it certain peculiar hazel glimmers that he loved. She had worn gloves of a special tawny tint; he could see those gloves now; the kid was of that undressed sort he had always liked; and she had a cluster of violets at her bosom. He smelt those violets amid his torture. "I'm going with Oswald," she had said. How the echoes of her voice pierced his brain. "We shall be back for luncheon, of course," she had pursued, in her sweet voice, full of its dear characteristic chimes and accords.

He rose, staggering. He had never been a man of much moral or mental strength. His possessed intellect, it is true, but slight virile power went with it. The surge of conviction that now swept through his soul made him feel that he stood on the verge of madness. His memory darted through a hundred past incidents recent or more remote. Some men would have been agonized by murderous longings. He was not—he scarcely thought of Blagden. It was of her he thought, of her whom he had almost deified in his allegiance, his confidence, his worship. Some weak people are strangely unselfish, and he was one of them. A horrible sense of culpability beset him. If it were true, cried his conscience, then he was to blame for it even more than she. Yes, he had neglected her, he had been fatally heedless, miserably self-absorbed.

But was it true? Well, he would find out, he would learn from others if the world were really making sport of him like this.

Quitting the house, he visited in succession three persons whom he believed to be his friends. Two were men, one was a woman. The men both quailed and drooped their eyes before his drastic and arraigning questions. The woman (who had always cared for him more than in his perfect fidelity to Helena had ever guessed) told him just what the world believed and just what it asserted. He left her, and then, with quivering nerves and a mind grown drunk from his new and abrupt anguish, he let himself drift, as one more victim of its grim greed, into that black tide of human tragedy whose sullen course is forever flowing through our landscape of life. At a certain shop he made a certain purchase. Then he went to an obscure hotel and hired a room there. For an hour he sat writing to Helena, and when his letter was finished he inclosed within it the other (anonymous) letter which had dealt him such matchless woe. Putting both communications into an envelope he directed them to his wife. After that he shot himself through the heart, and when the people in the hotel discovered his insane deed he had been dead quite a long time.

The effect of his death upon Helena was temporarily to unseat her reason. For several days those who attended her felt that she must either soon rally from dementia or else be taken to an asylum. Then a change for the better came, followed by a long bodily prostration that threatened her life.

All this time she had not seen Oswald Blagden. Since the death of her husband he had ceased to live in the same house with herself. When they met, their place of meeting was here because Helena had sent for him. She looked excessively pale and still showed marked signs of physical weakness. His personal appearance had also greatly changed; his locks and beard were much grayer, and his face was both haggard and lined.

"We must not speak very long together," she soon said to him. "The doctors forbid it."

"A short time," he said, in reverent undertone, "is so much better than not at all."

"I—I wanted to ask you a question," she recommenced.

"Me! What question?"

"This: when poor Justin and I and you were being babbled about by the busybodies and gossips of the world, did you know that we were the object of slander?"

Placid though her look was, it somehow made him recoil. "If," he faltered. "Why, yes. I had heard that foolish folk were talking, don't you know? I couldn't help being aware"——

"You should not have gone on as you did, then," she broke in, with reproof equally dominant in her gaze and tone. "You did wrong not to tell me—not to tell him. You were our friend. We trusted you."

"Ah," with a sudden impetus he exclaimed, "if I had spoken it would have sealed my own doom. You and Justin would have forced me to live elsewhere. The price was too costly a one; I could not, would not pay it, Helena, for I loved you, I love you still, with an undying passion! I"——

"Hush," she said, and in her voice the note of reproof continued, yet a great and vetoing command went with it. "What you tell me is the confession of a dark treachery. You admit that you knew of those horrible censures, unfounded as they were, yet you never spoke. Ah, it is almost as dark a treachery," she went on, "as that of the unknown writer of the loathsome anonymous letter which killed my poor, foolish Justin!" She surveyed him now with a scorn which pierced him all the more because such utter grief was its accompaniment. "You never spoke," she repeated, and then, with a few steps that were so insecure as to make him dart towards her in fear of her falling, she turned and sought the door by which she had entered the room. Just as he reached her she seemed to grow steadier and more controlled of mien. "Helena," he cried, "We shall meet again. You don't mean that you dismiss me from you forever."

A Pleasant Herb Drink.

The best cure we know of for constipation and headache is the pleasant herb drink called Lane's Family Medicine. It is said to be Oregon grape root, combined with simple herbs, and is made for use by pouring boiling water onto the dried roots and herbs. It is remarkably efficacious in all blood disorders, and is now the sovereign remedy for ladies in clearing up the complexion. Druggists sell the packages at 50c and $1 dw

INTENSE SUFFERING!

Mr. William Buchanan, 24 years engineer in the Cunard Steamship Company's service, 8 St. John's Road, Kirkdale, Liverpool, Eng., writes: "I suffered two years of agony from an affection in the head which six physicians pronounced incurable.

They were divided in opinion as to whether it was acute neuralgia of the head or rheumatic affection of the brain, but all agreed that I could never recover. In my paroxysms of pain it needed two and sometimes three men to hold me down in bed. When at death's door, was applied to my head. It acted like magic. It saved my life. I am well and hearty, and have had no return of the trouble."

ST. JACOBS OIL

SUN LIFE

ASSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA.

The attention of our Policy-Holders is directed to the following summary of the leading items of the present report, which speaks for itself as to the progress and prosperity of the Company:—

Life Assurances in force, 1st January, 1891	$16,759,255.92
Increase over previous year	3,421,273.84
New Applications received in 1890	6,371,529.15
Increase over 1889	2,268,888.60
Cash income for year ending 31st December, 1890	889,079.87
Increase over 1889	225,923.25
Assets at 31st December, 1890	2,473,514.19
Increase over 1889	667,691.47
Reserve for Security for Policy-Holders	2,109,223.63
Increase over 1889	567,732.71
Surplus over all Liabilities and Capital Stock	232,175.69
Increase over 1889	75,649.05
Death claims fallen in during 1890	143,961.65

The progress made by the SUN LIFE during 1890 was remarkable. The new business was the largest in the Company's history, and was equalled by but one other Canadian Life Company. The income for the year exceeds $2,000 for each day in the year, Sundays included. The Assets are large and rapidly increasing. They are, moreover, of the highest character, yielding an average interest of 6.04 per cent. The overdue interest is small, and the Real Estate owned under foreclosure is only four per cent. of the amount of mortgages. This is a remarkable showing. The SURPLUS accumulated during the FOUR years of the current quinquennium is nearly THREE TIMES as much as the amount earned during any previous FIVE years, and the profits to Policy-holders cannot fail then to be highly satisfactory. The following are the figures:—

Net Surplus, 31st Dec., 1881, (five years)	$64,224 07
" " " 1886,	92,452 97
" " " 1890, (four years)	232,175 69

"German Syrup"

G. Gloger, Druggist, Watertown, Wis. This is the opinion of a man who keeps a drug store, sells all medicines, comes in direct contact with the patients and their families, and knows better than anyone else how remedies sell, and what true merit they have. He hears of all the failures and successes, and can therefore judge: "I know of no medicine for Coughs, Sore Throat, or Hoarseness that had done such effective work in my family as Boschee's German Syrup. Last winter a lady called at my store, who was suffering from a very severe cold. She could hardly talk, and I told her about German Syrup and that a few doses would give relief; but she had no confidence in patent medicines. I told her to take a bottle, and if the results were not satisfactory I would make no charge for it. A few days after she called and paid for it, saying that she would never be without it in future as a few doses had given her relief." ①

ARMY WORK IN ALL LANDS

Colonel McKie Gives an Interesting Account

Of the Work in the Colonies and Other Lands He has Visited—Magnitude of the Army's Operations—Its Wonderful Progress—Work Under the Southern Skies—Canadians and Australians Contrasted—The Canadian people are too Cold.

Colonel McKie gave his promised and looked-forward-to address on his work in the various colonies last night in the Salvation Army barracks, the place being well filled.

WHY HE CAME HERE.

After the usual devotional exercises the Colonel explained briefly the object of his visit to Canada. He was here, as he had been in the other countries, as the representative of General Booth. He, in this capacity, has to report the state of the various corps he visits. He then gave some statistics regarding the number of the corps and officers and the circulation of the various publications of the Army. He also referred to the magnitude of the operations of the Army, and said it had an annual income of $5,000,000. General Booth held in trust for it an equal amount of property. Last year no less that 240,000 persons sought shelter in the various sheltering homes, where bed and breakfast are provided for six cents. Meetings had been held in connection with this movement attended by 200,000 people, 4,000 of whom were the very worst type of man. A large number of these were provided with permanent employment. Sixteen hundred and fifty four women had forsaken lives of shame and entered the rescue homes, 65 per cent. of whom

HAD BEEN GENUINELY CONVERTED.

Speaking of the department for finding lost friends, he said 2 300 had made enquiries for missing friends or relatives, of whom 605 had been restored to those enquiring. Five hundred thousand people had been visited, and 10,000 sick people had been nursed and cared for. It was about eighteen months since he and Staff-Capt. Plant had received orders from the general to take the tour around the world. The first thing they did after receiving their marching orders was to take leave of their friends in the Old Country. This was a touching scene, and was beautifully spoken of by the colonel. The first place they touched was South Africa. Here the speaker gave a capital description of the country and climate, the latter being, he said, the best in the world for people who had any chest disease. Reference was also made to the harsh treatment of the natives by whites.

IN SOME OF THE CHURCHES

a division was made, the white people sitting on one side and the black on the other. In some, however, they were not allowed at all. This was not the Salvation Army's way of working. They believed and taught that a man was a man no matter what may be his colour.

The Kimberley diamond fields were next touched upon, a capital description of them being given by the Colonel. A most remarkable instance of conversion was related in this connection that visibly affected a large portion of the audience. It was the case of a woman who had been ruined at the age of 16 in England. She arrived in Capetown without any friends. After the death of her child she plunged deeper into sin and drove a stage coach for six weeks as a man. She became converted through the agency of the army, and became a helpful worker in the Rescue Home work.

A MUCH MARRIED MAN.

They had met a chief in Zululand who had no less than thirty wives. Although the great aim of these chiefs is to get as many wives as possible, yet the code of morals was very strict. The speaker particularized the work in the various colonies. They found they had travelled ten thousand miles in South Africa, and found the work in a very good and prosperous condition.

Australia was next treated. Commissioner Coombs was the officer in charge and the work in that country was flourishing. In five and a half months 32,000 souls had sought Christ. A brief reference was made to New Zealand, where it was said of the population that 1 in 30 attended the Salvation Army meetings and one in 25 take the War Cry. In ten weeks 1,100 souls professed conversion. Australia had subscribed $5,000 to the Prison Gate Homes.

An account was here given of General Booth's travels and his future movements were briefly outlined.

THEY VISIT SAN FRANCISCO.

He concluded an eloquent and touching address by giving an account of San Francisco, which place he had visited. It had a population of 300,000 and had no less than 5,000 saloons or one for every 60 people. These were open all through the year, seven days a week, some of them night and day. There were only one hundred churches in the city, and these had an average seating accommodation of five hundred. The Salvation Army had been working in that city for nine years, but for the first eight years, very little was done, owing to the great disadvantages they laboured under. Since having a building of their own however, no less than three hundred souls had found salvation.

The need for a rescue home in the city had been agitated and through the public press $8 000 had been subscribed for the work and site given for the building.

HIS OPINION OF CANADIANS.

He compared the treatment received by strangers in Africa and Australia with that received in Canada. He thought that the Canadians were too cold. They wished strangers to stand by and prove themselves before being welcomed. This was a great hindrance to spiritual work. However, the worst wish he had for every Canadian was that they might all meet at the throne of God.

Staff Captain Southall gave the word as the colonel took his seat to the soldiers to fire a "volley," which they did with vim and energy. The colonel had spoken for one and a half hours keeping the attention of his audience all through. The meeting then closed with prayer.

HENNIKER HEATON'S PLEA FOR PENNY POSTAGE.

Horrible Crime of a German and His Wife—A Woman Attacked By a Baboon Recovers Damages — Florence Nightingale at the Point of Death.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—Henniker Heaton, M.P., the postal reformer, with two friends—an Australian millionaire and an English capitalist—has offered to guarantee the British Government against all loss if a penny postage be established between the English speaking peoples of the British Empire and the United States of America. The probable loss was estimated by Mr. Goschen himself at £75,000 per annum, but Mr. Heaton maintains that the loss would not extend over more than three years, and that after that ocean penny postage would make a profit, as has been the case with the inland penny postage. Mr. Goschen has just communicated his reply to Mr. Heaton's offer, in which he says that for a variety of reasons the Government cannot see its way to accept the offer. Mr. Heaton will bring the matter before Parliament in a very short time.

They Murdered Eight Servant Girls for Their Paltry Savings.

VIENNA, Jan. 26.—The trial opened yesterday of Frank Schneider and his wife, Rosalie Schneider, on the charge of murdering and robbing eight servant girls. Schneider was also charged with violating, in two instances, the girls.

Schneider pleaded guilty to violation in two instances and to murder in one instance and threw the guilt of the other murders on his wife, who, he said, decoyed the girls to their fate on the pretence of employing them. There was an exciting scene in the court-room during the proceedings, due to a violent exchange of accusations between the prisoners.

LONDON'S LATEST CRAZE.

Royalty Stamps Eucalyptus Oil As Influenza's Antidote.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—When this great city gets a tight hold of any good fad it runs it to death.

The latest craze is for eucalyptus oil as a cure for influenza. Druggists have been overwhelmed with orders and it has trebled in price. Three weeks ago any druggist would have been glad to sell you an ounce bottle for 25 cents. To-day he considers he is doing you a favor if he sells you the same quantity for 75 cents.

During the royal funeral at St. George's Chapel, Windsor, several women carried eucalyptus oil in silver-mounted vinaigrettes and sprinkled it freely on their handkerchiefs and on the overcoats of their male escorts. It made the nave of the chapel smell like a painter's shop.

In the railway trains, omnibuses, railway stations, and even in the streets, it is the same story. People almost soak themselves in this odoriferous fluid. Women, in the Strand tea shops, put three drops on a lump of sugar to suck. Confectioners make eucalyptus lozenges, which can be bought everywhere—in barber shops and at cigar stands.

Diluted eucalyptus is disseminated through spray bottles. Clerks in the offices sprinkle their blotting-pads with it. Hansom cabs are redolent with it. It is impossible to escape its all-pervading odor.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—The popular demand for an official inquiry into the nature and causes of influenza will probably be complied with and a Royal Commission will be appointed to investigate.

Miss Florence Nightingale is the latest victim of the prevailing disease. Her recovery is very doubtful, as she is now 72 years old. She has been an invalid for a long time. Miss Nightingale sees no one save intimate friends. She lives alone, with only a faithful maid to care for her.

She Sues Its Owner and Recovers $10 Damages.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—At Bow County Court, before Judge Prentice and a jury, John Eaton, a "dealer in novelties," of 41 Selsey-street, Limehouse, was sued by Mrs. Mary Edwards, who lives in the same street, and who sought to recover £25 on account of personal injuries inflicted by a baboon. On Oct. 15, plaintiff said she was in her back garden, when a large baboon, which had broken loose from defendant's yard, sprang upon her. The animal gnawed her head, and bit and scratched her arms, hands and back. She was under medical treatment five weeks, and was still deaf from the effects of the injuries. The same monkey had, it was said, on different occasions attacked other women, and one of them deposed that it sprang upon her in her back yard in Whitechapel in May last. The jury found for the plaintiff giving £10 damages.

Mrs. Foster Seriously Ill.

OTTAWA, Jan. 26.—Mrs. Foster, wife of the Minister of Finance, is dangerously ill. She was prostrated several days ago with la grippe, which has been aggravated by heart failure. In consequence, Hon. Mr. Foster will not keep his Kingston engagement.

Destructive Fire at Tweed.

TWEED, Ont., Jan. 26.—Shortly after 8 o'clock yesterday fire was discovered in the sawmill belonging to Mr. George Easterbrook. Flames spread rapidly and in a few minutes the fine roller flour mill and large grain elevator belonging to the same party were in flames, and in a short time the whole was in ashes. The loss is estimated at from $50,000 to $75,000.

THE NEW CABINET.

MR. J. C. PATTERSON APPOINTED SECRETARY OF STATE.

Hon. MacKenzie Bowell Takes Over Control of the Department of Militia—Hon. Mr. Chapleau Will Assume the Portfolio of Customs on His Return from Florida—Mr. Haggart and the Department of Railways and Canals.

OTTAWA, Jan. 26.—At a meeting of the Dominion Cabinet this morning the work of reconstruction was practically completed as follows:

Premier and President of Council—Hon. J. J. C. Abbott (senator).
Minister of Public Works—Hon. J. A. Ouimet (Laval, Que.)
Minister of Railways—Hon. John G. Haggart (Lanark, Ont.)
Minister of Militia—Hon. M. Bowell (North Hastings, Ont.)
Secretary of State—Hon. J. C. Patterson (without seat).
Minister of Agriculture—Hon. John Carling (senator).
Minister of Inland Revenue—Hon. John Costigan (Victoria, N.B.)
Minister of Customs—Hon. J. A. Chapleau (Terrebonne, Que.)
Postmaster-General—Vacant.
Minister of the Interior—Hon. Edgar Dewdney (East Assiniboia).
Minister of Finance—Hon. George E. Foster (King's, N.B.)
Minister of Marine and Fisheries—Hon. Charles H. Tupper (Pictou, N.S.)
Minister of Justice—Sir John Thompson (Antigonish, N.S.)
Without Portfolio—Hon. Frank Smith.

The above is the Dominion Federal Cabinet as now reconstructed and as it will meet Parliament next month, with perhaps some uncertainty as regards the disposition of Sir Adolphe Caron, who resigned the Ministry of Militia and Defence and has not yet been announced as taking another portfolio.

The ministry as thus reconstructed is apportioned territorially as follows:

ONTARIO—Mackenzie Bowell (Militia).
John Carling (Agriculture).
John Haggart (Railways).
J. C. Patterson (Secretary of State).
Frank Smith (Without Portfolio).
QUEBEC—J. J. C. Abbott (Premier).
J. A. Chapleau (Customs).
J. A. Ouimet (Public Works).
(?) Sir A. Caron.
NEW BRUNSWICK—John Costigan (Inland Rev.).
George Foster (Finance).
NOVA SCOTIA—Sir John Thompson (Justice).
Charles H. Tupper (Fisheries).
NORTH WEST TER.—E. Dewdney (Interior).

As to the two Houses the Cabinet is thus divided:

Senate: Messrs. Abbott (Quebec), Carling (Ontario), Smith (Ontario).

House of Commons: Messrs. Bowell, Haggart, Chapleau, Ouimet, Caron, Costigan, Foster, Thompson, Dewdney.

Ontario's New Minister.

James Colebrooke Patterson was born at Armagh, Ireland, and has a strong infusion of the wit and love of fun of his countrymen. His father was a clergyman. The new minister is a barrister by profession. He began his public career as reeve of Windsor. From there he moved to the Ontario Assembly as representative of North Essex. He resigned that position to contest the constituency for the Federal Parliament in the general elections of 1878. He was successful and repeated his triumphs at the general elections of 1882 and 1887. At last general election he was defeated.

Mr. Chapleau's New Office.

The advent of a French-Canadian Minister to the Department of Customs will be a revolution in itself. That department has been so long under an English Minister that French-Canadians are as rare in the inside service as icicles in July. It is only within the past year or two that any Quebecer found a lodgment there. Now this will probably change, as the Ottawa departments have a tendency to grow like the minister. The Departments of Public Works and Militia and that of Secretary of State, which have been so long presided over by French ministers, are to a large extent French. Mr. Chapleau will be able to make a good beginning, for the retirement of Commissioner Johnson and the promotion of Mr. Parmalee will leave a $2400 a year vacancy for Mr. Chapleau to fill.

Mr. Chapleau leaves at once on a four weeks' trip to Bermuda and the West Indies, returning in the first week of the session. During his absence Col. Bowell will administer the Customs Department.

London Conservatives Have Not As Yet Selected a Candidate.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—The Conservative convention, which was to have been held last night for the purpose of nominating a candidate to oppose Mr. Hyman for the Commons, has been postponed indefinitely.

It is rumored that the older members proposed to bring forward the Hon. John Carling, but the younger members objected and threatened to bring out another candidate. It is believed that W. R. Meredith is likely to be the choice of the party.

Political Gossip.

James Johnston, Commissioner of Customs, Ottawa, has been superannuated and will be succeeded by W. C. Parmalee, the assistant commissioner.

Five elections take place this week: Victoria, N.S., yesterday; Lincoln, Kingston and Halton on Thursday and Cumberland on Saturday.

Hon. John Carling is addressing meetings in East Bruce and East Middlesex, and will be assisted by Dr. Montague, M.P., after the termination of the Lincoln contest.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

Eugenie Mourns Her Son.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—While all Britain was mourning for the Duke of Clarence a service was celebrated in the Memorial Chapel at Farnborough for the late Prince Imperial of France. The altar in the chapel which the ex-Empress Eugenie has erected to the memory of her husband and her only son is decorated with the richest of the robes and laces once worn by the woman who was universally admitted to be the most beautiful of the royal ladies of Europe.

Among them are the silk of the gown which was worn by her on the occasion of her first meeting with Napoleon III., that of her wedding dress, and the dress she wore at the signing of the marriage contract, as well as rich silks given to her by the Sultan of Turkey, and some delicate lace which was presented to her by the Emperor.

"WHY, THE IDEA!"

Springfield Misses Decline to Appear in Ballet Costume Even for Charity.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Jan. 26.—A spectacular presentation of "Ben Hur" was proposed recently to raise funds for the Children's Aid Society of this city. A dozen young girls of the first families of Springfield volunteered to take part and set about making their costumes.

The first dress rehearsal was called the other afternoon, and the girls showed their costumes to the manager, a Boston man. He did not applaud their efforts, but hauled out of a trunk a lot of gauzy creations of the costumer's skill and announced that they were the proper thing. Blushingly the maidens retired to their dressing rooms and donned the prescribed costumes. As they gazed on themselves in their new costumes they blushed still more. The costumes were lacking not in quality, but in quantity. As one piquant miss expressed it, her garment was a cross between a full dress costume and a bathing suit.

They waited immediately upon the director and announced their determination not to appear in such abbreviated garments. "Why, the idea!" was all the young ladies could exclaim for some time, and then in their indignation they declined to appear in the show.

County Council Chamber, Peterborough, January 27th. }

The report was adopted.

THE JAIL AS A HOUSE OF REFUGE.

An application from the matron of the jail asking for an increase of salary was read.

A brief discussion on the application showed that there were confined in jail six children, the oldest only nine years of age. Mr. Dumble, the police magistrate, was present, and pointed out the evil of bringing up children (who were guilty of no crime but poverty) in jail, in contact with degrading and debasing influences. He suggested that these children should be sent to some suitable charitable institution.

Several members stated that it was an abuse of the law for municipalities to send the poor, they should maintain, to the county jail.

The police magistrate cited an instance of where a poor man was brought to his notice, who was too ill to be moved from a vehicle to the court and he, the magistrate was compelled to hold a court under Cavanagh's shed, and committed the man to jail as a vagrant, and he died in three weeks. He was very emphatic in saying that the jail was an improper place to send such persons.

Mr. BURNHAM—In the meantime how long are those children to remain in jail without instruction?

The application was referred to the Finance Committee.

The council adjourned.

Police Court.

WEDNESDAY, January 27th, 1892.

Wm. Evans who was just discharged from jail was provided with a ticket for Halifax.

A Cavan man was arraigned for drunkenness. He was allowed to go on promising to get back to Cavan as soon as possible and to keep sober.

A vagrant who had just been discharged from Central prison was given a ticket for three months board at Castle Nesbitt. The condition of hard labour was attached therewith.

PREVENTIVE.—One teaspoonful of Indigenous Bitters, in three quarts of cold water left standing a few hours makes a very agreeable beverage and may prevent much sickness by its salutary effect on the stomach.

BRITISH AND FOREIGN.

THE VIENNA FIEND'S BLOOD-CURLING CONFESSION.

Spurgeon is Now Believed to be Dying and May Pass Away at any Moment—The Sultan's Narrow Escape From Death.

VIENNA, Jan. 27.—The trial of Frank Schneider and his wife for the murder of eight servant girls was resumed here to-day. The prosecution succeeded in getting Schneider to confess that he murdered all the victims after outraging them.

Schneider volunteered to tell how the murders were committed and dramatically went through the blood-curdling performances. He showed how he used to seize the struggling victims by the breast with his left hand and with his powerful right hand clutch them by the throat and thus strangle the poor creatures.

In concluding his confession Schneider said that he had not killed the first woman he had outraged and robbed, because he had not at that time had the practice in the method of strangling which he afterwards acquired. The case has created a great sensation here.

Spurgeon Dying.

LONDON, Jan. 27.—The Rev. Mr. Spurgeon, who it was announced yesterday was suffering from an attack of gout in the head and hand, has become worse, and this evening it is announced that he is in a critical condition.

The Sultan's Narrow Escape.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 27.—During a banquet and concert in the Sultan's Palace to-day in honor of Prince Charles of Hohenzollern a heavy screen was overturned and would have fallen upon the Sultan had not Prince Charles sprung forward and prevented it. The Sultan gratefully thanked Prince Charles for this act and conferred upon him the Turkish life-saving medal and the Grand Cordon of the Order of Osmanieh.

Trade With China.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Jan. 27.—Vice-President Shaughnessy of the Canadian Pacific Railway, who has been visiting the leading trade centres of China and Japan, arrived here yesterday on the Empress of Japan, which vessel made another remarkably quick passage.

Mr. Shaughnessy states that the possibilities of trade between Canada and China and Japan, with a combined population of over four hundred millions of human beings, is simply a wonder which baffles the ordinary conception. He states that if properly watched and judiciously handled an enormous trade is certain to spring up for Canadian millers and manufacturers in flour, cotton and woolen goods, boots and shoes, provisions, fresh, canned and preserved fruit and manufactured goods.

The Chinese and Japanese are just beginning to use these staples, and Canada is preferred to the United States in China, in consequence of the manner in which the Chinese are legislated against by the United States. The goods from this country are certain to become a favorite with the surging millions of human souls in the Celestial and Flowery Kingdom. The market for Northwest and interior of British Columbia flour will become not only a steady but practically an illimitable one. Mr. Shaughnessy stationed Mr. Callaway, who went out with him, at Hong Kong, where it has been decided upon that the Canadian Pacific will establish a special office under the latter.

Another Destructive Fire at Meaford.

MEAFORD, Jan. 27.—About 9 30 last night fire was discovered in R. C. Wilcox's shoe store, known as Andrews' Block. There being a strong gale of wind from the north the fire quickly spread from one store to another, when the entire block, comprising the City Hotel, occupied by Mr. Reynolds, a grocery store and baker shop, occupied by C. Meyer, also the telegraph office, Robinson & Johnson's loan office, Miss White's millinery store were entirely destroyed. Loss about $15,000; insurance on block $7000, on Reynolds' furniture and contents $2500, Meyers $700 on contents.

Arrested At His Father's Funeral.

HAMILTON, Jan. 27.—A rather sensational affair occurred at Alberton, in this county, yesterday. F. J. Boyd, a wealthy resident, was gored by a bull some weeks ago, and from the effects he died. Mr. Boyd's son John, who since 1888 has been in Manitoba, came here to attend the funeral, and was met with a capias order for his arrest. The order was secured at the instance of Alberta Jane Van Tokle, who has entered action against John Boyd for breach of promise and seduction in 1888.

Escaped at the Jail Door.

BELLEVILLE, Jan. 27.—Thomas Geary, who was committed at Tweed for burglary, made his escape from Constables Healy and Wilson of Tweed after the vehicle in which he was brought to town had arrived in front of the jail. When one of the constables got out of the cutter Geary, who had got rid of the handcuffs, jumped out on the other side of it and made his escape.

Shocking Accident to a Young Farmer Near Seaforth.

SEAFORTH, Jan. 27.—On the Ireland farm, near Seaforth, yesterday, John, son of Gordon McAdam, while engaged in working under the fire box of an engine, accidentally turned a steam tap and was fearfully scalded by escape of steam before he could be extricated.

Died en Route to the Hospital.

KINGSTON, Jan. 27.—An old man, name unknown, who boarded the Grand Trunk day express at Trenton yesterday bound for a hospital at Brockville, died before reaching Kingston.

Medical Student's Death.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 27.—A. A. Ogilvie died yesterday. His parents reside at Hull, Que Deceased was a medical student and was going through a brilliant course.

Northwest Legislature.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 27.—Governor Royal prorogued the Northwest Legislature yesterday afternoon.

The session was important, for a fierce attack was made by Mr. Prince, member for St. Albert, on Mr. Haultain's school bill. The clause especially objected to was one providing for one system of inspectors for all schools. He moved an amendment that separate inspectors be appointed for Protestant and Catholic schools.

Mr. Haultain in replying contended that if the executive was to be responsible for the payment of inspectors they should have absolute control of their appointment.

The amendment was defeated on a vote of 10 to 5.

THE CRUEL WAR IS OVER.

CHILI'S APOLOGY CONSIDERED FULL AND AMPLE.

The United States Cabinet and Foreign Committee Considering Affairs—In View of the Disparity Between the Forces of the Two Powers Chili is Willing to Sacrifice Any Dignity She May Possess.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—The latest mails from Chili bring the news of a terrible invasion of locusts from the Argentine republic. Advices from Valdivi received at Santiago state according to reports just received, the locusts are marching southward without abandoning the line of Cordillera or approaching the centre where there are important crops. The damage already done to the crops at Porcon and Villarica can only be remedied by charity, as in a few months hence there will be a scarcity of food.

A telegram from Villarica says: "The swarm of locusts passing into Chili rapidly increases. All the tract from Ioning to Porcon, 40 leagues, is covered with locusts. No remedy is known. The only hope is that they may fall into water. Here they have destroyed all kinds of crops and grass."

In the House.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—The session of the House to-day was devoted to consideration of a resolution, introduced by Mr. Breckenridge of Kentucky, calling upon the President for additional information concerning the Chilian correspondence, which after remarks in opposition thereto by several members was referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Meetings of Committees and the Cabinet.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—At the request of members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee a special meeting was called to-day for the purpose of considering the President's message in the Chilian controversy and the accompanying correspondence. The members of the committee spent some time in the consideration of it. There was an informal discussion of a very general character, but no conclusion was reached, partly because of the latest phase given the case by the Associated Press despatch from Santiago announcing a substantial compliance by Chili with the request of the President, and partly because of the necessity of a careful examination of the correspondence.

The Senate Committee on Foreign Relations had a short session this morning, but the meeting was merely of an informal character and was devoted to a brief exchange of opinions among the senators regarding the President's message and accompanying correspondence on the Chilian affair. No action was taken.

The Cabinet met promptly at 11 o'clock to-day and devoted nearly the entire session to a discussion of the Chilian controversy. All the members were present except Secretary Elkins and Secretary Foster.

Discussing the Apology.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—The Government to-day received a long message from Minister Egan, conveying an offer on the part of the Chilian Government for the settlement of all existing difficulties with the United States. This despatch confirms in every particular the statements made in the Associated Press despatch received from Santiago last evening, which was in effect that Chili had agreed to withdraw the offensive note sent by Senor Matta, to withdraw its request for the recall of Minister Egan and to submit the Baltimore affair to the arbitration of some neutral nation, or to submit the matter to the decision of the United States Supreme Court.

Mr. Egan states these proposition at greater length than the press despatch, but the exact additions cannot now be ascertained. There is reason to believe however, that the Chilian Government not only offers to withdraw the offence note, but in addition offers to apologize for it. It also agrees to the position taken by the United States in regard to the right of asylum and the safe conduct of refugees.

Mr. Egan's dispatch was submitted to the cabinet at its meeting to-day. The entire question was discussed and it is understood that a difference of opinion was developed as to the propriety of accepting the offer without modification so far as it related to the submission of Chili's liability for the attack on the sailors of the Baltimore to the arbitration of a neutral nation or the decision of the Supreme Court. Without reaching a decision the meeting adjourned.

The President will doubtless communicate Mr. Egan's despatch to Congress, but will probably not do so for several days unless it is called for by the House.

To Remain at Callao.

The Secretary of the Navy this afternoon sent a cable message to Commander Evans of the Yorktown, now at Callao, authorizing him to give his crew shore leave as requested in his message of yesterday. This in itself shows that the vessel will remain at Callao for at least two or three days if that fact were not already established by the necessity of coaling. It was said at the Navy Department this afternoon that it had not been decided whether the Yorktown or the Boston or both should return to Valparaiso. The impression is general among naval officers, however, that the Yorktown will be selected for that service and that she will be the only American vessel sent there for the present unless some unlooked-for incident should require the immediate presence of others.

Have Dined on Locks.

SANTIAGO, Jan. 26.—It is confidently affirmed that the Chilian Foreign Minister, in accordance with a decision arrived at by President Montt and the Cabinet, and after consulting with the Council of State, has replied to the American ultimatum in terms which will satisfy the President and Government of America. In view of the disparity between the forces of the two powers it would seem that Chili had no other resource left than to make the sacrifices of dignity necessary to satisfy the more powerful nation.

Chili's reply, it is expected, will be as conciliatory as possible. It will probably refer any differences mentioned in the note Mr. Egan delivered on Saturday, which the ministers themselves failed to settle, to the arbitration of the United States Supreme Court. But for the appearance of American cruisers coming from the Atlantic this sudden recrudescence of the difficulty might be considered only as one of the many phrases through which this strange crisis has been passing for months according to the exigencies of American home politics. The impending arrival of an American squadron at Valparaiso, however, imports an element of danger.

A Big Blaze at Tweed.

Two Mills and an Elevator go up in Smoke—The Loss to the Proprietors will not be Less than $40 000 on which there was Only $13,000 Insurance—Cause of Fire Unknown.

Between eight and nine o'clock Monday night a disastrous fire broke out in Tweed, which resulted in great loss to property. It was between these hours when smoke was seen issuing from between George Easterbrook's saw and grist mills which stood close together near the river. Before the alarm could be given the two buildings were in flames. They soon spread to the elevator and engine house and in a few hours all four buildings were completely destroyed. There were 20 000 bushels of grain in the elevator, and some effort was made to save the contents of the buildings, but the rapidity with which the flames spread prevented any effective progress. In the grist mill was a large quantity of flour, while the saw mill was full of dressed and undressed lumber. The cause of the fire is unknown, but a special to the Ontario states that the general impression is that it was the work of an incendiary. The loss will be between $40,000 and $50 000. The buildings were insured for $13,000 in the following companies:—Royal Caledonia, Northern and Western. It could not be learned what insurance there was on the grain and other contents. The property was jointly owned by George Easterbrook, his son John, and his brother William Easterbrook. Many employees are thrown out of work, and the loss of the mills will seriously cripple the industrial interests of the village.
